MOORE-HALL,

THE Eſtate of the late William Moore, eſquire, ſituate upon the river Schuylkill, in the townſhip of Charles-Town, in the county of Cheſter, diſtant 23 miles from this city.

The Eſtate conſiſts of upwards of 600 acres of moſt excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Manſion Houſe is ſpacious, convenient and airy; it is ſituated upon a high and healthy ſpot, and commands a moſt delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Griſt-Mill on the premiſes, near the Manſion Houſe, on a never-failing ſtream, called Pickering, running through the eſtate, and watering a great body of meadow; this ſtream empties itſelf into the Schuylkill, in front of the houſe; it formerly ſupplied water for a ſaw mill, which might with much eaſe and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Eſtate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any perſon inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premiſes before the day of ſale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, eſquire, in Arch-ſtreet, or PETER MILLER, eſquire, in Third ſtreet. Sept 17 eptf

There is on each farm a good brick houſe, with barn, ſtables, &c. a large orchard ſtocked with the beſt fruit, and a large garden paled in. The ſituation is high and healthy, the ſoil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to ſeveral merchant mills, where there is a conſtant market for all kinds of grain.

MR. SICARD, pupil of the celebrated monſ. Veſtres, preſents his compliments to his former employers and the public in general, and begs leave to inform them that his Dancing School will be opened on the firſt day of October, at the Long Room in White Horſe alley, near Cheſnut ſtreet. The hours of attendance for young ladies will be from 10 till 1 o'clock every Monday, Wedneſday and Friday —and for young gentlemen from 6 till 9 o'clock in the evening of the ſame days.

He will devote one day in every two weeks to inſtruct the pupils of his dancing ſchool, and of the boarding ſchools, where he attends gratis, in the polite accompliſhments of the genteel graces and manners, on the plan that he conducted the ſame at Paris, in conjunction with the celebrated monſieur Gaudelle.

Mr. Sicard propoſes attending private families, boarding ſchools, and academies, one day in every week, if required, for the purpoſe of inſtructing young ladies and gentlemen in this important part of a polite education, viz. How to come into the preſence of their ſuperiors—How to come into and go out of a room—How to ſalute in the ſtreet, and walk gracefully—How to preſent any thing to another—and how to move the fan elegantly, &c. &c. &c.

He would eſteem it a particular favour if thoſe ladies and gentlemen who have had an opportunity of aſſociating with the polite in the European capitals, would honor him with their company whenever he practices, in order to ſatisfy them of his abilities in that particular line of his profeſſion. mtf.

Foreign Intelligence.

PARIS, July 20.

WE are assured that a congress will be held at Versailles, consisting of the ambassadors extraordinary of all the potentates in Europe, and their important business is said to be the concluding and signing a treaty of peace under the general and particular guarantee of all the powers, which is to be inviably kept up for 30 years. Our minister of foreign affairs has already, it is said, got the consent of all the republics and eight crowned heads. If this plan succeeds, it will do great honor to the projector of it.

VIENNA, July 10.

It is generally supposed here, that the emperor will endeavour to go through with his intended regulations in the Netherlands. On the 5th the council sat all night, and 29 regiments are ordered to march to the Netherlands; to-morrow six companies of artillery will go from hence. It is not yet known who is to command those troops.

July 14. A report is at this instant circulated, that the march of the troops to the Netherlands is stopped for the present: affairs there are become very embarrassing; and without some prudent management serious consequences may be apprehended.

LONDON.

July 31. By advices received on Saturday we are informed, that on the 8th instant two imperial regiments passed through Kehl, on their way to Bruxelles. This affords something of a proof that the emperor means not so quietly to yield to the opposition of the Brabanters, as has been generally supposed.

We hear that on Monday night a messenger arrived at the marquis of Carmarthen's office from sir James Harris, informing, that a body of 30 000 Prussians had taken the field, and were in full march into Holland: that this had thrown all parties into the greatest confusion, as a general movement of the French was hourly expected in consequence of this step of his Prussian majesty.

Orders were sent last night to Portsmouth and Plymouth, for every officer belonging to the ships now in commission to repair on board the same without delay. The fleet under commodore Gower has orders to hold themselves in readiness to proceed to sea on the shortest notice.

Orders are said to have been sent from his majesty, as elector of Hanover, to make a review of all the garrison towns and fortified places of that electorate, that they may be strengthened and repaired where necessary.

The last letters from Algiers say, that the ravages of the plague are dreadful beyond imagination, the contagion having spread to all the towns and villages within a considerable distance from that capital. The letters add, that to aggravate the miseries of the people, agriculture is almost entirely suspended, and that they have before them only the prospect of falling victims either to the dreadful distemper by which the country is afflicted, or to a general famine.

Our last letters from Utrecht inform us of the following desperate resolution having been entered into by a council of war of the armed citizens:

"Resolved, and it is hereby understood to be the opinion of this board, that no thoughts should be entertained of giving up this city, whatever be the extremity to which it may be driven: that it shall, on the contrary, be defended till it be reduced to a heap of ruins, that the enemy may find nothing therein to glut their cruel revenge: nay, that if needful, after holding out as long as possible, those who may survive the slaughter of their fellow citizens, shall set fire to the four parts of the said city before they desert it."

August 1. The following ludicrous cause was tried before the high court of justiciary at Edinburgh, on an appeal from the jurisdiction of the sherriffalty of East Lothian, in which county that metropolis is situated. After the business of the quarterly session was closed, the magistrates adjourned to a tavern, where they dined, in company with several other gentlemen of the county and city. The glass passed merrily round, and the lord provost (mayor) proposed a certain toast, which was received with the usual cheerfulness by all, except one of the company, who positively refused to drink it. The magistrates then formed themselves into a sham court, and proceeded to try the supposed delinquent, for contumacy and wilful disobedience. A jury was sworn, and a verdict returned, that the accused was guilty art and part (as the Scotch term is) and the court gave sentence, that 'the culprit should be set on an ass, with his face to the tail, his hands tied behind his back, and a label on his breast, with these words in capitals—This is the man who refused drinking—such a toast.' The order was immediately executed, and the gentleman led through the street, to his great mortification, amidst the applauses of a multitude of all sorts. For this mockery, insult, and arbitrary abuse of justice, the gentleman brought his action in an inferior court, and not being pleased with the determination, appealed to the high court of justiciary, which is of the nature of our king's bench, the cause was heard, but all the authority of fifteen judges, who strove in vain to preserve order, and their own gravity, could not stop the peals of laughter, which issued from the advocates on both sides; and a more crowded court than ever yet appeared on any former occasion. The jury were, however, charged, and after retiring a few minutes, gave a verdict of one hundred pounds damages, and sixpence costs.

A correspondent assures us as an undoubted fact, that there has been no amendment or renewal of any treaty whatever between the courts of Britain and Prussia, within these last six months, and it is also certain that our court will in no other manner interfere in the intestine disputes of Holland, but in their electoral capacity if they do at all.

It is a mistaken idea of the people in general, that the first lord of the admiralty has always a seat in the cabinet council. It is true, that the earl of Sandwich had the honour, owing to his wonderful abilities and his consummate knowledge of the politics of Europe. When lord Anson was at the head of the admiralty department, he received directions from Mr. Pitt (then secretary of state) to equip a powerful fleet for sea. His lordship took upon him to ask that immortal statesman, for what service the squadron was destined? To which he answered, 'Can you keep a secret, my lord?' 'Yes,' replied his lordship: 'So can I,' said the minister.

The debates in the parliament of Paris already relax. The two most conspicuous members in the opposition to the king's measures, are sent into exile.

Extract of a letter from Brussels, July 21.

'Lord Torrington's wisdom and moderation, during the present disturbances in the Austrian Netherlands, cannot fail to raise his reputation very high as minister, at the time it does him honour as a man.

'Mr. Hazard, an English gentleman, who had enrolled himself as a volunteer in the regiment of cavalry raised by this city in defence of their liberties, was thrown from his horse a few nights ago, as he was on duty, and broke his spinal marrow.—He now lies without hope of recovery.

'The duchess of Orleans is now with her suite at Spa—but the want of company, it is imagined, will make her stay there very short.'

August 2. Yesterday some dispatches were received from Georgia, which are dated the 10th of June; they contain an account of two ships which sailed from that place in the month of April for London, being met with by an Algerine cruizer, one of which they took and sent to Algiers, the other they boarded, rummaged her, and took out 12 casks of flour, and 9 barrels of beef and pork, and then suffered her to proceed, but having sprung a leak, put into Fyal, where she was condemned.

Extract of a letter from Rotterdam, July 24.

'An answer, rather prolix, is just published, to the king of Prussia's memorial, but it is generally supposed will not be deemed satisfactory to the Prussian monarch. If so, a war it is thought, is inevitable.

'The states of Holland have just now declared that they shall maintain and protect the new deputies from Utrecht in the states general; and those of Amersfort will not be permitted to come into their province. The mediation of France is only accepted by the patriotic party; and will therefore probably be without effect.

'The gates of this city have been kept shut for several days, on account of some commotions among the boors of the neighbourhood, but they are again opened, and all is at present quiet.

'Those provinces are at present in a most deplorable state; nor is there any prospect of healing the divisions without foreign interference.'

The following is an abstract of the prophecy feigned by the learned Sir Thomas Brown, together with his exposition thereof; it was written above a century ago:

When America shall cease to send forth its treasure,
But employed at home for American pleasure.

That is, when America shall be better civilized, new polished and divided between great princes, it may come to pass that they will no longer suffer their treasure of gold and silver to be sent out, to maintain the luxury of Europe and other parts; but rather employ it to their own advantage, in great exploits and undertakings magnificent Federal structures, wars, or expeditions of their own.

When the new world shall the old invade,
Nor count them their Lords, but their Fellows in Trade.

That is, when America shall be so well peopled, civilized and divided into kingdoms, they are like to have so little regard of their originals, as to acknowledge no subjection unto them: they may also have a distinct commerce amongst themselves, or but independently with those of Europe, and may hostilely and piratically assault them, even as the Greek and Roman colonies, after a long time, dealt with their original countries.

From the Hague there are accounts, that Mons. de Verac, the French ambassador there, has informed the states of Holland, that the king, his master, conceives the treatment the princess of Orange met with, in being stopt in her journey to the Hague, as carrying matters to too great a length; and that the king of Prussia was certainly justified in demanding ample satisfaction for the insult, which they would do well to give without loss of time. But it is apprehended this wholesome advice comes too late.

Preparations are making in the king's observatory at Windsor, for taking some astronomical observations on the present situation of the celestial bodies, which are said to discover some phenomena in the Sidera Errata as curious as uncommon. A trial is also to be made of the latest invented instruments.

By a gentleman just arrived from Brest we learn, that the French are exerting themselves at that port, with uncommon diligence. A courier arrived there on the 24th instant, from Versailles, with dispatches for the commanding officer—immediately after which, the shipwrights were ordered to work double tides, and an additional quantity of provisions and naval stores were shipped on board five ships of the line; which it is thought are destined for the East Indies. It appears that no less than three ships, armed en flute, have sailed singly for the Mauritius, within the last six months.——These ships are laden with all kinds of naval and military stores and when cleared, are capable of mounting 64 guns, the lower tier of guns being put in the hold, for the purpose of rendering the accommodations for the stores, the more capacious. Whilst such things are doing in France, what are the supine ministers of Great Britain about? We have not a single ship of force in the Eastern hemisphere, The Dutch and French, are in full force there!

Green Hats with silver and gold bands, are now the prevalent dress with the female equestrians:—They are becoming, and well calculated to temper the heart.

Mr. Rolle who is a true, stedfast, and patriotic friend to the Protestant religion, to Magna Charta, and the Bill of Rights, is now in reality, apprehensive for the church and state, should the Dutch take it into their heads to invade and conquer this empire, they having no religion at all. He has written to the archbishop of Canterbury, and recommended it strongly to his grace to apply to the duke of Richmond for a plan to fortify Lambeth palace, in case the grand pensionary should take it into his head to fix upon that spot for his residence, whilst the army of Mynheers were endeavouring to subvert the state in other parts of the kingdom.—The church he wishes to have well fortified, and meaning no pun, he thinks it cannot be better secured than by a considerable number of cannons round its head.

Matters begin to grow very serious between the emperor and his Brabantine subjects. To their spirited memorial or remonstrance he has issued an edict by way of answer somewhat soothing, yet somewhat criminating and reproving, and somewhat menacing; talking of forgiveness where no guilt is as yet admitted or confessed. He does not openly avow the despotic doctrine, 'Sic volo, sic jubeo, stat pro ratione voluntas;' but adopts a doctrine as dangerous and inimical to liberty, viz—That subjects ought always to believe that their sovereigns think, speak and act for their good, and consequently that they ought to submit with implicit faith to what they do not understand to be for their good, merely because the sovereign pleases to think so. His calling the states or their deputies or representatives out of their own country to a distant foreign capital, to answer for their conduct and defend their principles, we do not think right. They cannot there have the protection of their own laws, the advice, spirit and support of the people whom they represent. In Vienna, they become subjects of the emperor as emperor of Germany, and he may treat them as such, by a power which they may not understand, or know the extent of. What may be justifiable and strictly constitutional in Brabant, may be highly condemnable and punishable in Vienna; and the laws which in Brabant might protect them, might in Vienna operate to their destruction. It is therefore unfair to make the requisition, which it will be imprudent in them to comply with, and which they may refuse to obey, without any charge of contumacy; which they have a good right to do, under the circumstances of the menacing conclusion of his requisition, and the drawing of his forces towards their territories, for the purpose of realising his threats.

It is not always easy to foresee events; but the French seem to make great advances towards liberty, or at least the desire of it; to which the assistance the French court gave to America, and are now disposed to give to the republicans in Holland, does not a little contribute: They argue, and more freely than formerly, that if it is just and reasonable to spend their blood and treasures, in defence of liberty in other countries, it can be neither unjust nor unreasonable to establish it at home.

AMERICA.

BOSTON, September 24.

We are informed there has been a severe shock of an earthquake at Porto Rico, which, besides other damage, has sunk the church.

Accounts from the West-Indies inform, that on the 23d August, a severe hurricane at Bassetterre did much damage to the shipping there; a brig belonging to this port was driven by it out to sea and considerably damaged, as was a Marblehead schooner, capt. Gale, and a brig and sloop belonging to Casco Bay, besides several other vessels, which were not heard of at the date of our accounts.

Last Saturday the body of Samuel Lobdell, a negro man, was taken up in Cambridge bay. He was hired by captain John Pulling, to go with him to fetch some merchandize from on board a sloop lying in Roxbury creek. On their return, having on board the boat two tierces and some dry hides, the boat by some accident overset, and they were both drowned. Captain Pulling is not yet found.

It is to be hoped, says a correspondent, that the friends of government to the westward will not remit their exertions for the apprehending those notorious villains Shays and the other outlaws; that justice may overtake at least some of the traitors who have disgraced the government, and put us to such enormous expence to check their rebellion, depredations and murders. It cannot be forgot that the proclamation offering so large a reward is still in force.

The Indians, it appears by letters from the western country, still continue their depredations on the whites——regardless of the faith pledged by solemn treaties made with them, they wish only for the opportunity to do it, to put into execution any outrages their savage nature is capable of perpetrating; and indeed nothing will prevent this ever being the case, but either depriving them by dint of arms of those hands which have too long been employed to disgrace the human character, or burying deep in their heads those hatchets which they have kept wet with the blood of helpless innocents.

On Thursday last the Roxbury troop of horse, commanded by Capt. John Tyler, made their public appearance in compleat uniform (blue trimmed with white.) Having dined together at Cambridge, they marched into this town, over Charles-River bridge, and alighted at the Bunch of Grapes tavern—when, after refreshing themselves, they performed their evolutions and firings in State-street, in the presence of a large number of spectators, with great military exactness; and about sun set returned to Roxbury, by way of the isthmus.

By the Maria, from l'Orient, which arrived here on Wednesday, we learn, that such preparations were making throughout all France at the time of her departure, as indicated a war to be at no great distance.

On Wednesday night, we are told, two houses and two vessels were broke open, and articles stolen there from—the night being very stormy, favoured the designs of the marauders.

Philadelphia, Oct. 1.

The United States in Congress

Assembled. Friday, September 28, 1787.

Present—New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia, and from Maryland Mr. Ross.

CONGRESS having received the Report of the CONVENTION lately assembled in Philadelphia,

Resolved unanimously,

THAT the said report, with the resolutions and letter accompanying the same, be transmitted to the several legislatures, in order to be submitted to a convention of delegates, chosen in each state by the people thereof, in conformity to the resolves of the convention, made and provided in that case.

CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary.

IN GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

SATURDAY, September 29, 1787.

WHEREAS the Convention of Deputies from the several states composing the union, lately held in this city, have published a constitution for the future government of the United States, to be submitted to conventions of deputies chosen in each state by the people thereof, under the recommendation of its legislature, for their assent and ratification. And whereas Congress on Friday the 28th inst. did unanimously resolve, that the said constitution be transmitted to the several legislatures of the states to the intent aforesaid. And whereas it is the sense of great numbers of the good people of this state, already signified in petitions and declarations to this house, that the earliest steps should be taken to assemble a convention within the state for the purpose of deliberating and determining on the said constitution.

Resolved, That it be recommended to such of the inhabitants of the state as are entitled to vote for representatives to the general assembly, that they chuse suitable persons, to serve as deputies in a state convention for the purpose herein before mentioned, that is, for the city of Philadelphia and the counties respectively, the same number of deputies that each is entitled to of representatives in the general assembly—That the elections for deputies as aforesaid, be held at the several places in the said city & counties as are fixed by law for holding the elections of representatives to the general assembly, and that the same be conducted by the officers who conduct the said elections of representatives, and agreeably to the rules and regulations thereof.

Resolved, That the election of deputies as aforesaid shall be held for the city of Philadelphia, and the several counties of the state, on the first Tuesday of November next—That the persons so elected to serve in convention shall assemble on the third Tuesday of November, at the State-house in the city of Philadelphia—That the proposition submitted to this house by the deputies of Pennsylvania in the general convention of the states, of ceding to the United States a district of country within this state for the seat of the general government, and for the exclusive legislation of Congress, be particularly recommended to the consideration of the convention—That it be recommended to the succeeding house of assembly to make the same allowance to the attending members of the convention as is made to the members of the general assembly—and also to provide for the extraordinary expences which may be incurred by holding the said elections.

Friday last Mr. George Clymer rose in the General Assembly, and having premised, that the subject which he purposed to introduce to the house, was of so interesting a nature, was so generally understood, and so unanimously approved, that he thought it superfluous to attempt, by any prefatory reasoning, to impress it upon the minds of the members, he presented resolutions of the following purport to the chair:—"Whereas the late Fœderal Convention, has digested a plan of government for the United States, and recommended that it should be referred to the consideration of State Conventions, therefore resolved, that all persons entitled to elect Representatives in General Assembly, shall elect as many Delegates to form a Convention for the purpose aforesaid, as the city and counties respectively to which they belong, are by law authorised to return to the General Assembly—that the said election of Delegates shall take place for the city of Philadelphia, and all the counties, except those hereafter mentioned, on the day of the next general election, and for Bedford, Huntingdon, Washington and Westmoreland on the   day of   that the Delegates so elected shall meet at the state-house in Philadelphia on the   day of   next, and that it be recommended to the succeeding house of Assembly, to provide the same allowance for the attending members of the said Convention, as is provided for the members of the legislature." These propositions produced a very long, and animated debate, and upon the question, will the house adopt the resolution for calling a convention, it was determined in the affirmative.——Yeas 43—Nays 19.

The house having come to the resolution, mentioned in the preceding paragraph, adjourned 'till four o'clock in the afternoon; but at that time no more than 45 members assembled, in consequence of which the Speaker stated, that the only alternative was to adjourn, or to order the serjeant at arms to summon the absent members. The officer being sent upon that duty, was, on his return, examined at the bar, when he informed the Speaker, and the members present, that at the house of Alexander Boyd, he had spoken with Mr Whitehill, Mr. Findley, Mr. Antis, and several other members (being the whole of the minority upon the question for calling a convention, except Mr. Brown, who answered on going over the roll) and having informed them, that he was ordered by the Speaker and the house to desire their attendance in their places, he was answered by Mr. Whitehill, that they would not attend, as they had not made up their minds upon the subject, and it seemed to be the general disposition of the persons present not to comply with the summons of the house. The serjeant being questioned, said that no other persons besides the members and Messrs. M'Lean and Smilie, members of the Executive Council, were at that time at major Boyd's; that Mr. M'Lean asked him, who had sent him, but that Mr. Smilie was silent. The Speaker then recapitulated to the members the business that remained to be completed this session, which consisted chiefly a few bills to be compared at the table, and the suite of the resolutions that had occasioned the secession. It was then moved to adjourn, when Mr. Robinson addressed himself to the chair to the following effect:—Mr. Speaker—Before we adjourn, I wish to submit a thought to the members now assembled, that they may revolve it in their minds, and come prepared at our next meeting to decide upon its propriety. The house, this morning, sir, adopted a resolution for calling a convention. Proceedings of this nature have not the obligation of laws, but are merely recommendatory, and may afterwards be complied with or rejected, at the pleasure of the people. Notwithstanding then, the unwarrantable secession, which has thus a second time disgraced the records of the legislature there are a sufficient number of us left to frame and present to our constituents an eligible mode for conducting the election of the proposed convention, and though it may want the authority of a quorum, the good sense of the people will not allow them to reject it on that account, if they find it in other respects salutary and convenient. I shall propose therefore, that we make the necessary arrangement at our next meeting, and under our hands and seals offer it as a tribute to the public welfare; at least, as an instrument to rescue our characters from the imputation of indulging a factious spirit, or of basely deserting our duty upon so important an occasion.

Mr. Fitzsimons added, that he hoped every gentleman present would consider himself bound to attend at the next meeting, which was appointed for Saturday morning at half past nine o'clock.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

TUESDAY, September 25.

The house met pursuant to adjournment.

The order of the day for taking into consideration the bill for regulating the water courses, pumps, &c. in the district of Southwark, &c. was called up.

Upon the clause which enacts that "if any pump sunk by a private person, remains for the space of two months out of repair, it shall be taken into the hands of the commissioners, and kept at the public charge," it was objected by Mr. Whitehill, that this was an infringement of private property, which the legislature had no power to effect without granting an equivalent to the injured party. But it was answered by Messrs. Fitzsimons and Robinson, that the clause did not extend to divest the property of those pumps which any citizen had sunk within his own enclosures, but to such only, as had been sunk in the streets, lanes or alleys, and which were in fact so many intrusions upon the public property. No man surely has a right to dig a well in the streets; but if he does so, as it a matter of general accommodation it is customary to indulge his claim of property while he keeps the pump in repair; longer it would be improper, for it is evident that he is the original intruder, and is only suffered to maintain his possession upon that condition. But so far from working an injury, there is not an owner of a private pump, who would not be glad to be relieved from his charge by the operation of this clause, and in truth many applications have at different times been made to surrender such property into the hands of the public. The objection therefore is void of foundation, and the provision of the act is not only just, but convenient to the citizens who will be affected by it. The question being put, the clause was carried, after striking out that part of it, which directed the commissioners annually to pay the sum of 7s 6d. to every owner of a private pump, sunk on private property. This, said Mr. Robinson, is a thing originally done for the accommodation of an individual, and from which the public can derive no advantage, but in the case of fire, when the duties of humanity must be sufficiently obligatory, without so trifling an appearance of compensation and reward.

On the section which provides for the assessing and raising the sums necessary to accomplish the objects of the act, Messrs. George Clymer, Whitehill and Findley observed, that the benefits of this law would be partial and local, but the tax would be uniform and general. That part of the district of Southwark which was settled and built upon, would alone reap the advantages, but that part which was vacant and uncultivated, would likewise be bound to contribute to the cost. It was therefore contrary to the principles of natural justice, and ought not to be permitted by the legislature. When indeed, the owners of the unimproved lots of Philadelphia, petitioned to be exempted from the taxes for paving, lighting, and watching the city, which were in no degree advantageous to them, the only satisfactory answer to their prayer, was, that they purchased the land subject to these impositions, and the incumbrance was naturally considered in the price. But this reason does not exist in the present case, and therefore a discrimination ought to be made, and the burthen confined to those only, who enjoy the advantages of the proposed regulation. In order to enable the house to make that discrimination with propriety, we move for a postponement of the bill; and are the more satisfied in doing so, as it cannot be very injurious to the persons who are to be affected by it, since the season is too far advanced to allow of any material improvements at this time, and a law may be introduced and enacted in the second session of the succeeding house, before the returning spring.

Mr. Fitzsimons said, that he could not perceive the necessity for postponing the bill, although there was some appearance of reason in the allegation upon which it was moved. But it should be remembered that this bill had been long before the people, and that the objection had never been made by those who were immediately interested in the question. Mr. Robinson added, that however plausible the argument may seem at first view, it would not be found strictly just on a nearer examination. The improvement which it was the object of the bill to introduce, would immediately, it is true, operate upon the settled part of Southwark, but would they not likewise induce the extension of the buildings, and, consequently raise the value of the lands on every side? Here then is an indirect advantage; and it was undoubtedly considered as a sufficient return for the portion of the taxes, drawn from the owners of unsettled lots, since not a single voice has been heard in opposition to the law, upon that ground; but, on the contrary, a singular unanimity has prevailed.

The question being put, the bill was postponed.

The second order of the day for taking into consideration the bill for appointing commissioners to regulate the streets, lanes and alleys in the district of Southwark was called up; when Mr. Whitehill proposed that as this bill was connected with the former, it should likewise be postponed, but the question being put, the house proceeded to consider it by paragraphs.

Upon the clause which gives the commissioners a power to lay out the roads leading into the district of Southwark, &c. Mr. D. Clymer and Mr. Whitehill argued strongly against this measure as novel, impolitic and unjust. The general rule for laying out the public roads, and the jurisdiction established in the quarter sessions for that purpose, were well understood, and had been universally exercised with great advantage to the public. What pretension then, has Southwark to a new and special mode of accommodation; and, if it is productive of greater ease and benefit, why should it be limited to that particular district? Under the forms of the existing laws, the roads leading to the Northern Liberties have been well laid out; and as no good reason appears for introducing an alteration in favor of Southwark, we may fairly presume that there is some latent motive, which will not bear the light. But the proposition is radically erroneous. Commissioners are to be appointed to run the proposed roads, and they are to report to the executive council, who may grant a review, or confirm the road, as they see fit. By such means that body may occasionally be called upon to determine a question of property, and the executive power will exercise judicial authority, in direct opposition to the wholesome discrimination of our government and laws. Nor is there an appeal allowed from their determination, however grievous it may be; whereas in the ordinary mode of proceeding before the justices of the peace in their quarter sessions, there may be a removal first to the supreme court, and ultimately to the high court of errors and appeals.

To this it was answered, that something was due to the conveniency of the citizens who requested the regulation; and as it would save them a considerable expence incidental to the usual proceeding in the quarter sessions, the only question that could be made upon the subject, was whether it really contradicted the spirit and intention of the constitution, or any existing law? The truth is that no greater confusion of the judicial & executive branches of the government would occur by the proposed mode, than occurs under the present practice; for the same view and review that the quarter sessions might grant, are made grantable by the executive council, the same forms of hearing the contending parties are preserved, and as the business is considered and determined, in the one case, by justices of the peace for a particular district, it will, in the other, be considered and determined by justices of the peace for the whole state. There is not therefore any ground for that objection, and the accommodation of the citizens interested should prevail on every occasion indifferent in itself. Without taking the vote of the members on the clause, the house, on motion adjourned to meet to-morrow morning at half past nine o'clock.

A QUIET CONSCIENCE.

CLOSE thine eyes, and sleep secure;
Thy soul is safe, thy body sure;
He who guards thee, he who keeps,
Never slumbers, never sleeps.

A quiet Conscience in the breast
Has only peace, has only rest:
The music and the mirth of Kings
Are out of tune, unless she sings:
Then close thine eyes in peace, and sleep secure:
No sleep so sweet as thine, no rest so sure.

ANECDOTE.

THE late Lord Pembroke sauntering one day, by accident saw a silver spoon in the pig-stye of a country house. A female was then coming to feed the unruly animals——'What a work these devils make,' says she, as she filled the trough. 'No wonder,' said his lordship, 'you see they have got but one spoon among them all.'

He has therefore prepared himself for the receiving, buying and selling every kind of Merchandize on commission, for procuring freight for vessels and hiring vessels on charter. He will also purchase and sell, on commission, bills of exchange, bank stock, and all kinds of public securities; in which several transactions his employers may implicitly rely on his best endeavours for their interests, on the most inviolable secrecy, and every possible dispatch.

Philadelphia, September 25. etf

For Grist Mills & other Water Works

On an extensive Plan,

One of the best situations in America is offered

FOR SALE,

Together With

Batsto Iron-Works,

At the forks of Little Egg-Harbour river, one of the most healthy spots in New Jersey, 38 miles by land from Philadelphia, and within a few hours sail of New York.

THE river, communicating with the sea by the best inlet on the Jersey coast, is navigable for vessels of 200 tons within a few miles of the works; those of 100 tons may approach within one mile; flats and scows, carrying 10 or 12 tons, load and unload at the works. The usual freight to New York or Philadelphia is 10 shillings per ton. The furnace stream affords plenty of water, in the dryest season, for 3 or 4 pair of mill stones, besides supplying the iron works.——An excellent dam, which has been increasing in strength many years by the cinder from the furnace, is well secured from the danger of freshes, and the works are scarcely ever injured or delayed by either ice or back-water, though the tide swells to the foot of the dam: mills may therefore be erected at a moderate expence. This being a part of the country in which many people and many teams are necessarily employed in collecting and preparing for market the iron and lumber with which it abounds, and at the same time illy adapted to the raising of grain for their support, there is, and must continue to be, a demand for large quantities of midlings, cornell, shorts and bran, at advanced prices; and the conveniency of conveying flour at a light expence, either to New York or Philadelphia, or to more distant markets, will not be overlooked nor considered as of small importance, especially as there are few mill seats of any considerable capacity equally adapted to the New York market, which is not unfrequently supplied with superfine flour from Philadelphia. A choice of the various kinds of wheat may be drawn to this seat from Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, and New York with greater ease and convenience than to almost any other mills now in being.

The FURNACE, which by the extensive lands annexed to it, is abundantly supplied with wood and ore, is now in blast, and is noted for producing the best hollow ware in America, the metal being peculiarly well adapted to the making of castings of all kinds, as well as excellent bar iron.

A FORGE, with four fires and two hammers, belongs to the estate, and stands about half a mile from the furnace, on another fine stream which affords plenty of water.

A SLITTING and ROLLING MILL, having been disused for the last two or three years, may want some repairs to prepare it for use; but the forebays and gates are in perfect order, and being in the proper spot for grist mills, may be appropriated to that use.

Two SAW MILLS in good order, and a small Grist Mill.

The MANSION HOUSE is elegantly situated about 100 yards from the furnace, on an height which commands a view of the whole works, and of the two villages formed by the surrounding buildings belonging to the estate, such as barns, stables, coal houses, workshops storehouses and dwellings for workmen. Adjoining the mansion house is a large and fruitful garden, affording plenty of vegetables, and well stored with chosen fruit trees; also a young bearing orchard, containing near 2000 apple trees, mostly grafted.

These excellent accommodations for extensive and profitable manufactories, are offered to sale at a very low rate, and on terms of payment calculated for the ease of the purchaser, who may pay the greater part in the produce of the Iron Works, at a price to be agreed upon; and they are capable of producing more in one year, than will pay the whole price demanded.

For particulars, apply to WILLIAM RICHARDS at the said Works, JOHN COX, at Bloomsbury, near Trenton, or CHARLES PETTIT, in Philadelphia.

ALL persons indebted to the estate of JOHN HOOD, Merchant, in Front street, late deceased, are requested to make immediate payment; and those who have demands against said estate, are desired to bring in their claims properly attested.

The remaining STOCK on hand, consisting of a Variety of DRY GOODS and HARD-WARE (part of them in original packages) will be sold very low for Cash.

Also—The BRIGANTINE Carolina Packet, burthen about 1700 barrels flour, built in Philadelphia in 1784, and is now in complete order, and may be seen at Mr. Gerard's wharf—She has a Cargo Port-au-Prince MELASSES on board for sale.

At the Old Coffee-House, in the city of Philadelphia, on Wednesday the 17th day of October next, at six o'clock in the Evening,
(If not previously disposed of at private sale)

MOORE-HALL,

THE Estate of the late William Moore, esquire, situate upon the river Schuylkill, in the township of Charles-Town, in the county of Chester, distant 23 miles from this city.

The Estate consists of upwards of 600 acres of most excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Mansion House is spacious, convenient and airy; it is situated upon a high and healthy spot, and commands a most delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Grist-Mill on the premises, near the Mansion House, on a never-failing stream, called Pickering, running through the estate, and watering a great body of meadow; this stream empties itself into the Schuylkill, in front of the house; it formerly supplied water for a saw mill, which might with much ease, and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Estate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any person inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premises before the day of sale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, esquire, in Arch street, or PETER MILLER, esquire, in Third street. Sept 17 eptf

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be exposed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thursday the 29th of November next, at the Court-House in Harford county, state of Maryland,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

Those who wish to view the land, on application to Mess. Ashton and Waters, the present tenants, will be shewn it. Possession will be given the 1st of January, if required. The title good and free of all incumbrances. The terms will be easy to the purchaser, and will be made known on the day of sale, by Wm. WEST.

THE laſt accounts received here from our auguſt ſovereign were dated from Kamenei-Mort, at which time her imperial majeſty was in perfect health. The empreſs remained two days at Sebeſtapolis, where ſhe viſited the fleet, which conſiſted of 15 ſhips of the line, 3 frigates, and 16 bomb veſſels. Her imperial majeſty has granted conſiderable gratifications to the officers of the artillery, and to thoſe of the department of the fleet of the Black Sea. She has alſo beſtowed half a years extra wages to the ſailors who manned the galleys, and a rouble a head to all the ſoldiers and ſailors whom ſhe found at Cherſon: this diſtribution has coſt the ſum of 25,560 roubles.

Mr. le marquis de Gallo, who was ſent ambaſſador from his Sicilian majeſty to Cherſon, has received as a preſent, a ſnuff box, enriched with brilliants, valued at 8000 roubles, and 4000 ducats in ready money. A letter from Bengal, dated 14th February ſays, that Tippoo Saib, in his late ſurprize on the Marattas, gained a moſt deciſive advantage, having obliged them to abandon the greateſt part of their baggage. The plunder which his troops acquired in the enemy's camp, and in the bazars, was very great; and independent of the value of it, it inſpires the conquerors with great confidence in the ability and management of their leader.

By the ſucceſs of Tippoo in this attack, the Marattas ſee, that they are no match for him in their preſent mode of purſuing the war; and they have therefore wiſely determined to change it.—The Marattas can only hope to tire out their enemy, not to conquer him; and by confining themſelves to light ſkirmiſhes, and harraſſing him by ſcouting parties of their horſe, they will render his ſituation very unpleaſant; and by cutting off his ſupplies, they may oblige him to retire. In purſuance of this plan, they have ſent off their heavy baggage and guns to Badamma, and a large body of troops has been ordered to lay waſte Tippoo's country to the ſouthward of Jambruda.

Such is the opulence of private individuals in China, that one merchant only at Canton, has ſold this year teas and raw ſilk to the different European ſhips, to the amount of eleven hundred thouſand pounds.

There are other reaſons beſides the ties of conſanguinity between our ſovereign and the prince of Orange, to induce the Britiſh council to ſupport the houſe of Naſſau's influence in Holland; for if that was at an end, there is a great probability there would alſo be an end to the lucrative commerce carried on between England and the Seven United Provinces, whoſe new friends, the French, might in quality of being the moſt favoured nation ſtep in for it. To give our readers ſome idea of the importance of the Dutch trade to England, we ſhall inform them, that the very year before the breaking out of the laſt war with Holland, the exports from England to that country, amounted, on the moſt moderate computation, to

AMERICA.

KINGSTON, (Jamaica) July 20.

On Sunday the 15th inſt. an unfortunate gentleman of the medical profeſſion, who arrived in this iſland about three months ago, put an end to his exiſtence by ſwallowing a large quantity of opium. The coroner made inquiſition into the cauſe of his death, and the jury returned their verdict, Inſanity. The deceaſed left a long letter behind him, replete with extravagance and incoherence, though full of ſentiment, in which he ſtates his reaſons for committing the deſperate deed. Previous to the execution of his fatal deſign, he had applied to a number of medical gentlemen in this town for employment, but as none of them had immediate occaſion for aſſiſtance, at the time of his application, they could not then avail themſelves of his proffered ſervices. However every profeſſional gentleman to whom he applied on the ſubject, one only excepted, gave him flattering hopes of ſucceeding, and adminiſtered every conſolation which minds endued with feeling and ſympathy for the diſtreſſes of a fellow creature could ſuggeſt, except the perſon alluded to, who upon his appearance (miſtaking him for a patient) received him with the cuſtomary inſinuating ſmile; but immediately after the unhappy viſitor had explained the real meaning of his errand, this ſtony hearted mock Æſculapius turned his back upon him with contempt, and told him to be gone! Such vile and inhuman treatment hurt his feelings exceedingly, and he returned to his lodgings, where he ſat down and wept abundantly.—He was found ſtretched out upon the beach at Greenwich on Sunday morning, his face covered with a pocket handkerchief, with a phial of medicine lying by him, and an empty pill box. He had been a ſurgeon in the royal navy during laſt war, and by the many recommendatory letters in his favour, which he left in the hands of a friend, he was in no mean eſtimation with reſpect to honour, integrity, and profeſſional ability, among thoſe who had the pleaſure of his acquaintance.

Auguſt 22. So nefarious are the practices of many attornies in the courts of law, as they write from London, that government have it in contemplation not to admit any, in future, but ſuch as are able to give ſureties for their good behaviour in executing the buſineſs of their profeſſion.

NORTHAMPTON, Sept. 19.

On Tueſday night of laſt week, about 1 o'clock, three guns were diſcharged near the dwelling houſe of capt. Joſhua Healy, in Cheſterfield, evidenly with a deſign to have deprived him of his life, and to have injured his property. One of the balls entered the houſe near the bed where he and his wife lodged; it went through ſome cloaths which hung in the room, and paſſed about 18 inches over the bed and entered the yarn beam of a loom about 5 inches. One of the guns loaded with powder only, was diſcharged through a window into the barn—the charge moſtly ſtruck a large ſtick of timber that had been lately put up in repairing the ſtable, which prevented its lodging in a mow of hay oppoſite to the window. The perſon who diſcharged it ſtood on a heap of dung adjoining to the barn (as appeared by the print of his feet the next day) in ſuch a poſition as he muſt have put the muzzle of the gun ſome way into the barn, or the charge would not have gone in the direction it did—fortunately the late rain had beat in and ſo dampened the day which lay near the ſtick of timber, as prevented its taking fire, otherwiſe it is moſt probable the barn, containing upwards of 300 buſhels of grain, and a large quantity of flax and hay, muſt have been conſumed. The perſon who fired at capt. Healy, ſtood about 15 or 20 feet diſtant from where he ſlept. What become of the contents of the third gun, and what effect it had, is not yet diſcovered. Capt. Healy's horſes were taken out of his paſture by the party, as they were found about one mile from his houſe next morning—this was done probably to prevent an immediate purſuit. It is hinted by ſome, who have been unfriendly to government, that the above event took place partly in conſequence of his capt. Healy's zeal in ſupport of government, and partly in conſequence of his having commenced a civil action for damages he ſuſtained laſt winter by the mob.——Threats are circulating, that if he does not withdraw his action before the ſitting of the ſupreme court at Springfield, he will be deprived of the privilege of proſecuting the ſuit himſelf.

Heavens! What are we coming to? Is a man to be aſſaſſinated, and his dear gained earnings of a ſummer to be conſumed to aſhes, for ſeeking redreſs of an injury in a legal and conſtitutional way? Are the lives and property of the good citizens in the commonwealth to be thus wantonly ſported with? If they are, where will the miſchief end? Invaſions of the lives of men and the rights of property in this way, are in their nature undiſcoverable, and therefore beyond the reach of the civil magiſtrate. The only barrier then to treſpaſſes of this kind, would be that which is dictated by the firſt law in nature. If for inſtance, the life of a man is taken in this manner, merely on account of his loyalty or diſloyalty, and one of the oppoſite character is ſuppoſed to have perpetrated the crime, will not thoſe of the ſame ſentiments with the perſon ſlain, have juſt reaſon to ſuſpect their own danger, or be diſpoſed to avenge the blood of their friend, and purſue the ſame ſavage line of conduct. May the kind hand of Heaven interpoſe and prevent thoſe ſcenes of ſecret ſlaughter and depredation, which muſt be the unavoidable conſequences.

PORTLAND, (Maſſachuſetts) Sept. 14.

An Addreſs of a Convention held at Portland, on Wedneſday the 5th day of September, 1787, by adjournment—to conſider of the expediency of the three counties of York, Cumberland, and Lincoln being formed into a ſeparate government—to the inhabitants of ſaid counties;—

Friends and Brethren,

THE public good is an object of the greateſt importance to every ſociety: and deſerves the attention of the ſociety in general, and of the members who compoſe it, in particular. For upon the general weal depends the intereſt and happineſs of every individual.—Upon this principle have a convention of the three eaſtern counties proceeded, from time to time; and have written to and addreſſed you accordingly.

Laſt January the convention put into the hands of a committee a petition to the general court, praying for their conſent, that a ſeparate government might be erected, including the three counties of York, Cumberland, and Lincoln. This they did upon the principle of ſuch a ſeparation's being conſiſtent with the good of the commonwealth at large, and highly beneficial to ſaid counties. This petition now lays before the general court, (who are the political fathers of us all) but they have not ſufficient knowledge of the minds of the people to proceed thereon. The convention therefore, ſolicitous for the general good of the whole commonwealth, and of theſe counties in particular, wiſh to furniſh them with all the evidence neceſſary upon ſuch an occaſion.—They therefore recommend, that the inhabitants of the ſeveral towns and plantations in ſaid counties would freely give their voices, by ſubſcribing the following, yea or nay.

A ſubſcription for collecting the general voice of the inhabitants of the counties of York, Cumberland, and Lincoln—whether they wiſh to be formed into a ſeparate government or not. Thoſe who are for a ſeparation will ſubſcribe their names under the word yea; and thoſe who are againſt it under the word nay. Thoſe towns and plantations who chooſe, are deſired to take the ſenſe of their inhabitants, at a meeting called for that purpoſe, whether the ſubſcription ſhall be forwarded to court or not.

And it is hereby recommended and deſired, that the above ſubſcriptions may be returned by the ſecond Wedneſday of November next, to Stephen Hall, Eſquire, of Portland, Jacob Bradbury, Eſquire, of Buxton, Captain James Carr, of Hallowell, or to either of them, as may be moſt convenient, being a committee appointed to receive and forward the ſame to the general court, whether the voice of the town or plantation be had thereon or not. By order of the convention,

WILLIAM GORHAM, Preſident.
Stephen Longfellow, jun. Clerk.

NEWPORT, September 20.

A narrative of the proceedings of the General Aſſembly of the State of Rhode Iſland and Providence Plantations, ſpecially convened at Newport in ſaid State on Monday the 10th day of September, 1787.

ALTHOUGH neither the majority nor minority approved of the convoking the aſſembly, the former becauſe they wiſhed to avoid being puſhed by the latter to negative a motion for ſending delegates to Congreſs, and the latter becauſe they were ſure the former would not embrace any federal meaſure that ſhould be propoſed;—yet the majority chuſing rather to riſk the conſequences of refuſing to ſend delegates to Congreſs, than to let the general aſſembly fall a ſecond time, either for want of the attendance of a member of each houſe, or, which might have been more diſgraceful to their party, by declaring the warrant of convocation illegal, made proviſion for an attendance of a member of both houſes, the firſt day, and for daily adjournments until a quorum of the lower houſe had aſſembled, which took place on Tueſday, and then they proceeded to buſineſs.

The lower houſe by one of their body requeſted his excellency the governor to lay before them the buſineſs on which he had convoked them. He accordingly appeared before the houſe, and in a ſhort federal ſpeech, informed them that he had called them together on account of a letter he had received from the preſident of Congreſs, urging the ſtate in the ſtrongeſt terms immediately to ſend on delegates to Congreſs for many reaſons; but particularly that they might be preſent when the general convention ſhould report, which was daily expected. His excellency having finiſhed his ſpeech, laid the letter on the table and retired.

The houſe then adjourned. The next forenoon, Wedneſday, one of the minority deſired that the buſineſs on which they were convoked might be taken up, and was ſeconded; but the ORACLE of the majority thought otherwiſe.——He thought, Mr. Speaker, that it would be beſt to take up this important matter in the cool of the morning—that it would be beſt to conſult their pillows upon it. It was replied that this could not be an arduous buſineſs that required the conſultation of pillows—that gentlemen had had already one night at leaſt for conſulting their pillows——intimated pretty clearly that the majority wanted an opportunity to meet and conſult in full and ſolemn convention on the ſubject and conſented, becauſe, I ſuppoſe, he could not help it, that it ſhould be poſtponed for conſideration until the cool of the next morning.—The morning lowered, and heavily in clouds bro't on the day, the important day, big with diſgrace and infamy.

The queſtion was propoſed, and a debate enſued, in which the minority adduced and urged ſuch arguments on the affirmative ſide of the queſtion as conviced every ſpectator, and muſt have convinced the majority themſelves; but bound by the ſolemn league and covenant they had entered into at the convention the night before, it was impoſſible to force them to yield to their convictions.——The Oracle was obliged to ſtand the conteſt almoſt alone; for, excepting a craker diſcharged now and then by the little Hypocrite, who ſometimes prates ſo prettily from the ſouth ſide of the houſe, no one came forth to the ſupport of our intrepid Hero——Unabaſhed he ſtood, as ever Money-maker did in the pillory, and, bidding defiance to common ſenſe, and pointed reaſoning, as often as he had a chance, he furiouſly ſcattered about him fire-brands, arrows and death, ſwearing he would fight up to his knees in blood for confederation. After raving, until he had put himſelf out of breath, he cloſed the debate with declaring that our laſt delegates in Congreſs had, in a letter to the ſtate, hinted that it was one deſign of the convention to deprive this ſtate of an equal voice with the reſt—and that he would never conſent to ſending delegates to Congreſs, until he ſhould be acquainted with the report of the convention—If impudence and perſeverance intitle to victory in a political conteſt, victory, Oh! J-n-th-n was juſtly thine. The queſtion being put, whether the aſſembly would ſend delegates to Congreſs now, or not, was determined againſt ſending delegates to Congreſs at this time by a majority of eight.—As ſoon as the queſtion was decided, away marched the majority with their leader at their head to a ſuitable place of refreſhment, there to talk over and rejoice at their ill gotten victory.

On Friday another letter was received from Congreſs, earneſtly preſſing the ſtate to ſend on delegates to Congreſs. It was moved by the minority to reſume the queſtion for ſending delegates to Congreſs? but the majority choſe to conſult their pillows; otherwiſe to hold and conſult in a convention on the occaſion as they had done before, and it was accordingly poſtponed until the cool of the next morning. By the bye how comes it to paſs that the majority who are eternally holding conventions, are ſo bitterly oppoſed to the general convention of the ſtates?—becauſe perhaps they may imagine that this grand convention will ſwallow up their delectable little ones.

Saturday the morning again lowered, and the queſtion came on. The Oracle and ſome others kept back, but they had arranged their troops ſo perfectly the preceding night, as to ſecure a majority of three againſt ſending delegates to Congreſs now.

They paſſed an act, upon the reſolution of Congreſs, requeſting the ſtate to repeal any laws repugnant to the treaty with Great-Britain—declaring that the ſaid treaty was a law of the land, and that it was in no reſpect to be receded from, miſconſtructed or violated. This act I ſuppoſe will be publiſhed, and I pray that it may be marked with a white ſtone.

An act paſſed granting a tax of thirty thouſand pounds in paper to be paid into the treaſury in January next, to be appropriated towards diſcharging the ſtate debt. Some votes which paſſed the lower houſe were loſt on the table or on their paſſage and did not reach the upper houſe.

The principal acts which paſſed this ſeſſion, were thoſe which have been mentioned; a curious apologetical letter to Congreſs, aſſigning reaſons for not ſending delegates to the convention, a proteſt of the minority, and a reſolution requeſting the governor by letter to inform the preſident of Congreſs that two delegates were directed to attend their body on the firſt Monday in November next—that meaſures were taken by the aſſembly for having the ſtate duly repreſented, and that they had not given orders for their delegates going forward previous to that time, under an apprehenſion that the ſtates would not generally be repreſented in Congreſs until their meeting for the next year.

Some remarks may be made on theſe acts hereafter: ſuffice it at preſent to ſay, that the letter is incorrectly drawn, and the reaſoning is futile, and not founded in, but directly againſt the ſpirit of the confederation. It is ſaid that Janus and the Political Diver have diſcovered a difference between the definite article The and the indefinite article A, which eſcaped the diligent grammatical reſearches of Noah Webſter, and have from thence moſt ſagaciouſly inferred that A Congreſs of the United States is quite a different political being from The Congreſs of the United States. Admitted to ſuch a profound diſcovery who can refrain from laughter.

With regard to the information the governor is to give to the preſident by the reſolution referred to, it may be remarked that the neceſſary meaſures have not been taken to ſend on delegates to Congreſs; that they have not been furniſhed with money to proceed, nor is any money yet provided for the delegates who it ſeems are to attend Congreſs the firſt Monday of November.

As to delegates not being ordered on becauſe it was apprehended that the ſtates would not be generally repreſented in Congreſs until the firſt Monday in November next, it is altogether farcical. Every one knows that upon the riſing of the Convention, all the ſtates will be repreſented but this, to take into conſideration the report of the convention. In truth the reaſon why delegates have not been ſent to the convention, and why they were not ordered on to Congreſs, at the laſt ſeſſion, was becauſe the majority, by ſtanding buff againſt the urgent recommendations of Congreſs, may with a better face oppoſe the recommendation which Congreſs may preſent to them in conſequence of the report of the convention.

The ſeſſion cloſed a ſcene ſhocking to humanity. The waiters produced their accounts of days attendance, leaving it to the houſe to allow ſuch ſums as they ſhould judge proper for their ſervices, when ſome members of that majority, who had granted abundant ſums of nominal money to their favorites, heſitated to give them a reaſonable allowance——among theſe ſhone illuſtriouſly the duck-ſeller of Tiverton—the meal ſeller of Exeter, and the tanner of Hopkington: the firſt, who had in the early days of the paper emiſſion ſold his ducks at the rate of four for one; the ſecond who had lately ſold his meal in the Newport market at the rate of ſix or ſeven for one, and the laſt who had during the ſeſſion offered to exchange paper at ſeven for one, declared they would allow the poor waiters but one paper dollar a day for their ſervices. A ſevere and long altercation took place on this occaſion which would have terminated againſt the waiters, if the Speaker, to give him his due, had not humanely interpoſed in favor of, and by his influence procured them a tolerable reward.

Thus ended the third ſeſſion of not the old wiſe, but of the preſent wiſe, virtuous, juſt, federal adminiſtration.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 26.

Letters by the Auguſt Packet, arrived here laſt Monday from England, mention, that on the 18th of July the reverend Charles Inglis, D. D. was conſecrated at Lambeth chapel, biſhop of the province of Nova-Scotia, with an appointment of two thouſand pounds ſterling per annum. That the biſhop was married to the only daughter of Samuel Galloway, Eſquire, olim of Philadelphia, and that the reverend Mr. Mungen was appointed archdeacon of Nova-Scotia, with a revenue of five hundred pounds a year.

Sept. 27. On Monday laſt the Britiſh packet Halifax, captain Boulderſon, arrived with the mail, in 46 days from Falmouth, by whom we have received London papers to the 2d of Auguſt.

Theſe papers inform,——That an extraordinary council met, in London, on the 28th July, to deliberate on the laſt accounts reſpecting the Dutch affairs.——The determination, in ſubſtance, is to this effect: that the popular encroachments on the powers and privileges of the ſtadtholder ſhould be repelled, and the prince of Orange ſhould be maintained in the full enjoyment of every conſtitutional right. In conſequence of this determination, diſpatches were immediately prepared to go with Mr. Eden to the French court, and with Mr. Grenville to Holland.——That the report reſpecting the march of SIXTY THOUSAND Pruſſian troops, is without foundation.——That the Flemiſh accounts of 60,000 of the emperor's troops being on their march from Germany to the Auſtrian low countries, is, alſo, in every reſpect premature: on the contrary, it is ſaid, deputies are ſent out for Vienna, where there is not a doubt, but the buſineſs will be ſettled equally to the honor of the ſovereign, and the benefit of the inhabitants of Auſtrian Flanders.——That Tippoo Saib, in the eaſt, has gained a deciſive advantage over the Mahrattas; ſince this, overtures have been made for peace with the conquered.——That the Britiſh parliament was prorogued, on the 31ſt July, to meet on the 25th October.——That a ſhock of an earthquake was felt, in ſeveral parts of England, on the 6th July.——That more lives have been loſt, and more miſchief done to perſonal property, in England, by late thunder ſtorms, than for many years paſt.

On the 21ſt ultimo a reſolve took place in Congreſs, authoriſing the ſuperintendant of Indian affairs, in the northern department, to proceed to Poſt St. Vincents, and there hold a treaty with the Wabaſh, Shawaneſe, and other hoſtile tribes of Indians; hear their complaints, and inform them of the pacific diſpoſition of Congreſs. To inform the Hurons, &c. who joined the repreſentation made to Congreſs, that their repreſentation is received, and will be conſidered in due time.—That the ſecretary at war, by fœderal troops, effectually protect the frontiers of Pennſylvania and Virginia, and the fœderal lands, from Indian intruſions, to promote a favourable iſſue to the intended treaty.—Requeſting that the militia of Virginia and Kentucky hold themſelves in readineſs to co-operate in the defence of the frontiers, ſhould neceſſity require it, &c. &c.

We learn, that a duel was fought on Tueſday evening laſt, between captain Verdure, (a French gentleman, late officer in count Polaſki's legion) and Monſieur chevalier de Longchamps, in which the latter unfortunately fell a victim. It is ſaid, that the conteſt was the reſult of a former diſpute.

On Friday night, another daring attempt was made to conſume by fire the ſtores in Gouverneur's alley, in order, as it is ſuppoſed, to communicate fire to a large part of the city. The combuſtibles were placed under a back building, and burnt ſome time before it was discovered. It seems that the constable of the ward, whose duty it was to summon and form the night's patrole, had neglected this necessary measure, and the consequences would have been alarming, if it had not been discovered and extinguished by the patrole of another ward, who were accidentally passing. It appears by this, that the incendiaries, upon the least relaxation of the patroles, will effect their villainous purpose.

NEW-BRUNSWICK, Sept. 25.

The following is a list of the prices which the office of excise brought in the counties from which we have received information. Huntendon 3000l —Monmouth 1000l.—Middlesex 1705l.—Somerset 16l. Essex 17l.—In Bergen, we are told, a gallows was erected by the populace to hang the man who should make a bid.—Burlington 3l.

Last evening the scholars of the grammar-school entertained a crouded audience of both sexes, with orations on different subjects, and we are happy to find gave the fullest satisfaction.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 6.

On Monday last M'Guire was brought to town from Four-Holes, attended by a guard of three countrymen, who knowing their prisoner to be a desperate man, informed him, that if he was in the least refractory, they would put him to death. Life, however limited and short, still is sweet, and therefore M'Guire silently acquiesced under this peremptory mandate. When he arrived at his old lodgings the gaol, his dear friend and acquaintance the hangman, who also officiates in the important occupation of turnkey, received him with a hearty welcome, and by way of comfort said, he was glad to see him return, for now there would be some business. This generosity had its proper weight with M'Guire, who declared, that if he and the hangman could possibly change sides he would turn him off and a dozen such s—ns of b—s, without fee or reward.

BOSTON, Sept. 24.

On Thursday last, eleven of the culprits sentenced at the late Supreme Judicial Court, received public punishment. The county stage, on which these enemies to society were to act their several parts, was drawn into State street at 11 o'clock, and at 12 ten of them were escorted by the executive officers of justice from the gaol to the same, when seven men and a woman, wearing proper insignias (the halter round the neck, &c.) were introduced to a conspicuous station on the beam of a gallows erected thereon; as were two others to a pillory, on the same stage. At one o'clock they descended (one however leaving a piece of his right ear behind) into the cage below—from which those who were thus sentenced were again brought on the stage singly, to be actors in another part—that of whipping—which done, they were re-conducted to prison—the major part of them repining that they could not thus easily get rid of that, to them, worst part of their punishment, hard labour at the Castle.

Philadelphia, Oct. 2.

On Friday last James Keise, alias Shields, Patrick Kennan and John Campbell, were executed at Burlington, pursuant to their sentence, for burglary and the murder of Susannah Jenkins, of Evesham, in the county of Burlington. At the place of execution they confessed the murder, and a number of robberies in which they were concerned in and near this city, but would not discover their accomplices.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in London to his friend in this city.

"Orders are issued from the admiralty office to equip and compleatly man 27 sail of the line, which are to have 3 months provision on board: their destination is not yet made public, but from this and other concurring circumstances, it seems that if we are not in expectation of a war, our ministry at least wisely put themselves upon their guard; indeed the amazing number of ships that are getting ready in the several ports of France and Spain, is a circumstance that demands cautious attention. Orders are also gone to all the seaports in the Mediterranean to prevent any seamen of Great-Britain from entering into foreign service, and to recall them home, and most of our colliers, homeward bound, are put into Harwich; the men, having received information that press warrants are out, absolutely refuse to come up any further. Orders were likewise received at the king's brew-house to begin last Monday, and to brew every day, Sunday included: eight ovens more than have been for some time, are likewise ordered to be opened at the king's bake-house, and the bakers to work extra in baking of biscuit to supply the ships ordered for sea."

A Receipt to prevent the Effects of early Frost on Corn, &c.

LAY a quantity of chips or any other kind of fuel, to the windward of Indian corn, fruit trees, &c. set the same on fire after sunset, upon an evening when a frost is expected; partially cover the same, by laying such a quantity of earth thereon, as will prevent the fuel from blazing, but not in such quantities as to prevent it from smoaking freely. This precaution will effectually prevent the frost from injuring your corn, plants, trees, &c.

N. B. This receipt is given to the public, for their benefit, by Mr. Joseph Drury, of Needham, in the county of Middlesex, in the state of Massachusetts, who from experience freely recommends the above as effectual.

Bordentown Academy.

THE subscriber takes this method to inform the public, that he still continues his Academy open at Bordentown, and that having supplied himself with a good tutor, means to increase his school to about thirty pupils, having formerly confined himself to a smaller number, being confident that he and his assistant can fully do their duty by them. The branches that are taught in his academy are reading, writing, arithmetic, the Latin, Greek and French languages, practical mathematics, geography, with the use of the globes, and the arts and sciences in general. He has in said Academy a good library and philosophical apparatus, for the use of his pupils; so that gentlemen may have their children fitted either for any particular clase in college, or their education finished with him. He pays a particular attention to rhetoric and oratory, and flatters himself that he has turned out some good speakers, so necessary in our republic. He provides board, washing, lodging and every necessary accommodation, either in his own house, or in a genteel family, who accommodates part of his pupils. The exceeding healthiness and pleasantness of the situation, together with the ready communication with both the cities of Philadelphia and New-York, render it the most eligible spot on the continent for a seminary of learning. As there will be a vacation during the month of October, such gentlemen as wish to send their sons had best apply to him at Bordentown, either by letter or otherwise, during the time of vacation, that they may enter when the school commences on the first of November, as he cannot admit any more when his number is compleated. Those gentlemen who confide their children to his care may depend upon every attention being paid by

OPPRESS'D with pain, while racking doubts
  Distract my pensive soul,
While down my cheeks the briny tears,
  In silent anguish roll.

In vain I close my wearied eyes,
  To court refreshing sleep;
The partial blessing is deny'd,
  Still nature wakes to weep.

Pale sorrow shrouds my brightest hopes,
  My fairest prospects fade;
The morn of youth must now give way,
  To night's approaching shade.

As Babel's piles, the sand-built schemes
  Which fancy sought to rear,
In ruins crumble at my feet,
  Or vanish into air.

Behold, fond youth, they seem to say,
  And read thy equal doom;
View there an emblem of thyself,
  The cradle and the tomb!

CERTAIN it is, but alas! little is it regarded, that nothing can give us lasting happiness and peace of mind, but good works—The wealth of the Indies will not purchase them, nor are they the attendants of the most brilliant titles Strikingly illustrative of the truth of this, were the remarkable words delivered by Sir John Mason, who lived and flourished in the reign of Henry VIII Edward VI. Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, of England, towards the latter end of his life; they contain more than is to be found in whole volumes. 'Lo!' says he, 'here have I lived to see five princes, and have been a privy counsellor to four of them. I have seen the most remarkable occurrences in foreign parts, and have been present at most state transactions for thirty years together; and I have learned this, after so many years experience, that seriousness is the greatest wisdom; temperance the best physic, and a good conscience the best estate; and were I to live my life over again, I would change the court for a cloyster, my privy counsellor's buckler for an hermit's retirement, and the whole life I lived in the palace for an hour's enjoyment of God in the chapel. All things else forsake me beside my God, my duty, and my prayer.'

Three Pounds Reward.

RAN away from the subscriber last night a Dutch servant MAN, named John Cosper Eliot, shoemaker, aged about 33 years, is about 5 feet 10 inches high, lusty and square built, broad face, his under jaw rather longer than the upper, light blue eyes, in one of which he has a cast, and short flaxen coloured hair. He has on each arm images imprinted in the skin with Indian ink, and on one the first letters of his name; his right arm has been broken at the wrist and elbow. His cloathing when he went away was a new broad cloth coattee of a lead colour, made with a stand up collar, with wooden buttons, old brown velvet breeches, a half-worn round felt hat, and calico waistcoat; talks very broken English. Whoever takes up said runaway, so that his master may have him again, shall receive the above reward, with reasonable charges, paid by WILLIAM RIDGWAY.

New-Jersey, county of Burlington, township of Willinborough, 9th mo. 24th.

TO BE SOLD,

FIFTY-SIX acres of good marsh meadow on the island of Tinicum, in two different lots, one of which is about 44 acres, divided into four divisions, chiefly by good drains, lying on the main road leading through the township of Tinicum, and is chiefly in clover, blue grass and timothy. The bank belonging to these meadows is in good order, and easy to be maintained. The other lot is upwards of 12 acres, bounded on the river Delaware, and near the other lot. It is enclosed all round with good ditches, and in excellent mowing order, and produces large crops.

Or if more agreeable to a purchaser, the subscriber would sell the plantation whereon he now dwells, being about six miles from Philadelphia, on the main road from thence to the lower counties. This place contains about eighty five acres, upwards of ten acres of orchard of the best of grafted fruit, nearly in its prime; a large proportion of it is in clover, and the remainder suitable for gardening or any kind of grain. There is on this place about twenty acres of woodland, mostly enclosed for a pasture. The house is large and well situate, having an extensive view of the rivers Delaware and Schuylkill, &c. The barn is large, and there is stabling for upwards of forty creatures, with most other necessary out-buildings. The purchaser may have any reasonable time for payment of a considerable part of the purchase money, for either the meadow or plantation. For further particulars enquire of the subscriber, PHILIP PRICE.

Kingsess, 5th mo. 19, 1787. 1awtf

RAN-AWAY this morning at 11 o'clock, from the subscriber, an Indented Negro LAD, named JACK, who is about 19 years of age, and was born in Virginia. It is expected he will attempt the sea, as he was retaken last year and brought from the capes of Delaware: he is short and thick of stature; has a remarkably large mouth, is active, plausible, and exceedingly deceitful: he had on a white linen shirt, a light coloured broadcloth coattee, a spotted yellow plush vest, brown linen trowsers, good shoes with large metal buckles, and a castor hat; and took with him another hat, one striped gingham vest, one fustian and one pair of nankeen breeches, two other linen shirts, and a pair of boots which were his usual apparel; also, a violin, his own property; besides, he stole and carried off, one large linen cloaths bag, one small looking glass, a double milled cloth great coat, one black and one pair corduroy breeches, 3 or 4 fine linen shirts, one red camblet coat, one new bandano handkerchief, and an old blanket. He is suspected of having a plenty of money, of another persons, from the same bad cause, as several purchases he made have been discovered since his elopement. Whoever will apprehend this unprincipled Fellow, and restore him to me, shall have FOUR DOLLARS REWARD and reasonable charges.

JOSEPH WHARTON.

To be Sold by Public Vendue,

At the Old Coffee-House, in the city of Philadelphia, on Wednesday the 17th day of October next, at six o'clock in the Evening,

(If not previously disposed of at private sale)

MOORE-HALL,

THE Estate of the late William Moore, esquire, situate upon the river Schuylkill, in the township of Charles-Town, in the county of Chester, distant 23 miles from this city.

The Estate consists of upwards of 600 acres of most excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Mansion House is spacious, convenient and airy; it is situated upon a high and healthy spot, and commands a most delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Grist-Mill on the premises, near the Mansion House, on a never-failing stream, called Pickering, running through the estate, and watering a great body of meadow; this stream empties itself into the Schuylkill, in front of the house; it formerly supplied water for a saw-mill, which might with much ease, and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Estate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any person inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premises before the day of sale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, esquire, in Arch street, or PETER MILLER, esquire, in Third street. Sept 17 eptf

Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, July 28.

SHOULD a war on the continent take place in consequence of the commotions in Holland, this country must inevitably either directly or indirectly take an active part; the real question being, shall England in another war receive the assistance of the republic? or shall the weight of the United States in that case be given to France.

August 2. A cause determined in his majesty's Court of Prerogative, Dublin, on the 20th instant, entitled Newberg, or Newburgh, the hearing of which lasted thirty-five days. The question was upon the validity of a will, in favor of which the judge pronounced judgment, the plaintiffs recovered.—Of the 35 days arguments, 25 were taken up by the advocates for the defendants.

Extract of a letter from Scilly, July 12.

"Yesterday in the afternoon arrived here the Expedition cutter from a cruize, without any mast standing, having that morning lost all in a storm which was attended with thunder and lightning, which struck one man on the deck dead upon the spot. The day before they fell in with two large Dutch ships bound to America, one of which was leaky, and bearing away for a port to get the leak stopped."

Extract of an authentic letter from Belgrade, near Constantinople, dated June 14.

"It is a known fact, that the conference which the envoy from Russia demanded, before his departure for Cherson, turned upon many points of very great consequence.

I. The Ottoman minister demanded an eclaircisement of the conduct of the Russian consul at Alexandria, where that agent of the empress has held a traiterous correspondent with the rebel beys; the crime is proved by authentic letters which have been intercepted.

II. The Russian consuls, established in Moldavia and Wallachia, do not conduct themselves with more uprightness and probity, than the one established at Alexandria. They grant, without examination, passports, and an unlimited protection to all the subjects of the grand signor, who are willing to go out of his states; by this means, the Russian consuls encourage and favor emigration more and more, which is expressly contrary to the letter of the last treaty, concluded between the two empires.

III. Russia has given an asylum to the fugitive prince of Moldavia, Alexander Mowocordato which is precisely defended by the treaty of Kainargique.

"The Russian envoy not having foreseen these complaints, undertook to lay them before his sovereign. Government expects, with great impatience, satisfaction upon these three points, proportioned to their importance; and still insists very strongly, on being made acquainted with the real design of the empress's Journey to the Crimea.

"The Porte is putting her marine upon the most respectable footing; it is not doubted, but that in a little time, it will be very formidable.—The grand signor was present at the launching of a ship of war of 74 guns, which has been constructed under the direction of Mr. le Roi, a French builder; whose talents are universally acknowledged. That able officer acquitted himself, upon this occasion with all possible glory. The grand sultan gave him a public testimony of his satisfaction, in covering him in the presence of an immense croud of spectators of all ranks, with a superb Pelisse of Ermine? the other officers, his comrades and co-operators, enjoyed also the same favor. There never was a vessel launched with more dexterity, or with more complete success than this was.

"Eight thousand well equipped cavalry are arrived from Asia. This troop was sent to the frontiers of the coast of the Black Sea. It is no longer doubted, but the rebel Mahmud Bacha had been totally defeated in a very bloody engagement: that unhappy man was obliged to retire, with the greatest precipitation, into his fortress, where he is actually besieged: they have very great hopes of taking him. Ten of that Bacha's favorites have been taken; their heads have been sent here, and are actually exposed upon the gate of the Seraglio, where the people croud in multitudes, to view them."

The learned will be pleased to hear a fact, we can announce from authority, that an academy of Polite Arts has been lately established at Mexico, in South America; of Mr. Salma, well known for the fine engravings he executed for Don Quixote, and other works is appointed director. And that they have already begun to print Gazettes in several towns of Spanish America.

Extract of a letter from Madrid, July 16.

"Ever since the change took place in the ministry, and the prince of Asturias being placed at the head of the Escurial cabinet, very visible has been the change of affairs for the better. An extension of the commerce to the East-Indies is virtually intended, and an Oriental Company is talked of to be established by royal charter, who are to revive the long lost traffic from the Phillippine islands, the place of their establishment to be at Cadiz. Upwards of 30,000 soldiers and sailors are now employed in mending and repairing of roads throughout the kingdom, and in making new roads to some principal places.—This is on the plan of France, who constantly, by such means, keeps a body of useful men at home, who would otherwise be withdrawing themselves to other places of subsistence. No new force will be sent to Algiers this summer, notwithstanding the many instances of the dey's breaking the truce, the plague and internal commotions are now making sufficient ravages among those infidels.—The flota for La Vera Cruz, consisting of six ships, will sail next month."

Not at Greve, as usual, but opposite the Monnoye, Quai de Conti, a man was last week hanged for coining six livres pieces.

Before the rope was put about his neck, he made, what is called, the amende honorable, that is, he had his right hand smote off!—and walking bareheaded in his shirt, with a heavy lighted torch in his hand, to the door of the Monnoye, he there fell on his knees, and asked pardon aloud of God, his king, and his country.

His two accomplices are to suffer shortly—They were all three thriving tradesmen.

Extract of a letter from Perth, July 26.

"The workmen, in digging the foundation of the old church at Crieff, discovered a number of gold coins, equal in weight to a modern quarter guinea, but more free from alloy.——The device on one side is St. Andrew stretched out on a cross; the legend ROBERTUS DEI GRATIA REX SCOTIÆ.—On the reverse is a Lion Rampant with a Gothic Arch, with the motto, LIBERAT, by which it seems the coins are that of Robert I. who might, with propriety be styled, LIBERATOR PATRIÆ, as having delivered his country from English oppression. The coins bear no dates, and I believe our ancient Scottish bore none.

"Two urns were also discovered in digging the foundation. The materials were a very coarse kind of brick; the contents ashes of the dead, and half consumed oak. This was probably a burying-place in the Druidical ages, and the first propagators of christianity would not fail to please their new converts, by allowing and consecrating the burial-ground of their ancestors."

Saturday last Edward White, a butcher, of Chipping Sodbury, Gloucestershire, having had a violent quarrel with his wife, whom he had several times threatened with many oaths and imprecations on his soul, singularly horrid, and too shocking to be related to murder before the next morning, went into the fields, and was soon after found speechless, and seemingly in great agonies, in which condition he remained till he expired. Such judicial proceedings of Providence should be regarded as warnings to the prophane and impious, who upon every trivial occasion daringly and presumptuously defy Almighty power, and are often made, even in this world, sad examples of the divine displeasure. An inquest was taken on the body, by Mr Phelps, of Yate, coroner of the county, when no symptoms of poison appearing, as was at first apprehended, nor any marks of violence, it was conjectured that his death proceeded from the violence of anger and excess of passion, with which he had been almost inceasingly agitated for two days.

AMERICA.

NEWBURY-PORT, Sept. 17.

A person from Nova-Scotia informs, that the British squadron on that station is ordered home, immediately.

On Thursday last, the artillery company under the command of major Hodge, and the train band companies under the command of captains Lunt, Keitell, Hoyt, and Wetmore, paraded at 9 o'clock A. M.—The forenoon was spent in military manoeuvres.—In the afternoon they marched to a field about a mile out of town, where they were reviewed by colonel Cross—after which they exhibited a regular field fight, to the universal satisfaction of a large concourse of applauding spectators.——The whole was concluded without any accident.

We hear from Portsmouth, that a few days ago, a woman in that town put off her earthly tabernacle by hanging herself.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.

Last evening captain Goodwin, in the ship Mary, arrived in port from St. Petersburgh, in 84 days. Her cargo hemp, duck, cordage, iron, &c.

COMMERCIAL FACTS.

The new city of Hudson, in New-York state, which stands one hundred and fifty miles above New-York, on the banks of the North-River, and twelve below Albany, promises to embrace a most extensive trade.

We judge from the following facts, and they are facts which should be known to the mercantile world——

The purchase of the soil, and the plan of the city, was not laid down till August 1785.

The purchase was made by a company of Nantucket fishermen, chiefly Quakers, who emigrated from that island on account of its populousness.

In 1786, Hudson was incorporated, and in May last it contained eight hundred houses, two churches, a Quaker's meeting-house, a Catholic chapel, a market-house, two ship yards, four rope-walks, and two distilleries, with several soap and candle manufactories, and there were then two ships on the stocks.

The situation is excellent for foreign commerce, coasting trade and fishing.

Furs and pelts are the principal articles of their exportation.

They have already sent ships the Southern and Falkland isle whale fisheries—to the fishery on the coast of Brazil, and round Cape Horn.

To Newfoundland they have sent a number of smaller vessels, and in November last they fitted out the brig Columbia, 200 tons burthen, Solomon Bunker, master, to India and China.

Two of their ships, the Juno, captain Jenkins, and the Hudson, of 300, are now at Dublin; and all this they have done, though opposed by the inhabitants of Orange, or Albany, a city inhabited by Dutch families.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 25.

The first public examination was held in Erasmus Hall, at Flat-Bush, last Thursday, when his excellency the governor, with a committee of the honorable regency of the University, together with the trustees of the Hall, and a number of other gentlemen from New York, attended. The students were examined in the different branches to which they had applied, and acquitted themselves to the general satisfaction of all present. The premiums were adjudged to the following young gentlemen, viz. in writing, to Rem Martensen and William Lambert; Arithmetic, to Malachi Treat and John Moore; English grammar, to Harry Sands; Latin, to Malachi Treat; and eloquence, to Thomas Ustick and John Johnston.—The proficiency of the scholars, and particularly the specimens in eloquence, afforded great encouragement to the parents who were present, and confirmed the friends of the institution in their expectation, that the attention and abilities of doctor Minto and his assistant, with the care and zeal of the trustees will, under the divine blessing, render this hall a respectable branch of the university of this state, and a benefit to the public.

Sept. 27. The repeated breaches of public faith, says a correspondent, and the variety of laws which have been passed in different states, countenancing the violation of private engagements, have had as ill an influence on our national morals, as on our national character. Honest men must rejoice to see a spirit of honesty running through the NEW CONSTITUTION.—Public spirited men must rejoice to see a prospect of our national reputation being rescued from approbrium and disgrace; and all good men, not blinded by party spirit, must rejoice to see an effort to erect barriers against the establishment of iniquity by law. The convention have at least given a distinguished proof of their attachment to the principles of probity and rectitude.

NEW-BRUNSWICK, Sept. 25.

The storm on Tuesday night last has, we are informed, done great damage. In Monmouth hardly a mill or bridge has escaped; at Colts Neck 14 mills are almost ruined. The counties of Somerset and Middlesex have not been so severely dealt with, though they have sustained great damage.

By a respectable meeting of inhabitants of the county of Somerset, on Monday the seventeenth instant, agreeably to public notice given for that purpose, the following articles were unanimously agreed to:

1st. That we most heartily approve of raising a revenue by excise; but,

2dly. That we disapprove of the mode of collecting it, as prescribed by the present law.

3dly. That we will uniformly aid, to the utmost of our abilities, the measures of our legislature, as far as they may be conducive of utility to the interest and happiness of our country.

4thly. That we think it expedient to comply with the present excise law, so far as to elect a person in whom sufficient confidence may be reposed, who shall purchase the office at as low a price as may be, and engage to let it lay dormant until the legislature can be moved to amend the same in such manner as may be the least exceptionable.

5thly. That a committee be appointed to attend the sale of the office of excise, who shall nominate the person to purchase, and give him such council as may be needful on the occasion.

6thly. That the committee do publish the proceedings of this meeting.

Signed by order of HENRY VANDYKE, Moderator.
JONATHAN F. MORRIS, Clerk.

Somerset, Sept. 1787.

Philadelphia, Oct. 3.

On Wednesday last, his Excellency General Washington passed through Wilmington, on his return from this city to his seat in Mount Vernon—and on the same day, in crossing the bridge near the Head of Elk, the bridge gave way, and the horse fell into the river. His Excellency had alighted, in order to walk over the bridge, which fortunate circumstance probably saved a life so dear to his country. [Wilmington Gazette.]

By letters dated Aug. 29th at Kanawango received some days ago from Mess. Ellicott and Porter, commissioners on the part of the state for ascertaining the Northern boundary of Pennsylvania, we find the work was then advanced to the distance of 195 miles west of the place of beginning at the Delaware. Those gentlemen, with the commissioners of the state of New-York, resumed the business this summer about thirty miles up the Tioga, and a creek running into it (the Tioga is an arm of the eastern branch of the river Susquehanna, from which it forks a few miles south of the boundary) at about 70 miles from the Delaware. After proceeding near 20 miles, during which they crossed the Allegany mountain, diagonally, they arrived at the river Chinessee, which runs in a direction from south to north, towards lake Ontario, and though no more than six perches wide, they found it to be too rapid for boats to ascend. Pursuing hence their western course, they met, in about 15 miles, a small branch of the river Allegany, running nearly west, which, unfortunately (as most of their horses had failed) did not admit of their using canoes for the space of nine miles. At that distance however the waters became practicable, and having formed 5 canoes, at the expence of 5 days labour, they passed, though with some difficulty, down the stream, and having advanced about 9 miles, this branch of the river fell into the Alleganey, which at the place of confluence is 29 perches wide, running to the north, and distant 153 miles and an half from the Delaware. These circumstances make it evident, that the river rises within this state many miles southward of the boundary,—a fact hitherto unknown and unsuspected. Hence the canoes fell down the stream by a bending course (which carries the river at one place 9 or 10 miles wide of the line) northerly, northwesterly and westerly, till changing to south-west they joined the commissioners again at the end of the 184th mile, and then passing down the Alleganey to the mouth of a branch on the north-west side of it, called Kenewango, 9 miles south of the line, they ascended that branch till they again arrived near the situation from which this account has been dispatched. This last river is about 15 perches wide where the boundary intersects it,—runs south, and rises out of a lake of 25 miles extent not far from the east end of lake Erie, according to the accounts of the savages, who add likewise, that lake Erie is not distant more than a short day's walk. The commissioners had received supplies brought by Capt. Porter from Pittsburgh—they had met with no material interruption from the Indians, whose first fears were easily dispelled by a candid explanation, and they consider themselves perfectly safe in the prosecution of their duty——These accounts promise that the rest of the boundary (running along the 42 degree of northern latitude) which is about 55 miles from the river Kanawanga to the north-west corner of the state, will be ascertained this season.

A virulent competition, which vents itself in gross abuse and defamation, has arisen among the candidates for representing the town of Baltimore in General Assembly. It is with pleasure, a correspondent observes, a different conduct is pursued in this city, and that the important business of the election will probably be transacted with that independence which distinguishes the freemen, and with that cordiality which becomes the fellow citizens of a virtuous commonwealth. The crisis is perhaps the most important that has occurred in the annals of Pennsylvania, and at once awes and interests the feelings of every patriot.

In justice to Lewis Castleman, without considering the merits of his petition to the legislature, we think it our duty to inform the public, that the old man's ears and hands do not, upon examination, furnish any evidence of iniquity or infamy.

On Sunday night last, a certain Bryan Connor induced Mr. Michael Connor of this city to leave his bed, on pretence of assisting a drunken man; but, at a small distance from the house, he took up a gun, which seemed to have been secreted for the execution of his barbarous purpose, and exclaiming "What is become of Mrs. Hayes?" he discharged the piece at Michael Connor, and a bullet then entered at that gentleman's throat, which has since been extracted at his right shoulder. These facts have been sworn to before the honorable Mr. Justice Bryan; and we understand that the perpetrator of so daring an assault has been committed to the gaol of this city.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

WEDNESDAY, September 26.

THE house met pursuant to adjournment.

The following petitions were presented, and ordered to lie on the table, viz. The petition of a number of the citizens residing in Philadelphia county, in favour of the constitution recommended by the Fœderal Convention, and the petition of the wardens of the city of Philadelphia, praying that the bill for erecting a permanent bridge over Schuylkill might not be enacted 'till they had received the opinions of the lawyers, whom they had consulted, respecting the rights of the city which they conceive would be infringed by the bill.

The bill for appointing commissioners to regulate the streets, alleys and lanes in the district of Southwark, under consideration yesterday, was resumed upon the motion of postponement, which after a short opposition on the former ground was carried in the negative, and the bill, with a few amendments, was ordered to be engrossed.

The order of the day for taking into consideration, the bill respecting a provision for the compensating those who raised militia men being called up, the consideration thereof was, upon motion, postponed.

The second order of the day for taking up the Schuylkill bridge was brought before the house, but Mr. Fitzsimons stating that the wardens of the city were desirous to be heard by their council against the bill, and several members urging the impractibility of complying with that request during the present sessions, the further consideration of the bill was, on motion, postponed.

Mr. Findley moved that to-morrow be appointed for chusing a recorder for the new county of Huntingdon, and it was resolved accordingly.

The speaker informed the house that he had been requested to lay before them the petition of Mary Bioren, which being read, Mr. D. Clymer observed, that he objected to the commitment of the petition, as he knew the circumstances stated in it to be false, and that the petitioner had received relief in the premises during her attendance upon the house. Upon which Mr. Brackenridge observed, that if the circumstances were false, and the gentleman who spoke last, asserted from his own knowledge, that the lady had received relief in the premises during her attendance upon the house, he hoped she would not be sent to a committee, but that leave would be given to withdraw the petition; which was accordingly done.

On motion, the third reading of the bill for reviving the salaries of the officers in the land office, and for providing a salary for the judge of the admiralty was taken up, and after filling up the blank for the judge's salary with 300l. the bill was ordered to be engrossed.

The house adjourned to meet to-morrow morning at half past 9 o'clock.

THURSDAY, September 27.

The house met pursuant to adjournment.

The following petitions were presented and ordered to lie on the table, viz. A petition from sundry inhabitants of Bedford, praying for a division of that county, and sundry petitions from the inhabitants of the city and county of Philadelphia, amounting to between 3 and 4000, in favour of the new plan of Fœderal government.

The following committees presented their reports, which were ordered to lie on the table, viz. The committee on the petition from the claimants of lands in the county of Luzerne, recommending that two persons be appointed (one by the state and one by the claimants) to survey and estimate the value of their claims, and that other lands of equal value be given in lieu thereof, or certificates bearing interest, payable at a short date: the committee on the transcript of the taxes paid and balances due by the several counties, stating that it had been long the practice at the state treasury to draw upon the county treasurers, that all such drafts which had been paid, were credited to the county paying the same in the said transcript, and recommending a resolution, 'that the succeeding house be earnestly requested to make an early and diligent enquiry into the laws for raising public taxes, and the execution thereof; the committee appointed to visit the Pennsylvania hospital, stating that they had found the same in a condition highly to the honour of the managers and officers of that humane institution; the committee on the letters from Timothy Pickering and others, delivered a bill for authorising the sheriff of Luzerne to confine his prisoners in the gaol of the neighbouring counties, for ascertaining the course of the northwesterly boundary of the said county, and for authorising the commissioners, judges, &c to hold the ensuing election, without requiring the legal qualifications from the electors; and the committee on the petition of Humphrey Fullerton.

The house, agreeably to the order of the day, proceeded to the election of a register of wills and recorder of deeds for the county of Huntingdon.—The candidates were, Andrew Henderson, and Lazarus M'Lean—the former had 36 votes, and the latter 26.

The bill which was under consideration yesterday, for granting a compensation to the persons engaged in raising men for the militia, during the late war, was taken up, and being debated by paragraphs, it was ordered to be engrossed.

The bill for continuing the laws for regulating the highways, &c. was taken up, and being considered by paragraphs, was ordered to be engrossed.

The speaker observed, that if it was the intention at the present sessions of the house, to pass the bill respecting the county of Luzerne, which was reported by a committee this morning, it would be necessary to call it up for a second reading, and the same was accordingly called up by Mr. Fitzsimons. But Mr. Whitehill objected that it would be impracticable to carry the measure into a law during the present assembly, even if it would be proper to do it at any time. As far as the bill went to provide for the confinement of the prisoners, and for ascertaining the boundaries of the county, he did not wish to oppose it; but the clause respecting the ensuing election, he hoped would never meet the approbation of the house. To this Mr. Findley added, that though he was a member of the committee that had reported the bill, he agreed in opinion with Mr. Whitehill and should vote for the former part of the bill, but oppose the latter. The question being put, the bill was taken up by paragraphs, and on the clause for empowering the commissioners to hold the ensuing election in Luzerne, without requiring the legal qualification from the electors, the following debate arose:

Those members who opposed the clause argued to this effect:

Mr. Speaker, We cannot perceive either the necessity or propriety of the measure proposed to this house. It is not necessary, sir, for the county already possesses all the right of proceeding to an election, that it is in our power to give them; and we very well know that many other counties, nay, the whole state in one year, transacted the business of the general election, although the electors had not paid taxes within that year, agreeably to the form of the constitution. This is a matter that arises from mere necessity, and ought to be left to the discretion of the officers, without the interposition of the legislature to establish a dangerous and unconstitutional precedent. But, sir, we go one step farther, and assert, that it is improper to adopt this part of the bill; for what right have the inhabitants of Luzerne to a share in the offices of government, since they bear no share of its burthens? Taxation and representation are inseparably allied in every well framed constitution; and though we reluctantly bring this argument into public view, it ought to be remembered that enough has already been done by the former law upon this subject, to accommodate the refractory disposition of the persons for whom it was made: and the effect it has produced, should certainly induce us to return to the constitutional path from which we have so unsuccessfully deviated.

To this it was answered:—Mr. Speaker.—The fate of the bill before us, involves very important consequences; and we cannot but ascribe to those who oppose it, a spirit inclined to foment and perpetuate the discord that prevails in that part of the state in which this clause is meant to operate. From the particular circumstances of Luzerne, it has been impracticable to assess and collect the public taxes, but shall the people be disfranchised for the neglect, or incapacity of the officers? And surely it is unjust to say, that they shall suffer for not paying what they never have been asked to pay. But it has been observed that the commissioners, &c. may without this clause proceed to the election.—Sir, the officers of the election are bound by their oaths, as they stand at present, not to receive any man's vote, who has not paid taxes, or rather (which by the bye, is surely as great a deviation from the constitution as this act will amount to) who has not been assessed for the payment of taxes.

Without the provision now proposed, therefore it is impossible that any vote should be received, since no man in that county comes within the description of a taxable. If, upon the whole, the clause now in discussion is not adopted, the other regulations of the bill must become nugatory, since if they have no election, they can have no sheriff, or any other elective officer.

The question being put, the clause was rejected, but upon a re-consideration on the motion of Mr. G. Clymer, and a repetition of the former arguments, with some additional ones, it was finally adopted, and the bill ordered to be engrossed.

On motion of Mr. Will, the bill for regulating chimney sweeps in the city of Philadelphia was read a third time, and ordered to be engrossed.

The house adjourned to meet to-morrow morning at half past 9 o'clock.

Particulars of the loss of the Schooner Unity, Capt. William Warner, of Middletown.

Mess. Woodward & Green,

I arrived in this city the night before last from a very disastrous and unfortunate voyage at sea. As a number of your customers may be anxious to know the particulars, should be obliged to you to insert the following information in your useful paper.

On the morning of the 23d of August last, lying in the harbour of Guadaloupe, the weather squally, attended with heavy rains and gusts of wind by intermissions, and so continuing till 1 o'clock, P. M. when a heavy gale set in at E. N. E. driving me to sea with both my anchors a-head—Finding the gale continued, and no possibility of my vessel bringing up, and being cleared out, got my cables and anchors on board and put the vessel before the wind, and continued scudding till 6 o'clock, P. M. when the wind shifted to N. E. and remained in that point till 7 o'clock, P. M. then shifted instantaneously to S. E. which hove my vessel on her beam ends, with my masts heads in the water. We began to lighten her of the mainmast by cutting it away; but unfortunately the ax came off the helve after a few strokes, and before we could obtain another, the vessel had received such a quantity of water, that it burst open her steerage doors and filled immediately. Finding ourselves in that deplorable situation; we had no other alternative but to lash ourselves to the chains, and that part of the vessel which was above water, and throw ourselves entirely upon the merciful interposition of Divine Providence.—At 10 o'clock, P. M. our foremast gave way by the deck, when she righted a few feet, and headed the wind and sea: when I ordered the people to shift themselves, finding that the sea had not so great a rake abaft as forward. About 11 o'clock our quarter deck blew up and floated from the wreck. Not long after the mainmast followed. We then lashed ourselves to the horse-piece and stern knee. Finding the vessel gradually sinking forward, we remained in that situation, without any thing to support ourselves, until we were taken off from the wreck the 25th, by captain John M'Lellan, bound to Guadaloupe.—About an hour after we were taken from the wreck, we discovered a wreck to the leeward of us: in coming up with her, we found her to be a sloop from Demarara, dismasted, commanded by one capt. Armstrong, belonging to Piscataqua (New-Hampshire) which captain M'Lellan took in tow, and carried into St. Eustatia.

In the unfortunate event were lost in the schooner Unity from this place, Mess. Joseph and John Henshaw, merchants, and Samuel Cunningham, jun. of Middletown: together with Noah R. Smith, John Morton and Jonathan Lambert, of Chatham.

The people taken from the wreck, are, Myself, Mr. Loudon Bailey, mate, John Breemer, Joseph Sharp and Curtiss Cumstock.

Too much praise cannot be given to Mr. Bailey, my mate, and to the rest of the people, for their exertions in endeavouring to save the people and vessel, and their patience and fortitude in their suffering on the wreck.

Your humble servant,
WILLIAM WARNER.

HORACE, Book II. Ode III.
IMITATED.

Æquam memento rebus in arduis.

O FRIEND, amid this transient scene
Of intermingled joy and wo,
Still learn to keep a soul serene,
Nor swell too high, nor sink too low.

Whether involv'd in thought you sit,
And pensive muse the hours away;
Or, 'midst the flow of wine and wit,
At ease indulge the festal day;

Within your favourite bower reclin'd,
Around where freshest odours breathe,
Where varied shades aloft are twin'd,
And limpid waters purl beneath;

Here be the sparkling goblet crown'd,
The liberal board with garlands drest;
Be short-liv'd roses scatter'd round,
While fate permits you to be blest,

Too soon your villa's stately pride,
And all the useless wealth you spare,
Your spreading lawns, and meadows wide,
Shall go to glut some unknown heir.

All mortal born, alike our doom;
The prince, the peasant and the slave,
Alike all journey to the tomb:
In dust all mingle in the grave.

A N E C D O T E.

AN extraordinary instance of greatness of mind has lately been exhibited at Vienna. The emperor having a vacant place, which he intended to dispose of in favour of the son of the Comte de Palsy, sent for the comte, and informed him of his gracious intention. The comte, after every suitable expression of gratitude, intreated permission to observe, that his son was a young man already possessing a considerable fortune, and of great expectations; not therefore in want of any additional income, the comte expressed a wish that the place might be given to some father of a family, whose slender income would render it a desirable object. His Imperial Majesty still persisting to press an acceptance of the offer, comte de Palsy thus finally addressed his sovereign: "Sire, I consent that my son should accept the appointment with which you propose to honour him; but I implore your majesty to permit the salary annexed to it to be allotted to some person less happy in circumstances." The emperor, sensibly affected by such a rare instance of true greatness of mind, consented to the requisition of the comte, whose son enjoys the place, and the profits are appropriated to an aged father of an impoverished family. The best inference to be deduced from this anecdote, so honorable to human nature, is the following admonitory sentence—Go and do thou likewise.

Twenty tons of smiths COAL to be sold out of the above brig, at Mr. Carson's wharf. eotf

LANDS FOR SALE
IN MARYLAND.

THE subscriber has for sale, all that TRACT of LAND called Beall's Plantation and Beteman's Field (being part of Snowden's Reputation Supported) containing from a late survey 676 and a half acres, situate on the head of South river, Anne Arrundel county, about 3 miles from navigable water, 12 from the city of Annapolis, 28 from Baltimore town, 24 frow George town, and about 7 from the Inspection Houses of Indian Landing and Queen Anne, is well adapted for corn, wheat, and particularly tobacco.

This Plantation has not been tenanted for 3 years is a most pleasing and desirable situation, and capable of great improvement at a small expence; there are 259 acres of timber land, a greater part of which is very valuable. The subscriber would prefer disposing of the whole in one lot; but has no objection to making several of it: the timber land is conveniently situated for making such divisions in equal proportions, & there are many pleasant situations for erecting different buildings; it is also well watered—A very good mill stream runs through it, and there is some meadow ground, and much more may be very readily made.

The improvements upon it are, a good dwelling house with three large rooms on each floor, kitchen, quarter, corn house, stables, tobacco house, and two very fine apple orchards, one of which contains 220 trees, together with a number of other valuable fruit trees.

A plan of this estate may be seen at Mr. Vachel Stevens, surveyor, Annapolis, who will shew the premises; also at Mess. William Patterson & Brother's, Baltimore, and further information had. For price, terms, &c. apply to JOHN WADDINGTON.

BY virtue of a writ of venditioni exponas, to me directed, will be exposed to public sale, on Friday the 5th day of October next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the dwelling house of John Fowler, situate and lying in Lampeter township, a certain tract or piece of Land containing 403 acres, with a Merchant Mill and other improvements, adjoining lands of John Kirk, John Brisbin, Jacob Hartman, and others. Also, one Lot of Ground, situate and lying in Haines-town, in said township, adjoining lands of Adam Fellow, Jacob Houser, and others; together with a variety of houshold and kitchen Furniture too tedious to mention; late the property of said John Fowler. Seized and taken in execution by John Miller, sheriff.

To be Sold by Public Vendue,

At the Old Coffee-House, in the city of Philadelphia, on Wednesday the 17th day of October next, at six o'clock in the Evening,
(If not previously disposed of at private sale)

MOORE-HALL,

THE Estate of the late William Moore, esquire, situate upon the river Schuylkill, in the township of Charles-Town, in the county of Chester, distant 23 miles from this city.

The Estate consists of upwards of 600 acres of most excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Mansion House is spacious, convenient and airy; it is situated upon a high and healthy spot, and commands a most delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Grist Mill on the premises, near the Mansion House, on a never-failing stream, called Pickering, running through the estate, and watering a great body of meadow; this stream empties itself into the Schuylkill, in front of the house; it formerly supplied water for a saw mill, which might with much ease, and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Estate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any person inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premises before the day of sale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, esquire, in Arch street, or PETER MILLER, esquire, in Third street. Sept 17 eptf

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be exposed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thursday the 29th of November next, at the Court-House in Harford county, state of Maryland,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

Those who wish to view the land, on application to Mess. Ashton and Waters, the present tenants, will be shewn it. Possession will be given the 1st of January, if required. The title good and free of all incumbrances. The terms will be easy to the purchaser, and will be made known on the day of sale, by Wm. WEST.

Baltimore, September 6, 1787. dtf

WHEREAS Samuel Baker, of the city of Philadelphia, merchant, has by assignment made over his Estate, Merchandize and Book Debts to the subscribers, as assignees, to act for the benefit of his creditors—Those having demands are requested to furnish their accounts; and all who are indebted, are earnestly desired to make speedy payment to Arthur Collins, acting assignee—Who has for sale on the most advantageous terms for cash, at James Wilson's store, Second, between Market and Arch streets, a general Assortment of seasonable DRY GOODS.

Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, June 5.

A Letter from Venice, dated April 14, says, 'Much business has lately been done in our arsenal, and reconnoitering vessels have been dispatched to Dalmatia, and the island of Corfu.—Our republic are to take an actual and open part in the war which is breaking out between Russia and the Porte, and the object is to recover a part of our ancient possessions, such as the island of Cyprus, Candy, &c. All letters from foreign powers are now read in the senate with uncommon secrecy.'

August 2. The queen of France has had lately erected for her, an elegant and commodious apiary, with a fine south prospect, near a beautiful cottage, from which her bees are watched. It is situated in a fine garden, embellished with the choicest flowers, pines, and the sweet smelling cedar. Her majesty is a great virtuoso in bees; and this surely does her honour; for what unity and loyalty, what obedience and industry, what policy and affection, in short, what moral virtue is there that these little animals do not possess.

Prince Frederick Cesi, Institutor of the Roman Academy of Sciences, has written very elaborately on bees; and of this illustrious writer the queen of France has a very fine portrait; but the most beautiful picture of this kind is one in the king's collection, viz. Philliscus retired into a wood to watch the operations of bees. Elegance is diffused through the whole of this interesting piece; and it stands near the charming Lydian queen.

No man better knew than the Chancellor, what was the value of the diocese of Durham. He had a calculation and survey made of it, by which it appears, that it contains 185 parishes, is 107 miles in circumference, and measures 612,000 acres of land, with 16 rivers 20 bridges, 21 parks, and 4 castles. The Cathedral is the richest in England. The bishop is lord of the manor, and enjoys a civil as well as an ecclesiastical jurisdiction. It is a county palatine, and once had a parliament of its own—but Henry VII. took that away, and it sent no members of parliament until 1675. It is a remarkable place for good ale, a liquor of which all the Thurlows are extremely fond.

At the assizes at Gloucester, was tried, before Mr. Baron Perryn and special jury, a cause not only of the utmost importance to the parties (no less than 40 000l depending upon the verdict) but also to the public at large, and particularly to the trading part of it. The action was brought by Mr Chas. Eddy, against Messrs. Glover and York, for the sum of 266l. being the value of goods belonging to the plaintiff, and lost in the Trow, Hero, that was sunk on the 14th of March 1785, in her voyage from Gloucester to Bristol. The law laid down by the counsel, was admitted by the learned judge, that every carrier of goods by land or water was answerable to his employer for the safe delivery of their goods, unless their loss was occasioned by the act of God, or the king's enemies.—In this case it was proved to the satisfaction of the court, and a most crowded audience, that the loss of this Trow was owing to the rapid and irresistable force of the tide, and the sudden shifting of a sand bank; and that every precaution had been taken by the master of the vessel, to prosecute his voyage in the safest and most expeditious manner; and that no human foresight could possibly have guarded against this accident. The jury, therefore, after a hearing of more than eight hours, found a verdict for the defendants; but at the same time observed, that the most slight proof of negligence or carelessness, on the part of the defendants, would have been sufficient to have authorised them to give a verdict to the plaintiff. Let the owners of vessels and other carriers therefore take the utmost care whom they employ, and what vessels they make use of, as the proof of any defect in the vessel, or of one drunken sailor being on board, would have saddled the defendants with payment of a sum that would have been their utter ruin. Counsel for the plaintiffs, Messrs. Burton, Plummer, and Richardson; attorney, Mr. Thoresby, King's Arms-yard Coleman street, London.——For the defendants, Messrs. Adair, Bearcroft, and Bower; attorney, Mr. Burgess, Bristol.

On Monday last a foot race was run near Smither's barn, about half a mile from Brighton, between Flint, of Chalwood, Surry, and Paine, of Appledore, in Kent, for 100 guineas. The former is a stout muscular man; the latter thin, and morbid in his appearance. The bets, of course, ran high in favour of Flint—five guineas were given for a bet of one hundred—and immediately before the race, 50 guineas to 40, and 6 to 4 was the currency of the field, the course was 110 yards, railed in for the purpose. In the race it appeared, that the idea of the late king of Prussia, in preferring velocity for weight, was perfectly justifiable; Flint being nearly distanced by his lighter opponent, who shot beyond him with the swiftness of an arrow. It is computed that not less than 12,000 guineas were transferred by this contest, as the gentlemen were deeply interested, exclusively of the bets which were laid on the spot.

To form Great Britain and the United Provinces into one republic, was a favourite object of Oliver Cromwell's. The following speech of his on that subject to the Dutch ambassador, is translated from the French of Basnage——Annales des Provinces Unies:

'We enjoy the same religion, nor can we do any thing more agreeable to the Deity, or better resist the enemies of our holy reformation, than by uniting ourselves together. No personal interest engages me to propose the union of the two republics; the avowed object of all my actions has been the glory of God, a sufficient test of my sincerity.—Satisfied with being the instrument of Heaven in performing a work of such consequence to religion, I desire no individual advantage from it. Let the two nations constitute one and the same people. Let them be governed by one sovereign parliament, in which the United Provinces shall have their deputies. I, in the same degree with every other subject, will obey this august tribunal; I will retain no authority but what they shall think proper to delegate to my hands.' We have given the above curious fact, as it is little known in this country, and hardly mentioned by any of our historians.

By private advices, lately received by a respectable member of administration we are informed of the following circumstance relative to the young prince of Orange:

Upon the princess his mother being lately obliged to retire to Nimeguen, count Bentick (who is generally said to be influenced by too much zeal in the party he espouses) said to him, 'Now, Sir, is the time for your father to imitate Amilcar, the father of Hannibal, and swear you at the altar never to forgive or forget those daring insurgents.'——To which the prince very coolly, yet firmly replied;

'Monf. le Comte, I hope I shall always feel a proper sense of duty to my parents; and as to forgetting those recent insults, whilst matters are in their present situation, I believe I shall not readily do so; but upon a proper reparation of those wrongs, I hope I am too good a Dutchman not to forgive and forget.'

His royal highness is about 17

On Tuesday last, the long depending match of cricket, between Essex and Kent, was decided at Swanscombe, when the former gained a complete victory over their adversaries in that noble game, at only one inning, and had 44 notches to spare.—This so exasperated the gentlemen of Kent, that they would not even drink with their competitors.

BELLA, HORRIDA BELLA.

As Great Britain must take an active part in the approaching wars, Uncle Toby (duke of Richmond) is furnishing up all the cannon at the Tower, and preparing to fortify Earth and Blackwall, as the Dutch no doubt, will make an attempt to land at Tower Stairs, the city artillery company, headed by Sir Wilkin Lewes, are to take their station on a kind of tower to be built on the Monument, they being such excellent marksmen, that they will be able to shoot the Dutch Admiral and the Dutch Captains on the quarter deck, should they attempt a landing at the Old Swan, or at Pepper Alley Stairs. Uncle Toby also means to erect a strong battery at his house in Prevy Garden, which shall command Hungerford Stairs, and the four landing places at Westminster bridge, so that the Dutch, if they do force a passage up the Thames, will be by these wise precautions, necessitated to land at Chelsea, where the pensioners would soon put them to death; or at Vauxhall or Cumberland Gardens, where the Orange regiment of city militia, and a detachment of the Bow-street constables will give them such a reception, and where Reilly's guns will so annoy them, that few of the Mynheers will be able to make their way to seize upon the royal family, the bank, and the lord mayor. The Woolwich boys are to be encamped at Deptford, and the other military schools to do duty at the Red House, and other parts on the banks of the Thames, particularly at King Edward's Stairs, Princes Stairs, Execution Dock, and Horsleydown.—What then, is the Dutch war to this country? Nothing.——Who's afraid?

A cottager in the neighbourhood of Acton, has made himself a weather glass upon a peculiar construction; it is a rude carving of a parsonage house, situate in a Church yard. In fair weather, a fine well fed portly clergyman comes out, but in rainy weather a poor thin half starved curate. The curate has been upon duty ever since St. Swithin's day, except on Friday last.

Extract of a letter from Nimeguen, July 26.

'An ordinance has been published by the prince, concerning the navigation of the Lecke and Wahal rivers, of which the stadtholderian troops have the entire command—by which it is directed that no boats, barges, or other vessels shall be in any degree obstructed, paying the usual tolls, and conforming to the necessary regulation. This forbearance on the part of his royal highness, cannot fail to add to the number of his friends and well wishers.'

August 4. In consequence of some ambiguous proceedings in the court of France, we sent over about a month ago a memorial, demanding an explanation on several heads. The answer to this memorial only arrived about the middle of last week, and was couched in terms both unsatisfactory and contemptuous; in consequence of which Mr. Pitt, who had hitherto been much averse to war, entered entirely into the opposite councils, and a system at once both bold, vigorous, and decisive was adopted. To support the stadtholder, cost what it might, was the first resolve; and a second memorial, notifying this resolution, in very high spirited language, was committed to the care of Mr Eden, who set out on Saturday night; at the same time, Mr. Grenville was dispatched to the stadtholder, to inform him of this decision in our cabinet, and another messenger to Berlin, with similar dispatches to his Prussian majesty.

Previous however to this resolve, the Prussian monarch, anxious for the safety and interests of the stadtholder, and not much pleased with the dilatory pacific measures of our ministry, had determined to take the field; and by the arrival of the duke of York we learn, that 3000 troops have marched accordingly. This is the real state of affairs at this moment; and it appears, that unless France abandon the patriotic party in Holland, and a line of conduct politic in every point of view, and which she is now nearly reaping the fruits of—a war in Europe is inevitable.

AMERICA.

St. JOHN's (New-Brunswick) Aug. 28.

On Wednesday last arrived in this city from Fredericton, his excellency brigadier-general Carleton, lieutenant-governor and commander in chief, &c. &c. His excellency, on his landing, was saluted from the guns on the battery of Fort Howe. On Friday his excellency reviewed the royal artillery and 54th regiment, who went through their military manœuvres, evolutions and firings, with an adroitness and exactitude that did them great honor. Yesterday his excellency sailed for Shelburne, in the brigantine Brandywine, from whence he will proceed to Halifax, and return by the way of Windsor and Annapolis Royal, reviewing the king's forces at their different stations.

Sept. 14. On Sunday last a boat in which were eight persons, was suddenly overset by a violent flaw of wind, near the entrance of the Long Reach. By this unhappy accident, Mrs. Elms, wife of Mr. Thomas Elms of this city, her son about nine years of age, and Mrs. Woodward, wife of Mr. Jesse Woodward, of Beaver-harbour, were all drowned. The first notice Mr. Elms had of this melancholy event, was the sight of his wife's corpse, which together with that of Mrs. Woodward, were brought to town the same day, and on the Monday following were attended to the grave by near 400 people.—The boy is not yet found. The case of Mr. Elms is much pitied, who has lost an agreeable wife and an only child.

Last evening a boat with several casks of wine, 6 barrels of tobacco, &c. &c. was seized by the officers of his majesty's customs.

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 11.

Extract of a letter from Weston, to a gentleman in this town.

DEAR SIR,

———Weather for the month past, we have had of almost every sort, from the dead suffocating calm to the horrors of a hurricane. On Wednesday the 15th of last month, a most violent gale of wind, accompanied with great rain and some thunder, passed over this town. In the morning, and nearly until 5 o'clock P. M. the wind was strong at S. with great clouds. About 11 it began to thunder at a distance, which continued at times through the day, however, the day until 5 P. M was not so unfriendly but that many of the farmers were getting in their hay from the meadows; about 5 a large cloud, or rather a number of clouds, for they were flying in all directions, collected and rose at about W. S. W. which in a few moments, by the strength of a furious wind, passed over this town towards E. N. E. accompanied with a noise not unlike water rushing down a precipice. It crossed the great road at E. Greenleaf's, Esq. where it blew down a low new board fence, and carried off a shed adjoining his house; from thence, in width about 60 rods, it passed over some low grounds, and in its way, took a cart, laden with hay, drawn by two oxen and a horse, which the driver is very confident he saw pass over him. After the gust was over, it was found placed a few rods from where the wind first took it broken and both wheels off, and the oxen and horse which drew it, unyoked and unharnessed, and the hay gone. The driver was raised a full rod, carried over some alders and dropped in a meadow without injury. It then passed through a lot of fine oaks, and some pines, belonging to Mr. Jonas Harrington, where it blew down every pine of any bigness, and tore up and broke the chief of the oaks, and laid them in every direction—an oak or walnut of about 18 inches diameter, it twisted like a withe, and left standing as a monument of the power of air, when put into a violent spiral motion. The last act that we know of before it ceased was, about a mile further N. E. where it took a lad at work in a meadow, carried him some rods, and lodged him in a bunch of alders. It is observable that while passing from low to higher ground, it did little or no injury, even to the standing corn!

To a pious and philosophic mind, the wisdom and power of a supreme intelligent Being are as really discoverable in the buzzing of a fly as in the horrors of a storm; but sometimes to alarm the thoughtless and awaken the secure, "God makes the cloud his chariot, and has his way in the whirlwind and in the storm."

NEW-YORK, October 1.

A fleet of Barbary corsairs, consisting of a chebeck of 34 guns, a bark of 30, one of 28, one of 26, one of 22, one of 18, and a small chebeck of 16, were, it is asserted, at sea the 25th of July, last.

Some speculative writers have maintained the necessity of frequent wars to prevent the earth from being too fully peopled. This is one of those ingenious methods of accounting for events, by feigning a cause which is so frequently to be met with in books of theory. The Dutch seem, however, to embrace the proposition, for they are contriving to cut the throats of each other without any real cause of dispute, as if they thought it absolutely necessary to lessen the number of the people.

LANSINGBOROUGH, Sept. 24.

Salem, Washington County, Sept. 19, 1787.

Mess. Printers,

IN the Worcester Magazine for the first week in September, there appeared the following paragraph: 'We are told that a very extraordinary Meteor was, about four o'clock in the afternoon of Thursday last, seen at Lancaster, and some of the neighbouring towns. It appeared very large, and separated, it is said, with a great explosion, into three parts, which parts soon burst and disappeared.'

On reading, I immediately adverted to my memorabilia, and found that precisely at the time above mentioned, a meteor was observed by many persons in this place—An account of which appearance, as given by several judicious persons of unquestionable veracity, who all agree in the principal circumstances, may not be unentertaining to your philosophical readers.

At nearly the eastern point, from the height of about 18 degrees above the horizon, an igneous ball, apparently 14 or 15 inches in diameter, was observed, as from behind a light silvery cloud, gradually descending towards the earth: when at about 6 or 7 degrees from the horizon, it diverged, and at once disappeared. To this ball was connected a fuise, or cydrindical column, highly luminous, apparently of 5 or 6 feet in length, and 2 or 3 inches in diameter: it followed the ball in a perpendicular direction, and remained visible and stationary for several seconds after the globe had diverged and evaporated, when it gradually ascended and disappeared. The separation into three parts, as mentioned in the Worcester account, was not (as I can learn) observed here. All my informants agree in describing the separation as an unfolding and diverging of the igneous globe. Nor was any explosion whatever heard at this place.

Comparing all things together—the time, the point of compass, &c. no doubt can remain of this being the same phænomenon observed at Lancaster. It were to be wished that those gentlemen who in any part of the country may have made observations on this appearance, would be kind enough to publish them, as they would afford satisfaction to the literary world, and might conduce to the improvement of meteorological knowledge.

Yours, &c.
S. J. HONEYWOOD.

A gentleman from the northward advises, that as he was passing through Kingsborough, in Washington county, he was agreeably surprized to see, as it were in a wilderness, Capt. Seth Sherwood dressed in regimentals, at the head of a company of young hardy veterans, who performed the military manœuvres with the greatest dexterity. Capt. Sherwood informed him, that in a circle which now contains seven companies, before the late contest contained one only. If the frontiers of this state continue to populate in a similar proportion a few years more, what power will dare to disturb them?

The Examination, on oath, on the 1st inst. of Michael Connor, of in the Northern Liberty Township, in the county of Philadelphia, tavern-keeper, who deposeth and saith,

THAT yesterday, between the hours of and of the clock, in the afternoon, Bryan Connor, alias Brian O'Connor, of the city of Philadelphia, trader and dealer, came to the dwelling of this deponent, accompanied by one —— Slesman, by trade a taylor, and calling for wine, drank thereof two half pints; that afterwards about 11 of the clock of the evening of yesterday, this deponent being in his bed, said Bryan came again to this deponent's dwelling, and knocking thereat, induced this deponent to rise from his bed, and open his door; that thereupon the said Bryan sat down at the front door of this deponent's dwelling, and called for and had two other half pints of wine delivered to the said Bryan of which he drank that after having so drank of said wine, said Bryan requested of this deponent, that he would go with him to Wilcox Philips's dwelling, to take a drunken man; that under this pretence this deponent left his dwelling, and went out with the said Bryan; that this deponent and said Bryan being not far from and nearly opposite to this deponent's dwelling aforesaid, arrived at a fence, where said Bryan took up a gun, which had been secreted there, and asked this deponent, What is become of Mrs. Hays? To which deponent replied, I do not know what is become of her, nor any thing about her; that thereupon the said Bryan said to this deponent, You lie, you damned rascal; that this deponent seeing the gun in the hand of the said Bryan, asked the said Bryan, Do you mean to kill me? that said Bryan withdrawing from this deponent to the distance of , and pointing the muzzle of the gun aforesaid at this deponent, snapt the lock thereof twice without discharging the same gun, without any other effect, but snapping the said lock the third time, the load of the said gun was discharged, and part thereof, viz one leaden ball thereout discharged, entered the throat of this deponent, and that the said ball has since been extracted out of this deponent's shoulder.

An Address of the Subscribers Members of the late House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to their Constituents.

GENTLEMEN,

WHEN in consequence of your suffrages at the last election we were chosen to represent you in the General Assembly of this commonwealth, we accepted of the important trust, with a determination to execute it in the best manner we were able; and we flatter ourselves we acted in such a manner as to convince you, that your interests with that of the good of the state has been the object of our measures.

During the fall a spring sessions of the legislature, on the recommendation of the Congress of the United States, your representatives proceeded to the appointment of delegates to attend a convention to be held in the city of Philadelphia, for the purposes of revising and amending the present articles of confederation, and to report their proceedings to Congress, and when adopted by them, and ratified by the several states, to become binding on them as part of the confederation of the United States. We lamented at the time, that a majority of our legislature appointed men to represent this state who were all citizens of Philadelphia, none of them calculated to represent the landed interest of Pennsylvania, and almost all of them of one political party, men who have been uniformly opposed to that constitution for which you have on every occasion manifested your attachment. We were apprehensive at the time, of the ill consequences of so partial a representation, but all opposition was in vain. When the convention met, members from twelve states attended, and after deliberating upwards of four months on the subject, agreed on a plan of government which was sent forward by them to Congress, and which was reported to the house by the delegates of Pennsylvania as mere matter of information, and printed in the newspapers of the city of Philadelphia; but the house had not received it officially from Congress, nor had we the least idea, that as the annual election was so near, we should be called upon to deliberate, much less to act on so momentous a business; a business of the utmost importance to you and your posterity. We conceived it required the most minute examination and mature consideration, and that it ought to be taken up by the next house. Judge then of our surprise on finding the last day but one in the sessions, a member of the house who had been a delegate in the convention, without any previous notice or any intimation of his intentions to the house, offer a resolution recommending the calling a convention to consider of the proposed constitution, and to direct the electing members for the same, at so early a period as the day of your annual election, thus attempting to surprise you into a choice of members—to approve or disapprove of a constitution, which, is to entail happiness or misery forever without giving time to the greatest part of the state even to see, much less to examine the plan of government.

Our duty to ourselves and our regard for your dearest interests induced us to oppose the measure by every possible argument that we could suggest at the time; but all our efforts were insufficient even to produce a postponement until the afternoon. We urged and urged in vain the constant practice of the house when any important business was to be brought on, of giving previous notice and making it the order of the day sometime before hand; that no bill, however trifling, was passed without three readings, and without this formality which gave the members time and opportunity to think on the subject; that the rules were adhered to so strictly, that even the building of a bridge, or the laying out a road, could not be determined on without this form; but this, the most important of all matters, was to be done by surprise, and as we conceived with design to preclude you from having it in your power to deliberate on the subject. Our anxiety for your interests was great, but notwithstanding the firmest and most determined opposition, no respite could be obtained, and the first resolution was adopted by a majority of the house, when they adjourned till the afternoon to complete the business. In these circumstances we had no alternative, we were under a necessity of either returning to the house, and by our presence enabling them to call a convention before our constituents could have the means of information, or time to deliberate on the subject, or by absenting ourselves from the house, prevent the measure taking place. Our regard for you induced us to prefer the latter, and we determined not to attend in the afternoon. We conceived that at the time we were chosen you had no view to this business, and we could see no inconvenience nor loss of time from deferring a matter of such importance and which would in its consequences affect or perhaps, annihilate our own constitution, as well as that of every constitution in the union to a house chosen after the people had some knowledge of the plan, especially as the next house will meet at so early a period, and a convention could be called by them time enough to meet in a few months, which would be as early as any state in the union, and would be allowing you time to make up your minds on a matter which appeared to us to require so much deliberation. Thus circumstanced and thus influenced, we determined the next morning, again to absent ourselves from the house, when James M'Calmont, esquire, a member from Franklin, and Jacob Miley, esquire, a member from Dauphin, were seized by a number of citizens of Philadelphia, who had collected together for that purpose, their lodgings were violently broken open, their cloaths torn, and after much abuse and insult, they were forcibly dragged through the streets of Philadelphia to the State house, and there detained by force, and in the presence of the majority, who had, the day before, voted for the first of the prosed resolutions, treated with the most insulting language; while the house so formed proceeded to finish their resolutions, which they mean to offer to you as the doings of the legislature of Pennsylvania. On this outrageous proceeding we make no comment. The inhabitants of Franklin and Dauphin have been grossly insulted by the treatment of their members: We know the feelings of the people of these counties are sufficiently keen; it becomes us, not to add to them by dwelling longer on the subject; but as our conduct may, and we have no doubt, will be misrepresented, we thought it our duty to lay before our constituents, to whom alone we are accountable, a real state of facts; that they may judge for themselves. We need not tell you, that we could have no interested motive to influence our conduct. A sense of that duty which we owed to you and to ourselves, could have alone induced us to submit to the variety of abuse and insults which many of us have experienced, for not consenting to a measure that might probably have surprised you into a surrender of your dearest rights. Our conduct has at least had the good effect to lengthen out the time of election, and induced them to postpone the election for members of the convention until the first Tuesday in November next; whereas the resolution first proposed, directed it to be holden for all the counties east of Bedford, on the day of the annual election, nine days from the time of proposing the measure.

We cannot conclude without requesting you to turn your serious attention to the government now offered to your consideration: "We are persuaded that a free and candid discussion of any subject tends greatly to the improvement of knowledge, and that a matter in which the public are so deeply interested cannot be too well understood. A good constitution and government is a blessing from heaven, and the right of posterity and mankind; suffer then we intreat you no interested motive, sinister view, or improper influence to direct your determinations or biass your judgements." Provide yourselves with the new constitution offered to you by the convention, look it over with attention that you be enabled to think for yourselves. We confess when the legislature appointed delegates to attend the convention, our ideas extended no farther than a revision or amendment of the present confederation, nor were our delegates, by the acts of assembly appointing them, authorised to do more, as will appear by referring to the said act, the second section of which describes their powers in the following words, viz.

2. Be it enacted, and it is hereby enacted by the representatives of the freemen of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania in general assembly met, and by the authority of the same, That Thomas Mifflin, Robert Morris, George Clymer, Jared Ingersoll, Thomas Fitzsimons, James Wilson and Governeur Morris, Esquires, are hereby appointed deputies from this state to meet in the convention of the deputies of the respective states of North-America, to be held at the city of Philadelphia, on the second day of the month of May next. And the said Thomas Mifflin, Robert Morris, George Clymer, Jared Ingersoll, Thomas Fitzsimons, James Wilson and Governeur Morris, Esquires, or any four of them are hereby constituted and appointed deputies from this state, with powers to meet such deputies as may be appointed and authorised by the other states to assemble in the said convention at the city aforesaid, and to join with them in devising, deliberating on, and discussing all such alterations and further provisions a may be necessary to render the federal constitution fully adequate to the exigencies of the union; and in reporting such act or acts for that purpose, to the United States in Congress assembled, as when agreed to by them, and duly confirmed by the several states, will effectually provide for the same.

You will therefore perceive that they had no authority whatever from the legislature, to annihilate the present confederation and form a constitution entirely new, and in doing which they have acted as mere individuals, not as the official deputies of this commonwealth. If however, after mature deliberation you are of opinion that the plan of government which they have offered for your consideration is best calculated to promote your political happiness and preserve those invaluable privileges you at present enjoy, you will no doubt chose men to represent you in convention who will adopt it; if you think otherwise you will, with your usual firmness, determine accordingly.

You have a right, and we have no doubt you will consider whether or not you are in a situation to support the expence of such a government as is now offered to you, as well as the expence of your state government? or whether a legislature consisting of three branches, neither of them chosen annually, and that the senate, the most powerful, the members of which are for six years, are likely to lessen your burthens or encrease your taxes? or whether in case your state government should be annihilated, which will probably be the case, or dwindle into a mere corporation, the continental government will be competent to attend to your local concerns? You can also best determine whether the power of levying and imposing internal taxes at pleasure, will be of real use to you or not? or whether a continental collector assisted by a few faithful soldiers will be more eligible than your present collectors of taxes? You will also in your deliberations on this important business judge, whether the liberty of the press may be considered as a blessing or a curse in a free government, and whether a declaration for the preservation of it is necessary? or whether in a plan of government any declaration of rights should be prefixed or inserted? You will be able likewise to determine, whether in a free government there ought or ought not to be any provision against a standing army in time of peace? or whether the trial by jury in civil causes is become dangerous and ought to be abolished? and whether the judiciary of the United States is not so constructed as to absorb and destroy the judiciaries of the several states? you will also be able to judge whether such inconveniencies have been experienced by the present mode of tryal between citizen and citizen, of different states as to render a continental court necessary for that purpose? or whether there can be any real use in the appellate jurisdiction with respect to fact as well as law? we shall not dwell longer on the subject; one thing however, it is proper you should be informed of; the convention were not unanimous with respect to men though they were as states. several of those who have signed did not fully approve of the plan of government, and three of the members, viz. Governor Randolph and Colonel George Mason of Virginia, and Eldridge Gerry, Esquire, of Massachusetts, whose characters are very respectable, had such strong objections as to refuse signing. The confederation no doubt is defective and requires amendment and revision, and had the convention extended their plan to the enabling the United States to regulate commere, equalize the impost, collect it throughout the United States and have the entire jurisdiction over maritime affairs, leaving the exercise of internal taxation to the separate states, we apprehend there would have been no objection to the plan of government.

The matter will be before you, and you will be able to judge for yourselves. "Shew that you 'seek not yourselves, but the good of your country, and may he who alone has dominion over 'the passions and understandings of men enlighten 'and direct you aright, that posterity may bless 'God for the wisdom of their ancestors."

Advice to the Fair.

THO' outward charms, by all admired,
 A transient pleasure must impart;
Yet brighter beauties are required
 To bind in lasting chains the heart.
As winter's hand, each blooming flower,
 Deprives of every beauteous hue;
So time, with never-failing power,
 External beauties will subdue.
The ruby lip, the sparkling eye,
 The glowing cheek, the bosom white,
Which with the rose and lilly vie,
 Will shortly fail to yield delight.
But calm good-nature, gentle truth,
 With sense and sweet discretion join'd,
Will heighten ev'ry charm of youth,
 And e'en in age affection bind.
Then strive, ye nymphs, with earnest care,
 Each mental beauty to attain;
Since those will make you doubly fair,
 And love, and fix'd affection gain.

ANECDOTE.

A Mercantile traveller having made the tour of the Roman Catholic countries in Europe, when he came to Rome could not help observing to his landlord, that altho' Rome was the mother of almost all religions in the world, yet he thought it strange that there should be apparently less religion there, and more toleration in matters of faith than in any other Catholic country or city he had passed through.—— I am astonished, my dear sir, said the innholder, that this should be matter of surprize to you, who appear to be a man of business and acquainted with trade. Religion, sir, in this capital, has ever been considered as nothing more than an article of commerce, a manufacture of our own with which we supply the rest of the world; and therefore ought certainly to be cheap at home, or it would not in any shape answer for exportation to foreign parts.

DOCTOR HILL's

American Balsam,

IS to be sold in Philadelphia, by Mr. William Poyntell, at his store the corner of Black-Horse alley, in Second street, also by Mr. George Reinholt, in Market street, the second door above Fifth street; by Mr. Steiner, at the German Printing-office in Race street; at Germantown by Mr Justus Fox; at Lancaster by Ludwick Lowman, esquire; at New-York by Hugh Gaine, and by the subscriber at her place in Blockley, price 6/6 per bottle, and by the dozen 6/. a bottle.

This Balsam is now upwards of 20 years so well known in America, that it is a most effectual and infallible medicine for colds, coughs and asthmas; it gives great relief in the most painful rheumatism, in cholics, gravel and consumption; it is a most excellent cure in the whooping cough, and in most all the disorders and sicknesses in children, and for many other diseases, as may be seen in the printed directions in English and German on each bottle. In old diseases of long standing it will be necessary to continue the use of this healing medicine for a reasonable time, by more than one single bottle, and then they may expect relief from this, as thousands of people can testify, who have tried other things without success; there are indeed several balsams and preparations of medicine which gives, sometimes present relief for a short time in many disorders, but soon after returns more furious than before, but this American Balsam performed perfect and effectual cures; its fame is spread most every where; it is almost inconceivable to hear what surprising cures this Basam has performed with people who have tried and experienced its wonderful effects: each bottle is sealed up with the representation of a certain plant in a heart, and if any balsam under this name should be sold in any place not mentioned in my advertisements, the Public may be assured it is not Dr. Hill's Balsam, but counterfeit, because no other person is able to prepare the genuine Balsam, for want of the principal ingredients of which Dr. Hill's American Balsam is composed.

Since the former proprietors are deceased, both William Young, junior and senior, the present is a sister to William Young, jun. botanist.

MOORE-HALL,

THE Estate of the late William Moore, esquire, situate upon the river Schuylkill, in the township of Charles-Town, in the county of Chester, distant 23 miles from this city.

The Estate consists of upwards of 600 acres of most excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Mansion House is spacious, convenient and airy; it is situated upon a high and healthy spot, and commands a most delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Grist-Mill on the premises, near the Mansion House, on a never-failing stream, called Pickering, running through the estate, and watering a great body of meadow; this stream empties itself into the Schuylkill in front of the house; it formerly supplied water for a saw mill, which might with much ease, and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Estate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any person inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premises before the day of sale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, esquire, in Arch street, or PETER MILLER, esquire, in Third street. Sept 17 eptf

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be exposed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thursday the 29th of November next, at the Court-House in Harford county, state of Maryland,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

Those who wish to view the land, on application to Mess. Ashton and Waters, the present tenants, will be shewn it. Possession will be given the 1st of January, if required. The title good and free of all incumbrances. The terms will be easy to the purchaser, and will be made known on the day of sale, by Wm. WEST.

MR. SICARD, pupil of the celebrated mons. Vestres, presents his compliments to his former employers and the public in general, and begs leave to inform them that he has opened his Dancing School, at the Long Room in White Horse alley, near Chesnut street.

The hours of attendance for young ladies will be from 10 till 1 o'clock every Monday, Wednesday and Friday—and for young gentlemen from 6 till 9 o'clock in the evening of the same days.

He will devote one day in every two weeks to instruct the pupils of his dancing school, and of the boarding schools, where he attends gratis, in the polite accomplishments of the genteel graces and manners, on the plan that he conducted the same at Paris, in conjunction with the celebrated monsieur Gaudelle.

Mr. Sicard proposes attending private families, boarding schools, and academies, one day in every week, if required, for the purpose of instructing young ladies and gentlemen in this important part of a polite education, viz. How to come into the presence of their superiors—How to come into, and go out of a room—How to salute in the street, and walk gracefully—How to present any thing to another—and how to move the fan elegantly, &c. &c. &c.

He would esteem it a particular favour if those ladies and gentlemen who have had an opportunity of associating with the polite in the European capitals, would honor him with their company whenever he practices, in order to satisfy them of his abilities in that particular line of his profession. mtf.

AMERICA.

KINGSTON, (Jamaica) Aug. 25.

THE ſloop Porgay, Baſſet, from Charleſton, ſince her arrival in this harbour, has we hear, been ſeized by a cuſtom-houſe officer, on account of a quantity of gin being found on board, and imported contrary to law. Pity it is, that the officer did not meet with the fate of his brother in London, as mentioned in our laſt paper, who made an attempt with great avidity on the ſeizure of Cowhage!

Sept. 1. On Wedneſday laſt his majeſty's ſloops of war Camilla, John Hutt, Eſq; commander, and Cygnet, —— Nichols, Eſq; commander, arrived at Port Royal from the Muſquito ſhore, laſt from Truxillo, in 19 days. Major Lowrie is come up paſſenger in one of thoſe veſſels, and the only intelligence we have learned by them is, that the evacuation of the Muſquito ſhore had been entirely compleated before they quitted that quarter.

The following is an inſtance of Divine Providence, manifeſted in the preſervation of two unfortunate perſons who were driven off the iſland of Grenada on the 6th of laſt month:——Mr. Elias Baſkman, who kept a trading canoe at that iſland, having been conveying a cargo from Guava to St. George's Bay, about 16 miles, aſſiſted with 1 negro, was quickly after leaving St. George's Key, on his return, attacked by a ſudden ſquall of wind, and driven entirely out to ſea; having only a quart of peaſe, and a pound and a half of ſalt beef on board, and no water but what was ſcantily ſupplied them by the Heavens; when that failed them, they were compelled to drink their own urine. They had but one ſail, which together with the rudder was loſt in the ſame gale of wind, which continued for four days without intermiſſion: During this period they alſo loſt the only inſtrument of guidance left them, their paddle. They then conſigned themſelves to the mercy of the waves, and abandoned every hope of ſafety. Land never appeared to them, until they arrived off a place near Old Harbour in this iſland, where they landed on Saturday the 25th ult. having been at ſea in that deplorable ſituation 19 days; and had not Providence provided them with a few flying fiſh, and 2 couple of birds which flew on board the canoe, they muſt have inevitably periſhed for want. On their arrival at the above place, they were ſcarce able to ſtand, and exhibited an appearance truly ghaſtly and diſtreſsful. A fiſherman reſiding there, to the honor of his humanity and feelings, lent every aſſiſtance in his power to thoſe two poor ſtarving wretches to get them on ſhore, and afterwards exerted himſelf to the utmoſt to provide for them ſuch neceſſaries of comfort and other accommodations as they muſt naturally ſtand in need of. Thoſe two miſerable people, thus preſerved by the finger of Providence, are in this town, in a ſtate very feeble and emaciated, and ſo violently excoriated by the torrefaction of the ſun, that the ſkin of their hands and faces is entirely peeling off. Mr. Baſkman is a cooper, poſſeſſing ſome property in Grenada, and the negro belongs to a Mr. Webſter in that iſland.

We hear that the ſchooner La Prevedina, capt. Francis Dolphin, in her way from Spaniſh St. Domingo bound to Philadelphia, encountered on the 27th ult. near the Silver Keys, otherwiſe called Cayes d'Argent, a ſevere gale of wind ariſing from N. N. E. It veered all round the compaſs, and laſted 40 hours. It terminated in a ſtrong wind from E. N. E. There was a Dutch ſnow in company, which is ſuppoſed to be loſt.

We are informed by an authority which may be depended upon, that a ſchooner commanded by Mr. Boureon, which arrived in this harbour on Thurſday laſt from Porto Rico, bound for New York, but obliged to put in here by ſtreſs of weather, which began on Sunday morning laſt, and continued for 27 hours. It was one of the ſevereſt hurricanes that has been known for ſome time. The above veſſel received conſiderable damage, and cannot proceed until properly repaired. The Windward Iſlands have in general ſuffered greatly.

On Thurſday night laſt, a very heavy ſhower of rain fell in this town, accompanied with moſt tremendous thunder and lightning, and a violent gale of wind. The thunder was the loudeſt and moſt awful that we have heard for ſome years; and the flaſhes of lightning ſucceeding each other ſo rapidly, that they ſeemed to form, as it were, a continued ſheet of liquid fire. Luckily we have not heard of any damage being done.

Sept. 8. We hear from the Bay of Honduras, that flour and ſome other articles of proviſion are very ſcarce and very dear in that quarter; and that the Britiſh ſettlers are much in want of ſhipping to tranſport their wood and other produce to proper markets.

The preſent appearance of the country ſince the late rains, bids fair, ſhould we have the happineſs to eſcape a hurricane this year, to make ample amends to the planters for the loſſes they have ſuſtained for ſeveral years paſt.

BOSTON, Sept. 27.

The ſupreme executive of this Commonwealth, have been pleaſed to grant a full and free pardon to the four unhappy perſons under ſentence of death for treaſon, viz. Jaſon Parmenter, Henry M'Cullock, Henry Gale and Job Shattuck. And as peace and tranquility appeared to be reſtored to the citizens in the weſtern counties, it was thought expedient not to continue the troops any longer in ſervice: It was therefore the unanimous voice of the council, that his excellency the governor be requeſted to iſſue his orders to the officer commanding the troops in ſaid counties, to diſcharge them: and the troops have been diſcharged accordingly.

Philadelphia, Oct. 5.

Which of the two is moſt ridiculous (ſays the Maſſachuſetts Centinel) the Britiſh miniſtry paying a Britiſh general [Burgoyne] for writing farces, ſuch as the 'Maid of the Oaks,' &c. during the ſiege of Boſton; or the thirteen United States of America maintaining an ambaſſador in England at the enormous expence of perhaps eight or ten guineas per day, for no other viſible purpoſe, than to write an eulogium on the Britiſh government, under the ſham pretence of vindicating the American conſtitutions?

"Dr. Adams's defence, &c. (ſay the Reviewers) is full of contradictions and abſurdities. The balances, the balances, are perpetually rung in our ears, like the graces, the graces, by Lord Cheſterfield; whereas he has not given a rational account of the real balancing powers of any ſtate, or the particulars in which that balance conſiſted. In ſhort, a man of Dr. Adams's known abilities could not have written ſo ſuperficial a book as this, had his good ſenſe alone been conſulted; for which reaſon we conclude, that he muſt have ſome point to carry, ſome object in view beyond the Atlantic, with which we are not acquainted. It may poſſibly anſwer his purpoſe, and may miſlead the unwary, but can neither inſtruct nor entertain. The Americans are evidently involved in diſtreſſes from which they know not how to extricate themſelves—we hoped this book might have anſwered the purpoſe, but we feel ourſelves wholly diſappointed.'—It is worth while to add, that theſe letters are addreſſed to a William Stephens Smith, Eſq; who appears to poſſeſs the tranſcendant merit of being Mr. Adams's ſon-in-law.

Extract of a letter from New-Hampſhire, Sept. 20.

"How are the mighty fallen! poor Shays is at this inſtant cracking cheſnuts in the vicinity of lake Champlaine. The ſituation of Shattuck is not much better, only it is poſſible he may be cracking walnuts—This man you muſt know was conſidered by the inſurgents as a character quite as important as Shays himſelf. The inſurgents in general have returned to their homes, and as far as we can learn behave with decency and good order. As to thoſe that are ſtill lurking on the borders of Canada, they are literally

"So worn, ſo waſted, ſo deſpis'd a crew,
As e'en Guy Carleton might with pity view."

Nothing, ſays a correſpondent, proves the decline of our European trade in American bottoms more inconteſtibly than the amazing increaſe of our domeſtic and coaſting trade. Twenty years ago one veſſel only (a brig) was eſtabliſhed in the trade from Philadelphia to Charleſton, at preſent there are ſix or ſeven: At the ſame time a ſloop of 50 tuns anſwered that purpoſe from New-York, there are now three or four from that port. Exports from the middle colonies would always before the revolution pay a good freight to Rhode-Iſland, Maſſachuſetts, &c. At preſent thoſe branches of buſineſs are overdone by a ſuperfluity of hands. The Weſt India iſlands are equally glutted with the produce of our continent, and the American ſhippers and importers for the moſt part live by the loſs. What does all this prove, but that we ought to give up the idea of a very extenſive marine trade, employ ourſelves in agriculture and manufactures, and, if poſſible, be happy at home.

In the ſentence of a late Supreme Court in an eaſtern ſtate it is obſervable, that among about a ſcore of culprits, more than one half of them are women, convicted of conveying tools to priſoners. This ſhews the ſuperior benevolence of the ſex. The world, ſays a moralizing author, may be thus defined: It is a vaſt theatre, on which mankind are the actors; chance compoſes the piece, fortune diſtributes the parts; the women ſupply refreſhments to the actors, and the unfortunate are ſcene drawers and candle ſnuffers.

SHIP NEWS.

Meſſ. DUNLAP & CLAYPOOLE,

WHAT has been, will be, while men continue to be men, and there is nothing new under the ſun. Some people ſeem alarmed at the oppoſition of a few weak and deluded men to the federal government; but if we look into the hiſtories of our own and foreign countries, we ſhall find that there never was a revolution brought about in any country in favor of liberty or government, that was not oppoſed by ignorant or intereſted men.

The revolution that brought King William to the throne of England was effected by a majority of only three votes.

Thouſands oppoſed the acceſſion of the Hanover family to the ſame throne ſome years afterwards. In 1715 and 1745 attempts were made to depoſe them, by an appeal to arms, which ended in the deſtruction of the leaders of the minority, and in the defeat of thoſe brave and hardy mountaineers, who were ſeduced by thoſe leaders into a rebellion, againſt the voice and intereſts of a majority of the people.

The union of the parliaments of England and Scotland was oppoſed by a ſtrong minority of Scotland: recourſe was had to arms by a few deluded men in the weſt of Scotland to prevent it. But they were ſoon prevailed upon to return in peace to their habitations, and in a few years afterwards joined with the majority of the nation, in praiſing the happy effects of the union.

The declaration of independence was oppoſed by a wealthy and powerful party, a whole ſtate, and many counties in every ſtate refuſed to concur in ſupporting it; and yet the independence of our country finally triumphed over all oppoſition.

I ſhall conclude, by repeating my firſt obſervation—What has been, will be, and there is nothing new under the ſun. The preſent enemies of the federal government will ere long be its moſt zealous friends, and ſome of them, who are moſt prudent and ſilent about it, or moſt clamorous againſt it will probably ſoon fill its higheſt or moſt profitable offices.

MATTERS OF FACT.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

FRIDAY, September 28.

THE houſe met purſuant to adjournment.

Several petitions of a private nature were preſented, and ordered to lie on the table.

The bill for empowering the ſheriff of Luzerne, to confine his priſoners in the gaols of the neighbouring counties, and for other purpoſes therein mentioned, was taken up for a third reading.

Upon the clauſe which diſpenſes with the legal qualifications of electors at the enſuing election, Mr. Whitehill renewed his oppoſition, and read an extract from the proceedings of the council of cenſors, by which it appeared that the general election for Philadelphia had been deemed valid, although the judges, &c. had not received a liſt of the taxables; for, it was there obſerved that the ſons of freeholders were entitled to vote, though they had not paid taxes, and it was deemed good policy at that time, not to ſcrutinize too nicely into the ſubject. The ſame policy will prevail with reſpect to Luzerne, and it is better to allow the inhabitants of that county to proceed upon the neceſſity of the caſe, than to give them the authority of a law, made in direct violation of the conſtitution.—To theſe obſervations it was anſwered, that the member who ſpoke laſt had changed his ground, for yeſterday he argued upon the maxim of taxation and repreſentation, that the county of Luzerne was not entitled to any place in the legiſlature, but to-day he admits that they might proceed to an election, and only wiſhes to deprive them of the ſanction which this act will afford. This law, however, does not contradict the conſtitution, for that compact could not mean to diveſt a citizen of his privileges for not paying what he never was called upon to pay—a principle which might, in caſe the public exigencies did not require a tax with any given year, operate as a diſſolution of government. On the other hand, if the inhabitants of Luzerne proceed to an election without the ſanction of the bill before us, the election would be void, not becauſe it was unconſtitutional, as is already ſtated; but becauſe it would be contrary to the letter and ſpirit of the exiſting election laws: Hence the neceſſity of the proviſions propoſed, and there can be no doubt of the power of the legiſlature to repeal or to ſuſpend the operation of its own laws. The queſtion being put, the clauſe was agreed to, and the bill ordered to be engroſſed.

Mr. George Clymer. Mr. Speaker, I ſhall now preſent to the houſe certain reſolutions, reſpecting the plan of government offered to our conſideration by the fœderal convention. The ſubject has been every where diſcuſſed, it is perfectly underſtood, and from the number and nature of the petitions upon your table, we have every reaſon to preſume, that it meets the unanimous approbation of our conſtituents. I do not, therefore, conſider it neceſſary, ſir, to exerciſe your patience with arguments in favour of a meaſure, which, I flatter myſelf, every member is already prepared to receive and adopt; but I cannot forbear recommending unanimity to to the houſe, which will give additional authority to our proceedings, and reflect additional honor upon the legiſlature. The reſolutions being ſeconded by Mr. Wynkoop, they were read at the table, and upon the queſtion, will the houſe take them up by diſtinct propoſitions? Mr. Whitehill objected, that he was by no means prepared for the diſcuſſion of the ſubject, and as he was confident that many other members were in the ſame predicament, he moved that the further conſideration of the reſolutions be poſtponed 'till the afternoon.

Mr. Fitzſimons. Sir, I think it would be highly improper to poſtpone the determination of the houſe, upon the buſineſs to which their attention has been called; not only from its natural importance, but becauſe the ſhorteſt delay might put it out of our power to reſume the ſubject. This is, perhaps, the laſt day of our legiſlative exiſtence; and as an hour's procraſtination may be fatal to our purpoſe, it becomes every member to reflect ſeriouſly upon the conſequences, before he votes for the propoſed poſtponement. The object of the reſolutions, Mr. Speaker, muſt awaken the ſenſibility of every man, who is a friend to his country. I wiſh it was within the ſcope of my talents to do juſtice to the ſubject; but I am perſuaded, the feelings of all who hear me, muſt, in this reſpect, ſpeak more forcibly than any thing I could utter. Let it be remembered, however, that the authority of this houſe is not eſſentially requiſite to the accompliſhment of the meaſure recommended in the paper now before us; for whether we do, or do not, adviſe the calling a convention, and aſcertain the preliminary forms of proceeding, the people, ſir, will think for themſelves; and if they find it expedient, it is not the want of our ſanction that can prevent their aſſembling at ſo important a criſis. It is therefore merely to preſerve decorum, and to prevent the confuſion which muſt otherwiſe ariſe, that the interference of the houſe becomes neceſſary, and I ſtill hope that on further reflection, the members that are inclined to favor the poſtponement, will perceive the propriety of waving their objections, and of fortifying the reſolutions on the table with a cordial and unanimous vote.

Mr. D. Clymer. Sir, The ſubject which is offered to the conſideration of the houſe calls for immediate attention, and deſerves univerſal approbation and ſupport. I am therefore averſe to every thing like delay; nor, can I conceive upon what principle the poſtponement is propoſed. The propriety of calling a convention is acknowledged upon all hands, and the plan of government which is to be laid before that convention, is the production of men venerable for their wiſdom, patriotiſm and integrity. Sir, I am told there are five leading perſons in this city, and I ſincerely believe there are no more, who entertain ſentiments inimical to that plan. Theſe men ſhould be cautious how they proceed, for the time muſt come, when they will be aſhamed and afraid to ſhow their faces, while the virtuous citizens of the union are in the full enjoyment of the glorious fruits of ſo excellent a conſtitution. The ſubject Mr. Speaker, animates & inſpires, & when I freely and unequivocally beſtow theſe encomiums upon the new fœderal ſyſtem, I feel myſelf impelled to call down the bleſſings of Heaven upon its authors; and every heart that participates in the reputation and proſperity of his country, muſt join me in a grateful and fervent Amen.

Mr. Findley. Sir, every argument which has been ſtated to prove that the ſubject before us, is of an important nature, will likewiſe apply to evince the propriety of the poſtponement which has been moved for by the member from Cumberland. We agree with the gentlemen on the other ſide, Mr. Speaker, that the object of the reſolution is of a very important nature—but we differ from them in this, that we wiſh to treat it as ſuch, and they wiſh to treat it as a trifle.

The principles of the plan, recommended by the fœderal convention, are not at all connected with the preſent ſubject, and therefore the gentleman who ſpoke laſt, has deviated from the order of debate, to indulge himſelf in a language calculated rather to inflame and diſguſt, than to conciliate and unite. That plan I have only read with a view to conſider its merits, and when they properly become the theme of diſcuſſion, I ſhall neither be aſhamed or afraid to deliver the ſentiments which my judgment ſhall preſcribe. But, ſir, I have never regarded it, with a view to calling a convention, for I have always thought it neceſſary, to wait for the recommendation of Congreſs, and the preſent ſeſſions was ſo near a cloſe, that I did not therefore expect it could poſſibly be agitated till the meeting of the ſucceeding aſſembly. But when we reflect that in buſineſs of infinitely leſs moment (even the appointment of a recorder of deeds, as happened yeſterday) it is the practice of the houſe to make an order of the day, we cannot but conſider the ſudden introduction of the preſent motion, as an attempt to trick the legiſlature into a meaſure which will not bear deliberation and argument. I call therefore upon the candour of thoſe who urge the reſolutions, and who have undoubtedly taken time to weigh and prepare them, to allow us a ſimilar opportunity, and, the delay propoſed for that purpoſe cannot be deemed an unreaſonable one. It is indeed indiſpenſibly requiſite in order to enable thoſe members who never heard of the motion before, to conſult with each other, and to aſcertain the times and places moſt convenient in their reſpective counties for holding the conventional election.

Mr. George Clymer. Sir, the resolutions before you may be divided into two propositions—first, whether the house will call a convention, and 2dly, in what manner it shall be done—on the first of these propositions the house is certainly prepared to decide, and the other may be left till the afternoon. I therefore propose a division of the question in order to accommodate the arguments of the gentlemen, who think it necessary to consult upon the times and places for holding the election.

Mr. Brackenridge. Sir, I had made up my mind to vote in favor of the postponement, but the arrangement which the member from the city has just suggested, appears to me to be the properest mode of proceeding, and I therefore hope it will be adopted.

The question being stated by the Speaker—shall the further consideration of the resolutions be postponed till the afternoon? it was carried in the negative, and the first proposition being read, the following debate arose.

Those who were against calling a convention at this time, reasoned in the following manner.

Mr. Speaker. The importance of this subject required, in our opinion, some time for deliberation; but as the house have determined to enter immediately into the consideration of the propositions, we shall now discuss, at large, the reasons for opposing them. We are sensible that a convention ought to be called; and that it will be called, is certain: But we are confident nevertheless, that at this period it is equally irregular and precipitate—at once contrary to the respect which is due to Congress, and to the justice which we owe to our constituents. Hitherto, Pennsylvania has acted upon fœderal ground; and in this last solemn stage of the existence of that confederation, which, with all its imperfections, real and imputed, has borne us triumphantly through an arduous and protracted war, let us not stain our national reputation with an act of wanton ingratitude. Whatever may be the merits of the new system, it is neither prudent nor proper to abandon the old one 'till that has been organized, and adapted to the purposes of government. When indeed our modern tenement is finished and furnished, we shall readily consent to quit the antiquated cabin in which we have hitherto lived together—though even then, reflecting that it has served to shelter us in many a bitter storm, we should not reproach it with its inconveniences and decay, but bid it a kind and honorable farewell. From the arguments that have been used, however, it would be presumed, that the cement of our union is already dissolved, and that in relation to the fœderal body, the several commonwealths of America are once more in a state of nature. But, sir, neither insinuation nor assertion can support this pernicious doctrine, which is peremptorily contradicted by the great compact of the states, and the municipal laws of Pennsylvania.

Those who urge the adoption of the resolutions before us, can indeed only proceed upon that supposition; but we appeal to a higher authority, the decisive language of the articles of confederation, and of the act of assembly appointing delegates to the late convention. "No two or more states, says the sixth article of the union, shall enter into any treaty, confederation, or alliance whatever between them, without the consent of the United States in Congress assembled, specifying, accurately, the purposes for which the same is to be entered into, and how long it shall continue;" and by the 13th article of the same instrument, it is expressly stipulated, that "the articles of confederation shall be inviolably observed by every state, and the union shall be perpetual; nor shall any alteration be agreed to in a Congress of the United States, and be afterwards confirmed by the legislatures of every state."

Thus, Sir, we find ourselves bound upon general principles, to wait for the agreement of Congress to the projected alterations, and we have only therefore to enquire whether the present case ought to form an exception to the rule. Upon this point, the law passed with an immediate view to the late convention, is so explicit, that the gentlemen on the other side must either pronounce it nugatory and void, or they must abandon the positions they have advanced. For we find the preamble reciting in direct terms, that the business originated with Congress—'whereas the General Assembly of this Commonwealth, taking into their serious consideration, the representations heretofore made to the legislatures of the several states in the union, by the United States in Congress assembled, &c.' and the second section of the act establishes incontrovertibly the proceedings for which we contend, when it directs the delegates to 'join in reporting such act or acts for the purposes of the union, to the United States in Congress assembled, as when agreed to by them, and duly confirmed by the several states, will effectually provide for the same.' Having then clearly deduced the opinion of this house in favour of a delay till we hear from Congress, where a preparatory jurisdiction has thus been lodged, what but the most absolute necessity, can be an inducement to deviate from that Fœderal conduct, which has, it is confessed on all hands, reflected honor and dignity upon the state? The necessity, Sir, must either arise from the danger of persevering in our former course, or from the advantages which will be produced by the change.

Does any man here apprehend, that there will be the smallest risque in waiting the determination of that body? Is there a doubt in the most sceptical mind, but that the projected plan will be fully and cordially embraced, by those who have been for years recommending, soliciting, nay, begging an extension of the fœderal powers and authority? If there is any man of a contrary opinion, let him assert it, and take the consequence upon his character: but—no, sir—we all believe, and we all know that, as expeditiously as the forms of business will admit, the congressional approbation, and recommendation of the new constitution, will be officially announced. Whence then proceeds this violent precipitancy, that calls upon us to act before we have thought, and seeks to govern an extensive state by the partial opinions of a single district? Sir, it is affirmed, that it will secure to Pennsylvania high honor and useful influence if she takes the lead in adopting the new constitution. Let us examine this. If we wait till accounts are received from Congress, as we shall certainly receive them no later than our sister states, our exertions will then, as well as now, place us foremost in the fœderal list. But if we rashly adopt a system which we have not considered, will the honor (as some call it, we say dishonor) that is expected to result, repel the charge of having sacrificed the deliberation due to so important a subject, for the visionary eminence of a name?—To consider this subject in another light, we claim for our constituents a full and equal opportunity of canvassing and ascertaining the merits of the constitution, by which it is proposed to connect their interests and liberties, with the interests and liberties of the whole continent. The citizens of Philadelphia, it is true, have expressed their approbation of the plan, but it is because they have studied it, they have heard it explained, and they understand its principles. This is not the case with the remote inhabitants of Pennsylvania—they have hardly seen it, they have it not in their power to apply to those who can explain it, and it is not improbable, that they do not at this hour comprehend its principles. Will you then summon these persons to a convention, before they are apprised of the business which is there to be transacted? Sir, we wish not to make indelicate allusions or reflections—but it is well known that the members of the late convention were chosen from the city, and that the landed interest of the country was neither consulted nor represented in the delegation. If any thing could add to the mortification of that circumstance, it must be to find ourselves forced into the adoption of this plan, by the very persons who were appointed to assist in framing it. To conclude, sir, the people have a right to demand a sufficient time, not only to digest the measure itself, but to inquire into the sentiments of those whom they mean to elect as their representatives in convention. And as the delay will be consistent with the principles of the fœderal government, as it will not interfere with the honor or interest of the state, and, above all, as it will enable us to examine with accuracy, and to decide with judgment upon a subject, in which is involved the most sacred rights of freemen, we confidently hope that the resolutions on the table will be referred to the succeeding General Assembly.

Those members who were in favor of the resolutions spoke to the following effect.

Mr. Speaker. We consider this question as of a very important nature, but, at the same time we cannot agree to place it on the ground which the gentlemen have taken. It is allowed that the calling of a convention is a proper and necessary act, but we are told that it must originate in a recommendation of Congress, and that the present is too early a period. Sir, we do not think that it would be either legal, natural, or necessary, that the present proposition should be founded on any resolution of that honorable body, and indeed the arguments which have been used, shew, to a demonstration, that Congress can have nothing to do with the transactions of the late Fœderal Convention.

It appears from the cited articles of the confederation, that no alteration can take place in that compact, but at the instance, and after the approbation of the United States in Congress assembled;—whereas it is certain on this occasion, that Congress was not consulted in the beginning, and their determination will have little influence upon the conclusion of the business. The plan indeed is of a tendency altogether inimical to the existing confederation, and must eventually destroy it.

The true foundation, therefore, upon which the argument should rest, is, whether this Fœderal Convention did not originate with the people, and consequently, whether the people are not the proper and immediate judges of the system which is produced by that body? Certainly, it is to be wished that the approbation of Congress, had arrived in time, as a form in favor of the measure; but it is not so essential as to induce us to lose the opportunity of the present sessions for advancing the honor and influence of the state, by leading the way in adopting an efficient and comprehensive government. The report of the delegates has been already ten days in circulation, and will be many more, before the time appointed for the conventional election,——so that every man may be fully prepared to act with certainty and confidence on this important occasion. Upon the whole, as we do not perceive an argument in favor of delay which cannot be obviated by fixing a remote time for chusing the delegates, we hope the resolution will be agreed to by the house.

The question being put, the resolution was adopted, 43 yeas—19 nays.

The house adjourned to meet at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day.

FRIDAY, Sept. 28. P. M.

The speaker and 45 members being assembled, adjourned, for want of a quorum, till to-morrow morning at half past nine o'clock.

For a more particular account of the proceedings on this meeting, see our last paper.

SATURDAY, Sept. 29.

The speaker having taken the chair, only 44 members answered, upon calling over the roll, so there was not a quorum of the house to proceed to business. The speaker however laid before the members present, the resolution of Congress, respecting the proposed plan of fœderal government.

The resolution being read to the house, the speaker asked if it was the pleasure of the members present that the serjeant at arms should be sent to the seceding members, desiring their attendance in their places, and informing them of the resolution of Congress which had been received, and now lay for the consideration of the house. This being unanimously agreed to, at the instance of Mr. D. Clymer, the assistant clerk was directed to accompany the serjeant at arms, and to make a report of the answers which might be received from the absent members. While the officers of the house were gone upon this duty, Mr. Miley and Mr. M'Calmont entered the assembly room, in appearance greatly agitated, and the roll being again called, the speaker announced that there was a quorum. Mr. M'Calmont then rose and informed the speaker, that certain persons, whom he could not at that time ascertain, had forcibly intruded upon his lodgings, and brought him to the house by compulsion. He therefore desired that he might have leave to withdraw, as his coming was involuntary, and his remaining there would be in direct opposition to his wishes and intention. He declared however, that he would be governed by the rules of the house, to which he appealed. The rule upon this subject being read, it appeared that there was only a fine of five shillings imposed for a member withdrawing without leave, and Mr. M'Calmont tendered that sum at the table, but was informed that Mr. Barr had been appointed by the house to collect all forfeitures, and that to him the money must be paid. Mr. M'Calmont now made at attempt to withdraw, but a general cry of stop him, proceeding from the gallery as well as the house, he paused, and observed, that tho' he insisted upon his right to depart, he would certainly yield to the judgment of the house, which he desired might be immediately taken upon the subject. Upon this the speaker stated the question to the house, and the following remarks were made by the respective members.

Mr. Lowrey. Sir, the gentleman has told us that he was brought hither by force; this is certainly to be lamented, and the persons who have been guilty of the violence ought to be punished—but, when the gentleman asks permission to withdraw, I think, Mr. Speaker, this house has a right to demand his reasons for absenting himself at all; and unless they are very substantial ones, we shall not do our duty if we comply with his request.

Mr. Fitzsimons. I hope, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman's request will not be complied with. For the force which has been used towards him, this house cannot be immediately responsible; and if the member will point out the aggressors, we ought certainly to concur in any proper mode to punish them. But, sir, we are engaged in an important transaction, and are involved in circumstances of a very critical nature. If you allow the gentleman to leave this room, you defeat the whole business of the legislature, and, in effect, put it in the power of an individual to dissolve the government. The alternative being so stated—I am confident the house will not accede to the request—and their power to refuse, cannot be disputed.

Mr. Robinson. Sir, I am confident that my disposition in favor of the resolutions on your table, is so well known, that I need not trouble the house with any declaration upon that subject, in order to explain the principle which actuates me on the present question: but, I confess that from what has been declared by the gentleman (Mr. M'Calmont) I do not consider that there is at this time a quorum of the legislature assembled; for if any member is detained here by force, he can no longer be considered as a constituent part of the house, and, however disagreeable the consequences, it is not in our power to prevent his departure. The question is evidently of a very critical nature, and on either hand we are involved in difficulties. It is true, I shall not vote for the leave of the house to sanction his absence, but I can never agree to bar the doors, or to use any other means which shall prevent his quitting it, if, contrary to what I think is his duty, he should be so disposed. In that respect he can only be answerable to his conscience and his constituents, and the popular odium must be his punishment.

Mr. Brackenridge. Sir, I conceive that it is of no importance to the question how the gentleman has been brought hither—whether by the advice of his friends (and they certainly must be his friends who have induced him to attend to his duty) or in the easy conveyance of a sedan. Here he is—and it is incontrovertible that it is in the power of this house to keep him here. If any violence has been offered to him, his redress must be sought at another tribunal, either in the form of an action for the trespass, or of an indictment for the assault—but we have no business to interfere in these points, and it is our duty to secure his attendance, if requisite, to points within our jurisdiction. I hope therefore the house will dismiss the present question, and proceed to a more important subject.

Messrs. D. Clymer, Logan, G. Clymer, and Wynkoop, concurred in these sentiments, and the house finally resolved unanimously, that Mr. M'Calmont should not be permitted to withdraw.

The Speaker observed, that the member was certainly within the power of the house; but at the same time the subject of his complaint might be taken up as a breach of privilege.

The assistant clerk and serjeant at arms being returned, the former stated to the house that at Mr. Whitehill's lodgings he had spoken with a woman, who appeared to be a servant, and was at first told by her that Mr. Whitehill was at home, that she went up stairs to call him, and remaining there a few minutes, she returned and said he was not within. The clerk then went after Mr. Findley and some other members whom he saw in the streets, but Mr. Findley looked back, and seeing him as he thinks, that gentleman quickened his pace, and suddenly turned into a house. Those members with whom the clerk had spoken, were informed of the resolution of Congress and the request of the house, but uniformly refused to attend, some saying that the resolution had not been transmitted officially, others that they would think of it, and the rest, peremptorily, that they would not return to the house.

The Speaker then stated the resolutions which were under consideration on Friday last, and upon the article fixing the time for electing delegates to the convention, it was proposed by Mr. Brackenridge to insert the last Tuesday in October, by Mr. Wynkoop, to insert the first Tuesday in November, and by Mr. M'Calmont, to insert the fourth Tuesday in December (which was not seconded) but the house finally appointed the first Tuesday in November for chusing the Delegates, and the last Tuesday in the same month for the meeting of the Convention, at the State House in the city of Philadelphia.

On motion of Mr. M'Calmont it was proposed to make Lancaster the place of meeting, but the yeas and nays being called on the question, there appeared 15 in favour of the motion, and 30 against it.

The resolutions being amended and adopted by the house are, as inserted in our paper of Monday last.

Several bills being compared at the table and enacted into laws, a report from the committee of accounts for the payment of the demands of printers, &c. and a report from a committee appointed to examine the files for business proper to be recommended to the succeeding house, and the delivery of warrants for the pay of the members, being gone through, Mr. D. Clymer, seconded by Mr. Fitzsimons, moved, 'That the thanks of the house be given to the Speaker for his faithful, able, and upright discharge of the important duties of his station,' which being stated by the clerk, was unanimously agreed to. The Speaker, then rising from the chair, delivered himself in the following terms:—Gentlemen, I am sincerely sensible of the honor conferred upon me by this liberal testimony of your approbation. I have endeavoured to discharge my duty, and it gives me pleasure to find, that I have acquitted myself to your satisfaction.—This is the only reward which I could ever hope for, or receive—it is the greatest reward which any honest man could desire.

STANZAS

Written at the BOAR'S HEAD, in EAST-CHEAP, which from the date in the front of the house, appears to be the identical tavern where Harry of Monmouth, when Prince of Wales, associated with his merry companions.

THIS house, which Shakespear made the scene
Of Falstaff's jokes with Hal the Prince,
In honour of the bard has been
The seat of humour ever since!

From age to age, the Jolly Knight
Has shone by proxy through these rooms;
And Nyms and Bardolphs still delight
To chase away the midnight glooms.

Here Fielding, Somerville and Gay
Have frequent pass'd a merry night:
Here Beard pour'd forth the cheerful lay,
And Garrick added converse bright.

Here Goldsmith felt resistless ties:
To Him whose raptures were sincere,
The feast! would seem a sacrifice,
And songs, as hymns of praise appear!

O! Shakespear, here to thee are paid
The offerings of a heathen shrine:
Heifers oft smoke beneath the blade,
With due libations of rich wine!

ANECDOTE.

AT the siege of Bomel in 1599 there happened a singular case, and perhaps the only in its kind. Two brothers, who had never seen, and had always been enquiring after each other, met at last by chance at that siege, where they served in two different companies. The elder, who was called Hercando Diaz, having heard the other mentioned by the name of Encisso, which was his mother's surname, and which he had taken through affection, a thing pretty common in Spain, put several questions to him concerning a number of family particulars, and knew at last by the exactness of his answers, that he was the brother he had been so long seeking after: whereupon both proceeding to a close embrace, a cannon-ball struck off their heads, without separating their bodies, which fell clung together. Thus fell these two brothers at the most agreeable time of their life.

For Griſt Mills & other Water Works

On an extenſive Plan,
One of the beſt ſituations in America is offered

FOR SALE,

Together With

Batſto Iron-Works,

At the forks of Little Egg-Harbour river, one of the moſt healthy ſpots in New Jerſey, 38 miles by land from Philadelphia, and within a few hours ſail of New York.

THE river, communicating with the ſea by the beſt inlet on the Jerſey coaſt, is navigable for veſſels of 200 tons within a few miles of the works; thoſe of 100 tons may approach within one mile; flats and ſcows, carrying 10 or 12 tons, load and unload at the works. The uſual freight to New York or Philadelphia is 10 ſhillings per ton. The furnace ſtream affords plenty of water, in the dryeſt ſeaſon, for 3 or 4 pair of mill ſtones, beſides ſupplying the iron works.——An excellent dam, which has been increaſing in ſtrength many years by the cinder from the furnace, is well ſecured from the danger of freſhes, and the works are ſcarcely ever injured or delayed by either ice or back-water, though the tide ſwells to the foot of the dam: mills may therefore be erected at a moderate expence. This being a part of the country in which many people and many teams are neceſſarily employed in collecting and preparing for market the iron and lumber with which it abounds, and at the ſame time illy adapted to the raiſing of grain for their ſupport, there is, and muſt continue to be, a demand for large quantities of midlings, cornell, ſhorts and bran, at advanced prices; and the conveniencp of conveying flour at a light expence, either to New York or Philadelphia, or to more diſtant markets, will not be overlooked nor conſidered as of ſmall importance, eſpecially as there are few mill ſeats of any conſiderable capacity equally adapted to the New York market, which is not unfrequently ſupplied with ſuperfine flour from Philadelphia. A choice of the various kinds of wheat may be drawn to this ſeat from Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jerſey, and New York with greater eaſe and convenience than to almoſt any other mills now in being.

The FURNACE, which by the extenſive lands annexed to it, is abundantly ſupplied with wood and ore, is now in blaſt, and is noted for producing the beſt hollow ware in America, the metal being peculiarly well adapted to the making of caſtings of all kinds, as well as excellent bar iron.

A FORGE, with four fires and two hammers, belongs to the eſtate, and ſtands about half a mile from the furnace, on another fine ſtream which affords plenty of water.

A SLITTING and ROLLING MILL, having been diſuſed for the laſt two or three years, may want ſome repairs to prepare it for uſe; but the fore-bays and gates are in perfect order, and being in the proper ſpot for griſt mills, may be appropriated to that uſe.

Two SAW MILLS in good order, and a ſmall Griſt Mill.

The MANSION HOUSE is elegantly ſituated about 100 yards from the furnace, on an height which commands a view of the whole works, and of the two villages formed by the ſurrounding buildings belonging to the eſtate, ſuch as barns, ſtables, coal houſes, workſhops, ſtorehouſes and dwellings for work men. Adjoining the manſion houſe is a large and fruitful garden, affording plenty of vegetables, and well ſtored with choſen fruit trees: alſo a young bearing orchard, containing near 2000 apple trees, moſtly grafted.

Theſe excellent accommodations for extenſive and profitable manufactories, are offered to ſale at a very low rate, and on terms of payment calculated for the eaſe of the purchaſer, who may pay the greater part in the produce of the Iron Works, at a price to be agreed upon; and they are capable of producing more in one year, than will pay the whole price demanded.

For particulars, apply to WILLIAM RICHARDS, at the ſaid Works, JOHN COX, at Bloomſbury, near Trenton, or CHARLES PETTIT, in Philadelphia.

PROPOSALS

For Printing by Subſcription,

A Geographical and Topographical

HISTORY OF AMERICA,

Collected and compiled by John O'Connor, eſq. a barreſter at law in the kingdom of Ireland, and now a traveller in America.

MR. O'CONNOR has returned from the ſouthward to make arrangements for committing the firſt volume to preſs; and he aſſures his ſubſcribers, that the mechanical part will be compleated with the utmoſt attention.

When theſe propoſals were firſt publiſhed, their impreſſion on the public mind, and their ſucceſs, were equally uncertain, conſequently it was judged indelicate, in ſuch a ſtate of apprehenſion, to receive any pecuniary ſupport towards a publication which might fall—through defect of public ſpirit, or many local circumſtances which generally exiſted, to repreſs zeal in the promotion of literary endeavours.

Experience however has proved thoſe fears imaginary, as the moſt liberal and general ſupport has been obtained for theſe Propoſitions, wherever they were communicated—This indulgence and patronage engrave on the breaſt of the Writer, ſentiments of affection and grateful remembrance, not to be effaced; and it is with peculiar ſatisfaction he and his Aſſigns will receive a part of the price of theſe volumes towards diſcharging expences indiſpenſibly connected to the work.

Subſcriptions are taken by Meſſrs. Prichard & Hall, the Printers of this Hiſtory, in Philadelphia.

MOORE-HALL,

THE Eſtate of the late William Moore, eſquire, ſituate upon the river Schuylkill, in the townſhip of Charles-Town, in the county of Cheſter, diſtant 23 miles from this city.

The Eſtate conſiſts of upwards of 600 acres of moſt excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Manſion Houſe is ſpacious, convenient and airy; it is ſituated upon a high and healthy ſpot, and commands a moſt delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Griſt-Mill on the premiſes, near the Manſion Houſe, on a never-failing ſtream, called Pickering, running through the eſtate, and watering a great body of meadow; this ſtream empties itſelf into the Schuylkill in front of the houſe; it formerly ſupplied water for a ſaw mill, which might with much eaſe and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Eſtate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any perſon inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premiſes before the day of ſale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, eſquire, in Arch ſtreet, or PETER MILLER, eſquire, in Third ſtreet. Sept 17 eptf

Will be expoſed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thurſday the 29th of November next, at the Court-Houſe in Harford county, ſtate of Maryland.

The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a ſmall expence by ſeveral ſprings, and a conſiderable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewiſe flows through a part of it, on which is a mill ſeat. AMERICA.

KINGSTON, (Jamaica) Aug. 15.

From the late heavy and incessant rains, we are informed that ground provisions are advancing in price, yet we hope the spirit of monopoly may in this instance be checked, as the real scarcity can be little more than ideal.

On account of the violent winds and heavy rains, with which we have for several days past been visited, his majesty's packet boat the Thynne, which was to have sailed from Port-Royal on Monday morning last, with the mails for Great-Britain, has been as yet detained in port,—but is expected to sail as this morning.

Aug. 18. We are sorry to advertise our readers, that a great number of the inhabitants of this town, are at present in a state of severe sufferance, under different kinds of malady,—generated, as we (who are no sons of Æsculapius) presume to think, by the obnoxious vapours and other pernicious qualities, proceeding from the late, and long continued bad weather. But whatever might be the real cause, laying conjectures aside, a great many mortals, of different descriptions, have been lately consigned to the "Bourne from whence there is no return."

We are informed, that on Thursday last a certain person resident in this town, having issued a warrant for a debt due to him, and been delivered to a constable, who not finding goods and chattels on which to make a levy, was therefore directed by the plaintiff to seize a fish, which was of a large size, and sent by the defendant to market; which was actually levied upon, and on the spot retailed for the damages of the plaintiff.

Aug. 28. A correspondent remarks the constables were yesterday very alert in enforcing among the Jews, due obedience to the solemnity of the day, very proper no doubt, but it would have been still more so had they paid equal attention to the Christians. In future, Messrs. Sons of the Staff, be it your care that there are no distinctions. The man who acknowledges a creator—that the elements are under his controul, and has witnessed the dire effects of their rage, yet will not allot one day to deprecate the anger of that being on whom his all depends, should be taught to pay at least an outward respect to the religious institutes of the government that protects him.

Aug. 29. Yesterday being the anniversary fast, held in commemoration of the dreadful storm which desolated this island in the year 1722, we are happy to compliment the inhabitants in general on their strict and religious observance of it,—— Few people having been found laboring in their vocations. Divine service was attended at the church by a considerable congregation, where an excellent sermon was delivered by the reverend Mr. Rees, as a comment on the 20th verse of the 5th chapter of the Ephesians: "Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Sept. 1. Yesterday morning about one o'clock there was a most dreadful storm of thunder and lightning accompanied with violent gusts of wind from the S. E. and heavy rains: The pitchy darkness of the morning added horror to the scene, yet, although many persons were filled with the most acute apprehensions, we have the satisfaction to remark that no accounts are received of any damage being sustained.

In the eye of reason and philosophy, remarks a correspondent, such elemental commotions as those of yesterday, will be looked upon rather as benefits than evils, without them our atmosphere might retain a load of pestilential vapours which would render life a burthen scarcely to be borne; yet, so truly horrid is the appearance, that we are tempted to exclaim, "Mercy sweet Heaven." The good man may indeed sit secure amid the storms of fate, but to the Usurer, to the enemy of his species, we will cry

——Tremble thou wretch
That hast within thee undiscover'd crimes!
Hide that bloody hand,————
Thou perjur'd villain, holy hypocrite,
That drink'st the widow's tears; sigh now and cry
These dreadful summoners grace!

Sept. 8. The Spanish brig which arrived last Saturday from Leguira, on the Spanish Main, was overtaken by a gale of wind during her passage to this island, which obliged the captain to throw upwards of forty horses and mules overboard to lighten the vessel.

On Wednesday last the brig Mississippi, Antonio Dulargue, from the Mississippi, put into this port in distress. Captain Dulargue was 45 days at sea, and during that period, had to encounter very stormy and tempestuous weather.

The brig James, Taylor, for Liverpool, which sailed from Port-Royal last Monday morning, sprung a very dangerous leak in a very few hours after she left that harbour, which, notwithstanding every exertion of the captain and crew, gained on them in such a degree as to endanger not only the loss of the cargo, but the lives of every person on board, and obliged the captain to run the vessel ashore in Old Harbour bay, the first port which afforded him a prospect of safety. Fortunately no lives were lost, but the cargo, consisting chiefly of sugar, ginger and cotton, is entirely destroyed, and the vessel most probably be unfit ever to proceed to sea again.

A certain attorney being indebted to a Jew in the sum of seven shillings and six pence, a summons was obtained by the Jew, which not being complied with, a distress warrant was granted, and a levy made on three mahogany chairs. The attorney replevyed the chairs, and the Israelite defended the action. This cause came on at the court of common pleas on Wednesday, when it terminated in favor of the Jew, whose demand, we understand, will amount to about eight pounds for damages and costs.

The month of August, says a correspondent, having elapsed without paying us our annual visit, several of the monopolizing class have thought proper to open their repositories, some of which were so much over stocked, as to cause the price of flour to fall almost one half,——a quantity of that necessary article, of a very good quality, having been lately sold at 25s. per barrel. Whilst we congratulate the public on the cheapness of provisions, it would be ungenerous not to condole with gentlemen, whose humanity alone could induce them to postpone their sales until the serenity of the weather should relieve us from our fears of approaching want.

BASSETERRE, August 10.

The following is extracted from a late Dominica Paper.

S T O R M.

Early on Friday morning last, a sudden squall from the south west, and at last due west, attended with lightning and thunder, was felt severely in Roseau, and the island in general. The shipping in the road, so far as we can learn, have received considerable damage, but we have heard of no other than the following:

The ship John, captain Woodville, belonging to Liverpool, last from Africa, is on shore at Morne Daniel.

The Lovely Nancy, belonging to Septimus Nibbs, Esq; under the fort.

The sloop John, belonging to Stephen Beves, Esq; drove on shore opposite the market.

Mr. Tilson's Little Ben is bulged at Charlotte Ville.

Mr. Barry's sloop on shore at Woodbridge's Bay, a wreck.

Mr. Batte's flat with ten hogsheads of sugar, and Mr. Barclay flat of thirteen hogsheads of ditto are both on shore.

A French schooner, laden with sugar, entirely lost in Woodbridge's Bay, and two French sloops.

The pettiaugre Margaret and Judith, and several small boats, &c. are also on shore in Roseau Bay.

The storm began at two, and abated at half past four o'clock.

Report says the storm was also severely felt at Martinico, where upwards of twenty vessels were lost.

BALTIMORE, October 2.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Andrew Ellicott, dated on the west side of Conawango, August 29, 1787, to his friend in this town.

"About the 16th of June, we began to extend the line, but soon met with unexpected difficulties; the amazing high and steep ridges at the heads of the Tyoga, Alleghany and Cheeneessco rivers soon overcame the strength of our pack horses, and in a few weeks, more than one half were either killed or rendered useless; but very fortunately, when our horses became unequal to the task of conveying our stores and baggage, we found ourselves on a small branch of the Alleghany river. We then found it necessary to make use of the water to enable us to go on with the business, and in six days we made as many canoes, two of which were between 40 and 50 feet in length, the others about 35 feet.

"These canoes with our stores, and uncommon collection of valuable instruments, we hauled 12 miles down a shallow stream, to the main Alleghany river, where our difficulties appeared to be at an end—but how deceiving are appearances! We now found ourselves stopped by the Indians, and were compelled to hold a treaty with them, before they would let us proceed. The following are the speeches which were delivered on this occasion."

The Indians, with the aid of an interpreter, began their address—

'Brothers!

'We have now met agreeably to the appointment of yesterday, and are very thankful to the great Spirit, that our meeting is in health. We perceive you are passing through our country with a number of men—we have likewise seen a line that is carrying on by some of your party. Your business or object, we are entirely unacquainted with. We know of no treaty or sale, whereby the lands in this part of the country became yours. Our young men are astonished, and alarmed at your proceedings. The whole of your business as yet is involved in mystery and darkness to us; and for your own safety, and a continuance of that peace which we desire may be perpetual, we now advertise you of the danger from our young men, and the consequent propriety of discontinuing the line. After this warning, if you still persist in carrying on the business, remember, we now clear ourselves of all blame, that may result from the warmth of our young men and warriors.'

To this speech Mr. Ellicott returned the following answer.

'Brothers!

'We most heartily join with you in returning thanks to that great Spirit, which has enabled us to meet this day in health agreeably to the appointment of yesterday.

'We now inform you that we are the commissioners and people, employed for the purpose of running a boundary line between your lands, and the lands of your brothers of Pennsylvania.

'The people of Pennsylvania have ever been desirous of keeping the chain of friendship bright with their Indian brethren. They have never taken one inch of ground from them, or their forefathers by conquest; but have generously paid the full value of all they now possess.

'The state of Pennsylvania is never to extend over the line we are now running. All the lands to the north of it, which you have not sold to the state of New-York, belong to you; and the land to the south of it, from the river Delaware to the Lake Erie, to your brothers of Pennsylvania, and the lands which you remained possessed of, at the close of the late war, lying south of the line we are now carrying on to Lake Erie, your chiefs sold to the people of Pennsylvania, at the treaties held at Forts Stanwix and M'Intosh, in the year 1784; and received the last payment in full, at Tyoga, in the fall of the year 1785. And now to prevent any future differences about territory, we are setting up a marked stone, at the end of every mile in the line.

'Brothers!

'We came among you to do this business without fear; because it is right. You now talk of danger; but remember, we are doing the business of a whole state, and not the business of a few people, and the least injury done to one of our men, will be considered as done to all the inhabitants of Pennsylvania; and we give you warning, that if any accident should happen to one of our party, in consequence of the imprudence of any of your young men, it will be considered as done by you all; and call forth the resentment of the whole state, the consequences of which will certainly be much more dreadful than you have any idea of.'

After this speech was delivered, a chief from one of the lower towns, spoke to the following effect.

'Brothers!

'I join in thanking the great Spirit for our meeting this day in health.

'Brothers!

'I was sent for by my brothers at this town, to treat about some business. I came blind; but my eyes are now opened. I know what you are about and am satisfied. The thing appears right, the lands are sold and belong to you. You need not fear any danger, I will go before you down the river, and inform my brothers, what you are about; they will be satisfied, and I am willing to answer for your safety.'

'The whole council approved of the sentiments of this chief, and the treaty ended in a request for a sufficiency of rum, to make the old people feel themselves, and the young ones rejoice. We granted their request, and have ever since been treated by them with the greatest respect and tenderness. One of their towns is not more than one quarter of a mile from our present station.'

PRINCETON, Sept. 27, 1787.

On Monday the 24th inst. the grammar school in the College was examined by the president and faculty, and several other gentlemen of literature occasionally present. The first class was examined in several Latin authors, and the Greek Testament, and admitted into the Freshman class in College, in No. 19. After the examination on the Authors, a comparative trial was taken by extempore exercises on Latin, Grammar, Syntax, and Vocabulary, and because of the largeness of the class, four victors were declared as follows:—1. Joseph Caldwell of New Jersey.—2. John Maxwell of Savannah, in Georgia.—John M'Cready of Charleston, South Carolina.—4. John Randolph of Virginia.

The second class were also after examination, tried in the same manner, and three victors declared:—1. Jacob Huger of South Carolina.—2. Geo. Willing of Philadelphia.—3. John Jordan of Montreal, in Canada.

In the third class, two victors:—1. Thomas Dart of South Carolina.—2. John Smith of Princeton.

In the evening, the first class, and any others in the school who pleased, spoke Orations in the College-Hall, before a numerous and polite assembly of ladies and gentlemen. The salutary oration was spoken by Joseph Caldwell, and the valedictory by John Maxwell; and considering the whole speeches as a competition free to any in the school, three victors were declared:—1. Wm. Ferguson.—2. Hen. Purcell.—3. John Hall.

Tuesday the 25th inst. was spent in competitions, free to any under graduates in the College, on several subjects, and the victors declared as follows: On reading English and Orthography.—1. Richard Randolph, 2. Edward Darrell, both of the Sophomore, and 3. George Clarkson, of the Junior class.

On Latin, Grammar, Syntax, and Vocabulary: 1. David Deas, 2. Silas Wood, both of the Sophomore, 3. Barak Gibbons, of the Freshman class.

On English Grammar, Tredwai Smith, George Clarkson, David Stone, Charles Snowden, Smith Thompson, and Silas Wood, were so equal, that no preference could be given with justice.

On English Orations pronounced in the evening in the Church:—1. Richard Randolph, 2. Henry Deas, both of the Sophomore, 3. Thomas Young, of the Freshman class.

Dr. Dickinson's annual Medal for the best dissertation on the following subject: "Zeal for Religion, free from Bigotry and Enthusiasm," was decreed to Nathaniel Higginson of Boston.

On Wednesday the 26th, the annual commencement was attended at 10 o'clock in the forenoon.—The president, the trustees, and faculty of the College, together with the candidates for degrees, walked in procession from the College-Hall to the Church.

The public exercises were opened with prayer by the president; after which succeeded:

1 The salutatory oration, in Latin, on the Progress of Letters, and the assistance rendered them by the Art of Printing; by Mr. Higginson.

2 An oration on Credulity; by Mr. Jones.

3 An oration on Religious Liberty; by Mr. Rattoon.

4 A dissertation, in Latin, on the utility of studying the learned Languages; by Mr. Daniel Smith.

5 An oration on Prejudice; by Mr. Pollock

6 An oration on the Thirst of Fame; by Mr. Read.

7 A dissertation on the disadvantages of Public Punishments, and the superior benefits that might be derived to society, from inflicting the penalties of the greater part of laws in private; by Mr. Green.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.

The Hon. Council of Appointment have been pleased to appoint the Hon. James Duane, Esq; to be Mayor; Richard Varick, Esq; to be Recorder; and Robert Boyd, Esq; to be Sheriff of the city and county of New York.

A letter from the Viscount de Beaumont, commander of the French squadron which lately sailed from Boston, to an officer in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, belonging to his fleet, after requesting his immediate attendance, concludes thus:—'We are ordered to sail immediately. It is probable we have a war with Great Britain.'

Oct. 4. On Tuesday evening last, the Honorable THOMAS BARCLAY, Esquire, on his return from an important embassy to the dominions of the Emperor of Morocco, arrived in this city, via Boston.

Yesterday, being the anniversary of the society for the relief of clergymens widows and their children, a sermon was preached in St. Paul's Church, by the Right Reverend William White, D. D. Bishop of the state of Pennsylvania.

We learn from New-Brunswick, (New-Jersey) that on the evening of Tuesday week a sloop from New-York, bound to Philadelphia, unfortunately run foul of a vessel from North Carolina, off Barnegat, and so materially damaged the former, that she immediately sunk; the latter received very little damage;——happily another sloop in company took up the people, and not a life was lost.

SEPTEMBER 21, 1787.

ON the report of a committee, consisting of Mr. Dane, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Varnum, Mr. R. H. Lee, and Mr. Grayson, to whom it was referred to consider what officers in the civil department are become unnecessary, and to whom was also referred a motion of Mr. Dane:

Resolved, That the offices of the comptroller and auditor, and the clerkships pertaining thereto, from and after the 1st day of November next, shall cease and determine, and the powers and duties thereof shall be transferred to the board of treasury, and after the same period shall vest in, and be exercised and discharged by the said board, and by persons appointed by the said board—and the said board, for the dispatch of the business thus transferred, shall have authority to employ an accountant, whose salary shall not exceed the rate of eight hundred dollars per annum, and no more than two clerks.

Monday, September 24, 1787.

On a letter of the 22d from the board of treasury, stating, that in the sales which they have made of lands in the western territory, a declaration had been made by them, previous to the sale, that the interest on the securities to be received in payment was not to be computed, and requesting to be favored with the sense of Congress, whether in payment of purchases made under the ordinance of the 20th May, 1785, interest should be computed on the principal of the securities, and received in payment on the same term with the principal.

Resolved, That Congress approve of the declaration made by the board of treasury at the time of selling the public lands, that the interest on the securities to be received in payment should not be computed; and direct them to proceed in the same manner in future sales, issuing certificates, or indents of interest, for the interest due on the certificates paid conformably to the authority given them for the sale of the lands between the seventh range of townships and the Scioto, on the 23d day of July last.

The committee consisting of Mr. Smith, Mr. Dane and Mr. Kean, to whom was referred the letter of John M. Pintard, requesting that sea letters be granted for the ship Columbia, and the sloop Lady Washington, bound on a voyage to the north west coast of America, report, 'That it appears to them that the ship Columbia, and the sloop Lady Washington, and their cargoes, are the property of citizens of the United States, and that they are navigated principally by inhabitants of the United States, and are bound on a voyage to the north west coast of America;' whereupon

Resolved, That sea letters be granted in the usual form, for the ship Columbia, burthen about 220 tons, and the sloop Lady Washington, burthen about 90 tons, bound on a voyage to the north west coast of America, under the command and direction of captain John Kendrick.

FREDERICKSBURG, September 27.

Extract from the Kentuckey Gazette, printed at Lexington, by Meſſrs. Bradfords, Auguſt 11, 1787.

"The Frenchman taken with the Indians laſt fall by colonel Logan, is arrived in this diſtrict from the nation, and one Indian with him: they informed colonel Boone, that about 50 Indians were on their way to Limeſtone, with priſoners to exchange for theirs in our poſſeſſion."

PETERSBURG, September 27.

On Friday laſt two ſailors belonging to the ſhip Thompſon, lying at City-Point, who came on ſhore to ſpend the evening at a public houſe there, were ſhot by the landlord; but we are informed they are now in a fair way of recovering. The cauſe of this deſperate aſſault was in conſequence of the ſailors attempting to take a boat the property of the landlord to return on board their ſhip in.

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.

Late letters from London mention that Churchman's Variation Scheme has met with the moſt polite attention. The Commiſſioners of Longitude, appointed by Parliament, having taken the ſame under conſideration: but from their deliberate mode of doing buſineſs, they have not come to a determination. It is generally allowed, that the theory is juſt, and that it will be a conſiderable improvement in the art of navigation; but a doubt remains with ſome, of the variation being eaſily taken at ſea with the neceſſary accuracy; others hope this difficulty may be in a great meaſure overcome. A knowledge of this theory will probably be of uſe to the land holders in the woods of the United States of America, for perpetuating their boundaries. Maryland in particular labours under a diſadvantage on this account, as their lands are held by courſe and diſtance, without any allowance for variation. For want of a true knowledge of the laws of the irregular increaſe and decreaſe of the ſame, the effect is, while part of one man's plantation is thrown into a river, another loſes ſome of his moſt valuable improvements, thereby cauſing perpetual confuſion, which is conſtantly increaſing. All neceſſary to be known for laying them down according to the antient metes and bounds will be, to know the ſituation of the place, and the date of the original ſurvey.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in London to his friend in this city, of a late date.

"I called on the King's mathematical inſtrument-maker again yeſterday, but he being much engaged, he could only tell me, that Dr. Lorimer (a learned aſtronomer and mathematician) had ſeen Churchman's papers, and was promiſed by Dr. Sheppard (an active member of the Board of Longitude) a ſight of the globe. From what he could learn from Dr. Lorimer's opinion, it ſeemed to be, that Churchman's theory is ingenious, but he has not taken all the pains he ſhould have done, in aſcertaining or calculating on known facts, to confirm or illuſtrate it, as perſons diſintereſted will not be ſo likely to undertake the labour neceſſary, and which was incompetent on him."

Letters from Holland, dated the 26th of July, ſay, That in a ſhort time, every thing will be ſettled, while both parties of the patriots join in aboliſhing the ſtadtholderſhip, reviſing the old conſtitution, amending the abuſes, and altering what is found deficient; reſtoring tranquility to the republic, in ſecuring liberty to their country. The deſertion among the troops of the ſtadtholder, through want of money to ſupport them, is ſo general, there will be hardly enough for a guard to protect his perſon. Four provinces adopt the meaſures taken by Holland, and the two other provinces, where the patriots are the minority, will be ſoon, by conſulting their real intereſt, the majority. We expect before the Pruſſians are in motion, and the money from Hamburg and Lubec arrives, or the Engliſh reſolve to ſupport the ſtadtholder, all ſhall be in good order, and this country reſtored to wiſhed for tranquility.

Extract of a letter from Auguſta (Georgia) dated Auguſt 27, 1787.

'From good authority, I have the ſtrongeſt hopes that an Indian war may yet be avoided. The ſpirited reply of the executive to the Fat King's talk, will it is generally thought, have ſome effect; but there is a private negociation going on with M'Gillevery, which I hope will prove more effectual. Should neither anſwer the purpoſe, general Clark, with 1200 men, can be in motion in 12 hour warning, and the militia in this and all the lower counties, are drafted, and the drafts ordered to be in readineſs at a minutes warning. Should there be a war I am afraid it will be a very bloody one.'

Extract of a letter from St. John's, (Antigua) Aug. 28.

"On Saturday laſt arrived here, in great diſtreſs, the ſhip Bonny Laſs, M'Fadzean, maſter, from Boſton, bound to this iſland, having about 11 o'clock on Thurſday laſt, 10 leagues eaſtward of Guadaloupe, met with a violent hurricane, which continued till about ſix o'clock in the afternoon, with ſuch unremitting violence, that it made a new fore-ſail and foreſtay ſail (under which the ſhip was ſcudding) give way; it blew away the jib and jib-boom, made the ſhip broach to and laid her on her beam ends for ſome time; being in this ſituation, the crew were obliged to cut away the main and mizen maſts, after which ſhe righted, and having got before the wind, was driven within about half a mile of the eaſt part of Dominica, which with great difficulty ſhe weathered."

Extract of a letter from Cape Fear to a gentleman in New-York, dated June 30 1787.

"SIR,

"I was ſhipped on board the ſchooner Trumbull, at New Point-Comfort, bound to Charleſton, South Carolina. We went from New Point Comfort to Hampton Road, Virginia, and were cut out the ſame evening by ſome pirates. They hove one of the owners overboard ſame evening, and when they got out of the Capes they threw the pilot and one man that was wounded overboard. On the third day they all left us, a little north of Cape Hatteras, and endeavoured to get to ſhore, but I believe they did not make it: they left us by reaſon of ſome veſſels appearing which they took to be Algerines. They took the cabin boy with them. The morning after they were gone, the captain ordered the mate (as he was not able to go on deck) to proceed to Charleſton, where we were bound. We proceeded on our voyage, but on the third night were run down by a large ſhip, and loſt all our hands but the captain, who lay very ſick in the cabin, the mate, one man and myſelf. Next morning Captain Griffin died; a little before he died he begged us to endeavour to get to our port, and there publiſh the whole tranſaction, and to inform Mr. Linche's friends at New-York or Long-Iſland of his death, as he owned part of the veſſel and cargo. Same day we were boarded by a Spaniſh veſſel; they hove part of their cargo overboard, and took in what they could of ours. They ſcuttled our veſſel on both bows, but ſhe did not ſink while we were in ſight. They carried us to Porto Rico where we were confined in the fore-caſtle till they ſailed for the Spaniſh Main. A ſhort time after we were ſeparated from the mate, who deſired me to inform the other owner (who lives in Norfolk, but whoſe name I have forgot) of the tranſaction."

"I am, SIR, Your humble ſervant,

JOHN VINTS."

O DEAR I'M SO PLEAS'D!

Sung by Miſs POOLE, at Vauxhall Gardens.

WHEN Strephon appears, how my heart pit-a-pat
Shews the tender emotions with which it is ſeiz'd;
To the ſhepherd's bewitching gay innocent chat,
I could liſten for ever—O dear, I'm ſo pleas'd.

Though my grandmother frowns, and proteſts I'm too young,
With the leſſons of Cupid ſo ſoon to be teiz'd;
But ſo ſweet is the honey that falls from his tongue,
That I laugh at my grannam—O dear, I'm ſo pleas'd.

Should he aſk me to wed, as he hinted to day,
When my hand he ſo ſoft and ſo tenderly ſqueez'd;
He's ſo pretty a ſwain, that I can't ſay him nay,
I'm reſolv'd to be marry'd—O dear, I'm ſo pleas'd.

FEMALE PRESENCE OF MIND.

JUST as the unhappy prince James II. left England, in conſequence of the arrival of the Prince of Orange a whim took place, that as there was no king, there was no parliament; no parliament, no law: upon the credit of this ſeveral people took into their heads to range about the kingdom in bands, to plunder. Seventeen of theſe, well armed, went to the houſe of the Receiver General for the county of Norfolk, who had at that time a conſiderable ſum of public money in his hands. A party of theſe robbers entered his houſe, and as they were croſſing the hall, met the Receiver's lady, who not being apprized of the motives of their coming, paid them the uſual compliments of reception, and they in return very genteelly told her, that they were well informed what money was in the houſe, and peremptorily demanded; the lady, without the leaſt heſitation, and with a ſmile on her countenance, told them, ſhe was ſorry for their diſappointment; but that her huſband was gone early that morning to London, to pay the money into the Exchequer; upon which they very civilly retired, not in the leaſt dreaming of their being ſo dexterouſly outwitted: for neither was the money out of the houſe, nor the huſband gone to London, but was counting it over in a room next adjoining.

THE Eſtate of the late William Moore, eſquire ſituate upon the river Schuylkill, in the townſhip of Charles Town, in the county of Cheſter, diſtant 23 miles from this city.

The Eſtate conſiſts of upwards of 600 acres of moſt excellent land 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Manſion Houſe is ſpacious, convenient and airy, it is ſituated upon a high and healthy ſpot, and commands a moſt delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Griſt Mill on the premiſes, near the Manſion Houſe, on a never failing ſtream, called Pickering, running through the eſtate, and watering a great body of meadow; this ſtream empties itſelf into the Schuylkill in front of the houſe; it formerly ſupplied water for a ſaw mill, which might with much eaſe, and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Eſtate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any perſon inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premiſes before the day of ſale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, eſquire, in Arch ſtreet, or PETER MILLER, eſquire, in Third ſtreet. Sept 17 eptf

Foreign Intelligence.

OSTEND, July 15.

WE just now learn from Zaarfte, that the inhabitants of the principal islands in Zealand have declared in favor of the prince of Orange; and the whole province is daily expected to follow their example. This is good news for the Orange cause, as Zealand is one of the five admiralties, and has a number of men of war in their ports, with a race of as good seamen, as the Dutch can any where boast of.

VIENNA, June 29.

We have been favoured with an authentic account of the new city of Cherson, of which some public papers give a very poor description. The city contains a great number of houses, chiefly built with hewn stone, and the rest with wood; they are for the most part one story high, but very commodious and neat. The streets are very large and in strait lines, intersecting each other, which make the city very airy. With regard to its situation, it is placed on the Dnieper, on a large plain, with neither mountains nor hills near it. There are three great warehouses, two Russian and one Polish, and a considerable number of Greek merchants are come from the Archipelago, Smyrna, Salonica and Constantinople, to establish themselves there. About 40 or 50 merchantmen annually trade to that port, without including the small vessels which traffic to Crimea, and along the coast of the Black Sea. All these vessels carry no other flag than the Russian or Austrian, but they belong to divers nations. At present there is no other consul at Cherson than that of his Imperial majesty, who took possession of his charge the 26th of May last with the usual forms after having had the honor of being presented to the Empress. In a little time they say the other powers, such as France, the republic of Venice, &c. will send consuls to Cherson. It has been said the air of the new city is very unwholesome, but its fine situation and experience demonstrate to the contrary. The number of its inhabitants are about 15000, without including the garrison, which is very numerous. We can affirm all these details to be very true and exact, they having been transmitted to us by a person of credit, who made these observations upon the spot.

BRUSSELS, July 3.

The enthusiasm of liberty is at its height; the burgesses have refused to pay fourrier money, which they were to give, to exempt them from lodging the troops, until the final resolution of the sovereign is known.

Four commissioners have been named by the states of Brabant, for the purpose of examining with the Imperial commissaries, into the state of the finances of the religious establishment.

The states of Holland have added the Lion of Brabant to the arms of their province, and join in the common cause with the subjects at Brabant. The same thing has taken place with the states of Flanders, who have presented on the 6th of June last, a very full and particular declaration of their way of thinking, and the resolution which they have come to, to neglect no means of recovering their rights and privileges. Their memorial is written with a great deal of spirit, and contains a list of the sums drawn from that province, from the month of November 1755, unto the month of October last, 1787 the amount of which is brought to 74,581,484 florins 18—11.

On account of this declaration, the nobility of the province have presented an address to the states of Flanders, to congratulate them on having triumphed over the dangerous encroachments of aristocratical power.

LEYDEN, July 3.

Our city has declared for the mediation of France; it is what we expected: Gorcum has also declared for that mediation, and that was not expected; but the burghers of that city, since the admission of a garrison of citizens, have a right to speak to their regency, and to insist on their being adhered to.

LONDON, July 20.

On Tuesday night the three following messengers were dispatched from the secretary of state's office, viz. Mr. Roworth and Mr. Deacon, to Berlin, by different routes; and Mr. Major to the Hague, from which place he arrived on Monday night last.

It may be presumed, that the return of these messengers will bring a decisive answer from his Prussian majesty, with respect to the conduct he means to pursue, in consequence of the present distracted affairs in Holland.

Wednesday a Dutch family paid a visit to the bank, where they were treated with great respect, and, attended by the Beadle, where shewn the different offices, and the nature of the business to which they are separately appropriated. The ladies wore Orange coloured ribbons and sashes.

A piece of brass ordnance has been lately cast in Woolwich Warren, on a plan of one of his majesty's principal engineers, a trial of which is to be made before the Board of Ordnance shortly in order to determine its utility. According to the report of the inventor, who states, that a cannon of such construction will require only 5 8ths of the usual quantity of gun-powder for its discharge, and yet will carry a ball farther, and with greater certainty of effect: He has also stated, that it is capable of further improvement. The saving in the article of gun-powder makes it worthy of notice.

The report circulated about 'Change, that our court had concluded a treaty offensive and defensive with the court of Berlin, was owing to the rumour from the continent of a treaty between our sovereign, as elector of Hanover, and the king of Prussia.

It is generally believed at Berlin, that the king of England, as elector of Hanover, has acceded to the above invitation of his Prussian majesty; but that the elector of Saxony, who had so readily entered into the Germanic League, had requested time to consider of the proposition. This requesting of time was understood simply to mean that the elector wished for the delay, for the purpose of sounding the court of Vienna, to which his highness would not give any cause of discontent, at the moment when a negociation is pending for the marriage of his son Prince Anthony of Saxony with one of the archduchesses.

A letter from a gentleman at Berlin says, that it was generally believed in that capital that the king of Prussia had called upon the different powers that are parties to the treaty concluded under the name of the Germanic League, to enter into a treaty for preventing the Prince of Orange from being despoiled of the prerogatives annexed to his offices of captain and admiral general of the union; or in other words, to prevent any charge in the Batavian constitution, in the preservation of which so many powers, particularly those of Germany are deeply interested, as it cannot be overturned or altered without a war, which those have a right to endeavour to prevent, who might otherwise be involved in the consequences of it.

Though the public papers of Paris admit none of those satyrical personal squibs, so common in the London papers, the private printers amuse us frequently with little works equally severe; and the names of the parties attacked are generally printed at length. A short paper of this kind has been handed about this week, under the title of Parceque, which signifies because. It is in the form of an advice to different persons named therein, each article concluding with a parceque. As all the parties are well known, the inference is easily made by the reader. The following are some of the articles of advice.

We advise the Duchess of ——, and all other Ladies of the Court, who have neither wit nor beauty, not to be impertinent—parceque.

We advise those young gentlemen who love play, and have not great skill not to engage with the Duke of ——, the Marquis of ——, &c. &c. parceque.

We advise those gentlemen who make their Court to the Marchioness of ——, to take a great deal of snuff, and perfume their handkerchiefs—parceque.

We advise the Duke of ———, by all means to be a cuckold—parceque.

We advise the Count of ——, and all the young Fools of Quality, not to drive their cabriolets against Monsieur de ——, when he has a stick in hand—parceque.

We advise the Baron of ——, to stay more at home with his young wife—parceque.

NEW CAP. A la-Mode de Paris.

The bonnet part represents a puff en guele de loup, made of Italian blue gauze—la guele de loupe is represented by the upper part; the lower part is of the species of bonnets a la grand pretresse.

A garland of flowers, composed of yellow, green and red crape, is placed on a band, composed of rose coloured figured gauze; this divides the bonnet in two parts.

And a veil of white gauze falls down behind.

The gentlemen wear yellow and red striped coats, bound with black; black or blue buttons; striped taffety waistcoats, and yellow breeches.

Oval buckles, very large.

The hair is dressed in five curls on each side; two above and three below.

AMERICA.

KINGSTON, (Jamaica) Aug. 8.

We learn from Hispaniola, that the whole of the superior council, judges, &c. are removed from Cape Francois to Port-au Prince, preparatory to the establishing a parliament similar to those in Old France, and that it being thought eloquence was too frequently exerted in proportion to the money'd importance rather than justice of a cause—the pleadings of council in all cases were abolished; and an order made, that the body of evidence and authentic documents should be submitted to the judges in writing; that no undue impression might be made on their minds, and influence their determinations.

The following circumstance which recently took place, will evince the very great efficacy of tobacco when used as an emetic:—A gentleman on his passage from this island to America, in a small vessel, on board of which was no Doctor, was seized with a violent bilious fever—beyond the reach of medical assistance and without apparent means of alleviating the disorder, his only hope was the strength of his constitution, 'till one day happening to swallow some tobacco juice, it caused an immediate evacuation of the bile, a violent perspiration ensued, and the disagreeable disorder quickly left him——A knowledge of this event, we hope, will be of service to persons afflicted in a similar manner.

SHELBURNE, Sept. 6.

The commissioners of his majesty's customs in England having extended and enlarged the time for registering vessels in respect to the island of Newfoundland, and those parts of the provinces of Quebec, Nova Scotia, and New-Brunswick, which are adjacent to the gulph of St. Lawrence, and to the north of Cape Canso, and also in regard to the islands within the said limits, to the first day of January, 1788, and have declared that at the end of one month from that period, this further notice will expire, and that all vessels required to be registered by the acts passed in the 26th and 27th years of his present majesty's reign, must be registered in conformity thereto, within the said period.

Sept. 20. On Monday put in here his majesty's sloop of war Brisk, captain Buller: we are informed she is bound to Passamaquody, being stationed there the winter; and that the Weazle sloop of war, captain Hood, is appointed for this harbour.

Last Tuesday was launched at Jordan river, for Mr Cunningham, of this place, merchant, the Plough, a handsome well built schooner of about 70 tons burthen, now lying near the brig, building for him in the cove.

The ship, building at S ssiou, is almost finished, and will be launched in about a month; she is said to be a very handsome vessel, and an exceeding good one. This is the second ship built in this province, and both in the county of Shelburne. There are some other vessels nearly finished on the western shore of this country, three of them of handsome burthen.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.

Extract of a letter from an American house in Cape Francois, Hispaniola, under date of the 4th ult. to a gentleman in this town.

'We are informed by an ordinance of this day, that NO American vessel (except in distress) will be permitted to enter any French ports in the West Indies, unless the Captain is provided with a Pass from the Consul resident at the place of his departure.'

By a gentleman who arrived last Saturday evening from Great Barrington, we are informed, That last Wednesday morning the troops lately raised for the protection of government, were discharged from service, in pursuance of an order from the Commander in Chief. Those orders were communicated to the soldiery, in a short, elegant, and pathetic address, by Col Lyman, the Commander of the troops. After which, a feu de joy was paid by the infantry, and a Fœderal salute of 13 cannon from the artillery. The troops then receiving provision to carry them to their respective homes, began their march. The regularity and good order of the troops after their discharge, reflected on them the highest honor.

Our informant observes, that the dæmon of faction and discord seems totally to have subsided; and that the late discontents seem to appear exceeding anxious for, and are making great exertions to discharge not only the present, but the back taxes, especially in the county of Berkshire.

That all classes seem to await with the greatest impatience the event of the Fœderal Convention, looking up to it as the fountain from which those streams of political felicity are to flow, which shall make them happy.

Convinced that their late irregularities have proceeded from want of true information respecting the doings of the General Court here, and the danger they are ever in from the want of a vehicle to convey certain intelligence, they have lately given such encouragement to the establishment of a Printing Press, as to have one erected in Pittsfield, for the printing a News-paper; the first number of which made its appearance last Friday.

In fine, our informant observes, as far as his knowledge extends, the views of sedition seem totally in those counties to be eradicated, and loyalty and good order to have taken root in their stead.

Silver and copper Medals, we are told, are striking off, to be carried by Capt. Kendric, bound to the Pacific Ocean, to be distributed among the natives of the Indian Isles: on one side are represented a ship and sloop under full sail, with the words 'Columbia and Washington, commanded by J. Kendric: on the reverse, the following, 'Fitted at Boston, North America, for the Pacific Ocean, by' encircling the names of 'J. Barrell, S. Brown, C. Bulfinch, J. Derby, C. Hatch, J. M. Pintard, 1787.'

The enterprising adventurers on the voyage to New Albion, are determined to send in their vessels a quantity of the copper cents, and half cents, struck at the public mint under the authority of this Commonwealth, to be disposed of among the natives of those countries they may visit in the Southern Ocean. They are finely executed, the device on one side, the Spread Eagle of the union encircled with the word Commonwealth: on the reverse, an Indian, with his bow and arrow, surrounded with the word Massachusetts.

A correspondent observes, that the proceedings of the continental convention, as published in our last, must receive the approbation of every man of independent sentiments; of every man who calculates not only for the honour of individual states, and the happiness and glory of independent America, but for those EMPIRES OF REPUBLICAN FREEDOM, which that NOBLE FABRICK, THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTION, may usher into existence.

In anticipating the acceptance of the AMERICAN CONSTITUTION every countenance brightens with the full glow of hope and animating expectation of public honour, peace and lasting prosperity to our "DEAR COUNTRY."

This town has for some time past been honoured with the residence of Monsieur St. John de Crevecœur, vice-consul for Connecticut, New-York and New-Jersey, from his Most Christian Majesty. This gentleman is the author of the celebrated letters of an American Farmer, which for sensibility and pathetic description are unequaled. Is it not to be regretted, (observes a correspondent) that the work of so worthy a man, and by which he has rendered America so many services, is not to be procured here?

A few days since arrived in this town from Philadelphia, les chevaliers De La Roque, et De Bonbe, captains in the naval armies of his Most Christian majesty—who, we are told, are to embark for Europe, in the Lucretia, captain Callahan, which will sail on Monday next.

On Monday next, the ancient and honourable Artillery of this commonwealth, commanded by the honourable major-general Brooks, will make their second autumnal parade—They will dine at Medford—to which place, it is said, they will be escorted from Malden-bridge, by the Medford Light-Infantry corps.

On Thursday two families, consisting of 19 persons, from Ipswich, passed through this town, on their way to the Ohio country.

The division of the power of the United States into three branches, gives the sincerest satisfaction to a great majority of our citizens who have long suffered many inconveniences from being governed by a single legislature. All single governments are tyrannies—whether they be lodged in one man—a few men—or a large body of the people.

SALEM, September 25.

Last Thursday afternoon, agreeably to orders from the captain commandant, the Salem cadets appeared on parade, in uniform dress, and performed a variety of soldierly exercises, in a manner which marked a pleasing degree of proficiency in the profession of arms. The representation of hostility, by dividing the company into two adverse parties—who alternately acted upon the offensive and defensive, with great spirit, and good order, (except when confusion was purposely created, that the men might learn to recover themselves with dexterity) was highly entertaining, as an agreeable exhibition, to thronging spectators, and must have been peculiarly pleasing to those who reflect on the utility of familiarizing the men, as much as possible, to scenes which they may be called by their country to act in a more serious manner.

At Tewksbury, on the 1st instant, quitted this temporary existence Mrs. Mary Hunt, relict of the late Capt. Peter Hunt, of that place, in the 95th year of her age; who, with meekness and patience, past the various vicissitudes of a long life, in her last moments submitted to death without a sigh, and cheerfully resigned her soul into the hands of her Beneficent Creator.

In the variety of remarks which have been published upon the effects of lightning, no observations have been offered on the difference of its effects in an open and in a close room; few or no instances have occurred where persons have received any injury from lightning while continuing in a room with the doors, windows and chimney closed.—Every instance of death or injury to persons by lightning, has been at an open door or window, or by an open fire place.

HARTFORD, Oct. 1.

On the 24th ult. the schooner Unity, Wm. Warner, master, belonging to Middletown, was lost in a hurricane near Guadaloupe, and Mess. Joseph John Henshaw, merchants, and Samuel Cunningham, jun. of Middletown, also Noah R. Smith, John Norton and Jonathan Lambert, of Chatham, were drowned; the remainder of the people were taken off the wreck the 25th by Capt. M'Lellan, bound to Guadaloupe.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.

The recently published essay of Dr. Smith, Vice President of New Jersey College, 'on the complexion and figure of the Human Species,' is replete with information, argument and elegance.—It will undoubtedly be read with applause on both sides of the Atlantic, and afford one proof more, that America is not entirely destitute of genius.—In speaking of the inaccuracy of travellers and the credulity of Philosophers, he observes——'Even Buffon seems to be credulous when he only doubts concerning the relations of Struys, and other prodigy mongers, who have filled the histories of their voyages with crude and hasty observations, the effects of falshood or of stupid surprize. Nothing can appear more contemptible than Philosophers with solemn faces, retailing like maids and nurses, the stories of giants, of tailed men, of a people without teeth, and of some absolutely without necks. It is a shame for Philosophy at this day to be swallowing the falshoods and accounting for the absurdities of sailors. We in America, perhaps, receive such tales with more contempt than other nations; because we perceive in such a strong light the falshood of similar wonders, with regard to this continent, that were a few years ago reported, believed, and philosophised on in Europe. We hear every day the absurd remarks and false reasonings of foreigners on almost every object that comes under their observation in this new region. They judge of things, of men and of manners under the influence of habits and ideas framed in a different climate, and a different state of society: or they infer general and erroneous conclusions from single and mistaken facts, viewed through that prejudice, which previous habits always form in common minds.'

Oct. 4. We are informed, that Dr. Mitchell has lately received, from Mr. Platt, of Fredericksburg, a semi-metallic substance, which, upon chemical analysis, he proves to be antimony in a state of mineralization by sulphur. This we suppose is the first discovery of that metal in this part of the globe. It is certain that our country contains more valuable articles than we are aware of, and the more it shall be investigated, the clearer will this truth appear.——That our internal resources are sufficient to support our independence, and makes us a mighty people.

ALEXANDRIA, Sept. 27.

Last Wednesday se'nnight, the house of James Keith, Esq; was broke open by some of the villains who lurk about this town, and robbed of money to a considerable amount.

His Excellency General Washington passed thro' this town on Saturday last, for Mount Vernon, on his return from the Fœderal Convention.

Philadelphia, Oct. 8.

We are informed, that John Franklin, the hero of Wyoming, has been seized by several of the friends of government, and brought to this city. It is hoped that some legal steps will be taken to subdue the turbulent spirit of this Western Shays, who has been the chief cause of the discontents in the county of Luzerne, and has uniformly laboured to involve the country in a civil war. Every overture that has been made upon the part of government has been rendered ineffectual by his machinations, and even his election as a representative in the General Assembly was not sufficient to gratify his ambition. "Better to reign in hell, than serve in heaven," has ever been a favorite sentiment with the demons of sedition.

We learn from the eastward, that the noted Daniel Shays has returned to the commonwealth of Massachusetts, and that he frequently appears publicly in the streets of Cambridge, within three or four miles of the town of Boſton. The authority have not thought proper to take him into cuſtody, neither is it likely they will, ſince a pardon has been granted by the executive council to the other offenders who had been tried and condemned.

A general act of oblivion, it is ſaid, either has been or will be paſſed, ſince the late rebellion there has been ſo compleatly cut up by the roots; and thoſe who have been concerned therein have pretty generally returned to their duty and allegiance.

A writer in a late London newſpaper thus obſerves: "The French at the preſent day are at the height of the greateſt commercial power they ever enjoyed. Before the time of Louis XIV. the Jews, the Genoeſe, the Venetians, the Portugueſe, the Flemiſh, the Dutch, and the Engliſh carried on, in their own turns, the trade of France, which was ignorant even of the firſt principles of commerce. Louis XIII. at his acceſſion to the crown, had not a ſingle ſhip. The city of Paris contained not quite 400,000 individuals, and had not above four fine edifices; the other cities of the kingdom reſembled thoſe pitiful villages, which are now ſcarcely complimented with the name of town. The nobility, which were all ſtationed in the country, in dungeons, ſurrounded with deep ditches, oppreſſed the peaſant who cultivated the land; the high roads were almoſt impaſſable; the towns were deſtitute of police, and the government had hardly any credit with foreign nations. But what will ſeem more extraordinary, Voltaire confeſſes, that the French had no ſhare in the great diſcoveries or admirable inventions of other nations; they have no title to the diſcoveries of painting, gunpowder, glaſſes, teleſcopes, the ſector, compaſs the air-pump, or the true ſyſtem of the univerſe; they were making tournaments, while the Portugueſe and Spaniards were diſcovering and conquering new countries from the eaſt to the weſt of the known world; but by what has been done ſince the time of Louis XIV. we may ſee what an active people are capable of, when properly conducted."

A Dublin newſpaper, of the 24th of July laſt, mentions that the trade of that city has greatly increaſed, and that there were at that time more ſhips in Dublin port, from foreign and remote countries, than ever had been known.

Extract of a letter from Paris, July 20.

'Mr. St. Remy, captain of artillery, and knight of St. Louis, has been for about a year at Conſtantinople, where he directed the ſchool of artillery before governed by baron de Tot; as it is decided there will be no war between Ruſſia and the Porte, he is come back to Paris. He declares the Turks conceive eaſily, execute any thing with addreſs, and are very active. He aſſures us that it is eaſy to teach them every art, and that we may be ſure to ſee them make a progreſs in whatever they undertake. He adds, that they are honeſt, juſt, ſuſceptible of honor, brave, and friendly; ſo that travellers ſeem to have very much calumniated their character. Mr. Remy, however, acknowledged that the obſtinacy, ſtupidity, and want of conſequence in the Turkiſh government, cannot ſufficiently be blamed; it is only calculated to keep its ſubjects in a ſtate of ignorance; ſo that abſurdity reigns both in the ſeraglio and the divan. We learn from the ſame perſon, that Mr. Le Roi, director of the dock yards, who was brought up under Mr. Croignard, is employ-in the yards of Turkey, building ſhips and frigates after the manner of thoſe at Breſt. It is likewiſe a French officer who has had the management of repairing the fortifications at Oczakow.

'We learn from Cherbourg, that they are going to ſink the laſt cone, which will be caſt this year: it is the fifth that has been placed during this fine ſeaſon. There are 15 cones now ſunk, which are diſpoſed in ſuch a manner as to form ſhelter for a fleet of 100 ſhips of the line.'

Meſſrs. DUNLAP & CLAYPOOLE,

MR. Findley, Mr. Whitehill, and others, members of the late General Aſſembly, making a diſorderly ſeceſſion from the houſe, with intention to put an end to its deliberations upon the ſubject of calling a State Convention, for the purpoſe of conſidering the ſyſtem offered for the general government of the United States, they have, in a public addreſs, reſted their juſtification on theſe two points:

1ſt. The irregularity of taking up the conſtitution framed by the Convention, without the ſpecial permiſſion of Congreſs—the Aſſembly having in the appointment of deputies to the Convention, proceeded but upon the recommendation of Congreſs.

2d. The unfitneſs of the deputies appointed—— The addreſſers lamenting at the time when the choice was made, that they were all citizens of Philadelphia, and none of them calculated to repreſent the landed intereſt of the ſtate.

Having been alſo members of the houſe, and competent to judge with reſpect to theſe points of juſtification, we beg leave to ſtate all the neceſſary facts concerning them for the information of the public.

As to the firſt—on a communication of the propoſition of Virginia, for holding a General Convention, a bill for the appointment of the deputies was reported by a committee, of which Mr. Findley and Mr. Whitehill were members, and paſſed into a law on the 30th of December laſt. The law, as ſet forth in the preamble, ſtood upon "Repreſentations of Congreſs heretofore made," and on the propoſition of Virginia; but the ſpecial recommendation of Congreſs, to ſend the deputies to the propoſed Convention, made no part of the preamble. This recommendation not having paſſed Congreſs until the 21ſt day of February following, when that body, for the firſt time, recognized the Convention. In the next ſeſſion, on the 28th of March, a ſupplementary law paſſed the houſe; but its only object was to add another deputy to the number already choſen, and its only reference was to the original act.

As the repreſentations of Congreſs ſpoken of in the preamble to the law, of the firſt ſeſſion, were only ſuch as had been frequently made of the weakneſs of the general government, and of the neceſſity that aroſe of endowing it with greater powers, but gave no ſpecial licence to the ſtates to ſend deputies to the Convention propoſed by the ſtate of Virginia, it follows, that in the appointment of the deputies the Aſſembly acted independently of Congreſs, or of its recommendation. It is in vain, for the reaſons beforementioned, that the addreſſers attempt, by a general reference to the tranſactions of both ſeſſions, to cover their aſſertion upon this head—it is an artifice more unworthy than the moſt naked falſehood!

As little can be ſaid in ſupport of the ſecond, their diſapprobation of the deputies which a ſtate of nominations and votes will evince. The original intention of the houſe was to ſend ſeven deputies, though aftewards that number was, by the ſupplementary law, encreaſed to eight. To ſupply the ſeven places, twelve perſons ſtood in nomination: they, with the votes for each, were as follow:

* Jared Ingerſoll	61	John Bayard	25
Charles Pettit	25	* Thomas Fitzſimons	37
* Robert Morris	63	* James Wilſon	35
* George Clymer	63	* Governeur Morris	33
* Thomas Mifflin	63	Benjamin Franklin	10
Thomas M'Kean	26	William Findley	2

Of whom thoſe marked with an * were elected.

As to four of theſe perſons, there appears from the votes to have been a general agreement, 63 being the number compoſing the houſe; ſo that no real controverſy took place but as to the remaining three——Between theſe oppoſite three then muſt have have lain the queſtion with the houſe, with reſpect to the fitneſs to repreſent the landed intereſt; and for this they might all have been fit, except in the circumſtance of city reſidence, the candidates generally holding conſiderable landed proproperty within the ſtate, the whole body of candidates, Mr. Findley excepted, being inhabitants of Philadelphia; and as to that gentleman, the ſolitary nominee from the country, he ſeems then, from the ſtate of the votes, to have been out of the queſtion, which is the more extraordinary, if, as the addreſſers muſt be underſtood, a country reſidence was indiſpenſible to repreſent the landed intereſt of the ſtate.

But the truth is, that at the time of election no ſuch lamentation was made by the ſixteen or any others that the candidates were citizens of Philadelphia, or otherwiſe unqualified to repreſent the landed intereſt; for it is well known, that both Mr. Findley and Mr. Whitehill were of opinion that the choice ſhould be confined to the city of Philadelphia and its neighbourhood, as it would not be convenient for perſons living at a diſtance to attend a Convention; the former declaring a ſeat there would not ſuit him, which, perhaps, may account for the fewneſs of his votes.

This being the ſtate of facts relating to theſe points, can we ſuppoſe a depravation of mind equal to ſuch impoſitions and deceptions, or ought we not rather to ſuppoſe, in theſe inſtances, that the addreſſers were not at the pains to read what was prepared to their hands?

It is urged, in argument againſt the houſe, that the deputies having exceeded the terms of their powers that the ſyſtem they agreed to ought not to be taken up. It is not eaſy to determine to what the powers of the deputation from Pennſylvania, and from the other ſtates) for they are in the ſame predicament) did really extend; but any argument brought from an exceſs in the exerciſe of the powers againſt the object of them cannot be that of good ſenſe or integrity. A man of underſtanding, or a good patriot, will examine only whether or not the ſyſtem actually offered, is calculated to better the condition of our country. Indeed one would think, the ſyſtem being no more than a propoſition, wheih none are bound to yield to, tho' all ought to conſider, that the Convention have not really tranſgreſſed their powers, they certainly might make whatever propoſitions they pleaſed.

The addreſſers reſent the harſh treatment of the houſe to the two of their body who were forced back to their ſeats, by ſome of the citizens from without. They ſuffered no ſuch treatment; on the contrary the houſe ſhewed a wonderful good temper on ſo provoking an occaſion. When a miſdemeanor had been committed of a kind, which, tho' it has hitherto eſcaped even the ſlighteſt puniſhment, is deſerving of the higheſt. When the addreſſers had by their conduct violated the firſt condition of all political ſociety, which obliges the few to give way to the many—When they had offended in the double capacity of citizens of the United States and of Pennſylvania, in ſetting an dangerous example of riot and turbulence to the continent; and, as much as lay in their feeble means, attempting to diſſolve the government under which they live,

Dr. Franklin's not having been choſen at the firſt election, was owing to a miſunderſtanding among the members, with reſpect to his willingneſs to ſerve, but on better information, in the next ſeſſion, it was the unanimous deſire of the houſe that he ſhould be added, which gave occaſion to the ſupplementary law.

The Farmer and Sparrow.

A FARMER ſaw, with much regret,
Some Sparrows in his field of wheat,
And, taking up a plunder'd ear,
Exclaim'd in rage, what havock's here!
For this have I manur'd the ſoil,
And till'd it with laborious toil?
Theſe feather'd epicures—a curſe
To each induſtrious farmer's purſe—
I'll try, without the leaſt delay,
To kill, to maim, or fright away.

The thing no ſooner ſaid than done,
He brought with double charge his gun;
Then plund'rers, cried, reſign your breath,
To leaden meſſengers of death;
And as his thoughtleſs rage inſpir'd,
Amongſt the corn and birds he fir'd.

Six victims fell! a joyful ſight—
He ran, and ſeiz'd them with delight;
Aha, he cries, at length y'are caught,
Your dainties have been dearly bought
From hence your brother thieves may know
Juſtice is ſure, though ſometimes ſlow.

One Sparrow, who had yet ſome breath,
Replied, you triumph in our death;
We lie before your vengeful eyes,
No doubt a pleaſing ſacrifice;
Yet, fooliſh mortal, ſee and own,
The unthought miſchief you have done;
Much more, though raſhly meant for good,
Than twenty times our numbers cou'd;
Beſides, ſurviving friends will more,
Revenging us, invade your ſtore.

What does your reaſon then avail,
If only weigh'd in paſſion's ſcale?
We loſe a doubtful life, 'tis true,
But certain good is loſt to you.

The Farmer look'd, when, lo, he ſaw
Full fourſcore yards of earleſs ſtraw!
For ſuch a tract the ſhot had made,
He ſaw with grief, and ſighing ſaid;
I am a fool, I own the name,
I doubly feel the loſs and ſhame;
And find the man by paſſion wrought,
Who turns to action ſudden thought,
Inſtead of profit, or content,
Will find occaſion to repent;
Then why ſhould anger reaſon fetter?
Reflection would have taught me better.

A N E C D O T E.

LOUIS XIV. was one day entertaining a ſelect party of his courtiers with the relation of a circumſtance, which he had announced as extremely laughable. But on the entrance of prince Armagnac, he ſuppreſſed a fine repartee, which conſtituted the merit of the ſtory. The whole circle felt themſelves diſappointed, which was ſeldom the caſe when his majeſty promiſed them entertainment, and were therefore ſurprized. The king obſerved it, but ſaid nothing until the prince departed. "Now, gentlemen, I'll make you laugh," ſaid he, and accordingly gave them the anecdote unmutilated, which produced in a high degree the promiſed effect. "You ſee," ſubjoined Louis, "there was an oblique ſtroke that would have affected the prince, and I ſuppreſſed it to prevent his being embarraſſed; for I would rather loſe the reputation of the beſt bon mot that ever was uttered, than give a moment's pain to any individual."—An example worthy the imitation of all who aſpire to the character of a really fine gentleman.

WANTED, a reputable WOMAN, who can do Houſe Work, and can be well recommended. Enquire of the Printers.

He has on each arm images imprinted in the ſkin with Indian ink, and on one the firſt letters of his name; his right arm has been broken at the wriſt and elbow. His cloathing when he went away was a new broad cloth coattee of a lead colour, made with a ſtand up collar, with wooden buttons, old brown velvet breeches, a half-worn round felt hat, and calico waiſtcoat; talks very broken Engliſh. Whoever takes up ſaid runaway, ſo that his maſter may have him again, ſhall receive the above reward, with reaſonable charges, paid by

MOORE-HALL,

THE Estate of the late William Moore, esquire, situate upon the river Schuylkill, in the township of Charles-Town, in the county of Chester, distant 23 miles from this city.

The Estate consists of upwards of 600 acres of most excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Mansion House is spacious, convenient and airy; it is situated upon a high and healthy spot, and commands a most delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Grist-Mill on the premises, near the Mansion House, on a never-failing stream, called Pickering, running through the estate, and watering a great body of meadow; this stream empties itself into the Schuylkill in front of the house; it formerly supplied water for a saw-mill, which might with much ease and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Estate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any person inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premises before the day of sale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, esquire, in Arch street, or PETER MILLER, esquire, in Third street.

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be exposed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thursday the 29th of November next, at the Court-House in Harford county, state of Maryland,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing; they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

Those who wish to view the land, on application to Mess. Ashton and Waters, the present tenants, will be shewn it. Possession will be given the 1st of January, if required. The title good and free of all incumbrances. The terms will be easy to the purchaser, and will be made known on the day of sale, by Wm. WEST.

Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, June 12.

BY letters received on Saturday from Madrid, we are informed, that the Prince of Asturias, who was declared heir apparent to the Crown of Spain, on account of an invincible imbecility of mind in the Duke of Calabria, his eldest brother, has renounced the right so given, in consequence of a surprising recovery in the Duke's intellectual faculties.

Sir Richard Jebb's practice for 20 years was considerable, and perhaps during the years 1779, 80, and 81, little inferior to Mead's in the best times. His fees in those three years, it appears from undoubted documents, were no less than 20,000 guineas!

June 28. A petition has been sent to the French ministry from the Nantucket people settled at Dunkirk, who are principally Quakers, to be permitted to build a meeting-house. It is imagined this will be connived at, if not permitted in positive terms. It is a singular and curious fact, that the island of Nantucket contains 6000 inhabitants, and that nine tenths of these are Quakers. They have belonging to their port 140 vessels, 128 of which are the property of the quakers. It is not unworthy of remark, that the Nantucket people, previous to the American disputes, sent all their oil to this country, but now carry it to France, where they meet with every possible encouragement.

It is rather whimsical that the only two persons whom the states of Holland will not suffer to remain in their province, are the Princess of Orange and Lord George Gordon.

July 5. A new set of beggars now infest our streets, supporting themselves by their art in idleness drunkenness and profligacy. They are distinguished by the appellation of genteel beggars.——Their letters, cases and testimonials are provided with signatures by common advice, by aid of which they commonly personate American loyalists, reduced to poverty by wars, rebellions, and other unexpected misfortunes. They get admission by boldly knocking at doors, and if they find women only in the house, they are sure of obtaining money either by solicitation or menaces. Why are magistrates so tender to beggars and vagabonds? Because they get nothing by them until they are become felons!

We have received a confirmation of the report circulated some time ago, of the Dey of Algiers having declared war against the state of Tunis, that every preparation is making which a savage ferocity of temper can prompt, and that a numerous army was ordered to march against Cape Bon, for the purpose of attempting the reduction of that place.

The defection of the Holland line seems to be over, and the remaining part of the troops may be regarded as loyal; they amount to about one half, which increases daily by numerous recruits, as well as by deserters from Amersfort. The progress of the Stadtholder has, however, been balanced by a considerable loss in Overyssel. The regiment of Plettemberg, that wanted to surprize Deventer, has been compleatly beaten by the burghers. It is asserted that upwards of 400 soldiers were killed, 150 made prisoners. The burghers had 75 men killed. We expect further particulars of that affairs.

July 15. The immensely rich bank of Amsterdam differs from every national bank, in paying no interest; and what may seem a paradox, that the money in it is worth something more than current cash is, in common payments. The cash, bullion, and pawned jewels in this bank, have been estimated by some at 36, by others at 38 millions sterling; a greater treasure, perhaps, than is collected together in any part of the known world. It is kept in vaults under the Stadthouse.

The wine drinkers are all in favour of the French commercial treaty—they say, since the sun of Great Britain's glory, as Lord Landsdown says, has set with the dismemberment of America, let us take a bottle of good claret and champaigne, and make a good night of it.

July 18. On Saturday at the conclusion of 'Change hours, Capt. Birch of the Hope, just arrived from Oporto, declared, "that on the 8th inst. he saw a French fleet, consisting of 14 sail of the line, that the Captain hailed them, and was informed they were from Brest, but would not acquaint him of their destination." This information has caused the greatest consternation in the city, and the chief opinion at Lloyd's, was, that the above squadron is destined for the Texel, or to the East Indies.

Money in Holland is at present so scarce, that interest is at four per cent.. The usual fluctuating price being from two and a half to three per cent.

Mr. Eden's appointment to Madrid, is that of ambassador, with the usual appointment of 6000l. per annum.

It is positively said, that Mr. Eden has given government the strongest assurances, that there is not the least probability of a war between this country and France, in consequence of the disturbances which are grown to such an alarming height in Holland.

We are informed, that after the taking of Middleburg, a public declaration of submission was made to the Prince of Orange, on condition of reserving all their prerogatives, rights, and privileges, which they enjoyed in 1747 and 1748 from his father, and which he himself acknowledged in 1766. The people of Flushing have done the same. All the island of Walken is also decidedly for the Stadtholder, the magistrates of which place ordered a general illumination two successive nights, on the announcing of their declaration.

July 20. A letter from a gentleman at Berlin says, that it was generally believed in that capital, that the King of Prussia had called upon the different powers that are parties to the treaty concluded under the name of the Germanic League, to enter into a treaty for preventing the Prince of Orange from being despoiled of the prerogatives annexed to his offices of Captain and Admiral General of the union; or in other words, to prevent any change in the Batavian constitution, in the preservation of which so many powers, particularly those of Germany are deeply interested, as it cannot be overturned or altered without a war, which those have a right to endeavour to prevent, who might otherwise be involved in the consequences of it.

On Monday last came on to be tried at Guildhall, before Lord Loughborough, and special juries of the city of London, two causes; one action being brought by the Hon. Alexander Cockran, and the other by William Bett, Esq; Captains of the navy, against Aretes Akers, of Queen's-square, Bloomsbury, Esq; executor of the will of his father Aretas Akers, of the island of St. Chistophers, to recover their shares of the proceeds of fourteen American vessels and one Dutch ship, which were captured off the island of St. Eustatius, in the months of February and March, in the year 1781, by the fleet under the command of Lord Rodney, when verdicts were given in favour of the plaintiffs; and the court and jury, with a view to express the sense which they entertained of the propriety of Mr. Akers's conduct, gave interest to the plaintiffs for the detention of the prize money, from the month of May 1782. It is hoped that these verdicts will induce the agent to make an immediate distribution, as there are upwards of 7000 seamen entitled to share in the prize money, many of whom have but too much reason to lament that their own agent, and his representative, have not discharged their duty. The agent had flattered himself, that by refusing to permit the committee appointed by the captors, and their solicitors, to inspect the accounts and papers respecting the prizes, the plaintiffs would be unable to prove the exact amount of money which had been received by his father; but this scheme was frustrated by the aid of Lord Rodney, who attended the trials at the apparent risk of his health, in order to assist in asserting the rights of the captors, and his Lordship produced an account made out by the defendant's father in the year 1781, ascertaining the net sum arising from the sale of the prizes.

On Saturday a very interesting and important cause was tried before Mr. Justice Buller and a special jury of merchants in the court of King's Bench at Guildhall, the determination in which is worthy the attention of all who navigate the English channel. The plaintiff complained that his ship, the Judy Randolph, had been run against and damaged by the ship Petersfield belonging to the defendant; the Petersfield indeed being the smallest vessel went to the bottom, but nevertheless the plaintiff's ship being damaged by the negligence of the Petersfield's crew, he brought his action against her owners: the cause lasted the whole day, but the rule adopted by the court and jury is all that it is to our purpose to communicate. Mr. Erskine for the plaintiff contended, that as the Judy Randolph was coming up the channel with the wind North by West, which after she had passed Dungenness, kept her close by the wind, with her larboard tacks on board, in order to reach the Downs, it was the duty of the Petersfield, who had the wind large, to pass her to leeward, and not to dispute the wind with her; it being a loss to a ship going to windward, to be obliged to bear away, but none to a vessel going to leeward; and that as the accident happened by the Petersfield with the wind on the starboard beam, striking against the Judy Randolph, while she was close hauled on the larboard tack, and her sails indeed shivering, she was responsible for not having put her helm up and passed her to leeward: the witnesses on the defendant's side not being able in their evidence to deny this rule, Mr. Justice Buller with great force and judgment stated the importance of preserving it, compared it to the rules of the road, by which the security of carriages was preserved; and desired the jury to find the custom if they thought it supported by the evidence; which they did accordingly, and gave a verdict for the plaintiff. It appeared that the crew of the Petersfield had kept no look-out.

UTRECHT, July 5.

The Prince of Orange has had a fresh supply of artillery, and we daily expect an attack; but all is kept ready to receive him.

AMERICA.

MONTREAL, Sept. 11.

Last Saturday between the hours of one and two o'clock in the afternoon, his royal highness Prince William Henry made his public entry into this city, in a manner suited to his birth, and to the ardent wishes of the inhabitants.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.

The result of the Fœderal Convention has at length transpired, after a profound secrecy being observed by the members who composed it; which, at least, has done honor to their fidelity, as we believe, that scarcely another example can be adduced of the same caution among so large a number of persons.——This country, singular in every thing; in her rise, progress, extent of jurisdiction, in her emancipation and liberty, we flatter ourselves, is going to exhibit a new instance of a government being firmly and indissolubly established, without the arts, violences and bloodshed, which have disgraced the annals of the eastern hemisphere.——Its acceptance will enroll the names of the WASHINGTONS and FRANKLINS, of the present age, with those of the SOLONS and NUMAS; of antiquity. The military virtues of the former; and the philosophic splendor of the latter, will be obscured by the new lustre they will acquire, as the legislators of an immense continent.—Illustrious CHIEFTAIN! immortal SAGE!——ye will have the plaudit of the world for having twice saved your country!——You have once preserved it against the dangers and misery of foreign domination; you will now save it from the more destructive influence of civil dissention.—The unanimity you have secured in your deliberations is an auspicious omen of our future concord and felicity. We anticipate with pleasure the happy effects of your wisdom. The narrow, contracted politics, the sordid envy, the mean jealousy of little minds; the partial views, and the local prejudices, which have so long retarded the growth of this people, will now be annihilated. In their place a more enlightened and dispassionate legislation, a more comprehensive wisdom, and a plain, manly system of national jurisprudence, will be happily substituted. America, which has sunk in reputation from the operation of these causes, will arise with renewed splendors, when the clouds, which have so long obscured her fame, shall be thus dissipated. By considering what we have already suffered by an opposite policy, we may the more easily conceive what we must necessarily obtain from the adoption of this new constitution. We shall, indeed, have but little to fear, and every thing to hope. The true interests of the several parts of the confederation are the same. They only differ in points, which are fictitious and imaginary. We shall distinguish our friends, and punish our enemies. Our distance from the fatal vortex of European politics will secure us from the dangers of war: The canvass of these states will whiten the ocean; instead of being any longer neglected, our friendship will be prized and courted by all. A new æra will commence, and this country will be said to be in existence, but from the moment, when the plan submitted to the people shall be generally adopted. The distinctions of state councils will be lost in the stronger ties by which the citizens of America will be connected to one another. As yet, every thing looks fair, and the voice of opposition is scarcely heard in whispers; may it then perish; and may peace, unanimity and happiness, become perpetual throughout America.

NEWBURY-PORT, Sept. 26.

Yesterday sen'night, died suddenly at his seat in Hampton, Jonathan Moulton, Esquire, major-general of the New Hampshire militia.

On Saturday morning last, departed this life, the honorable John Sparhawk, Esq; of Portsmouth, late Speaker to the House of Representatives of the state of New Hampshire.

NEW-LONDON, Sept 28.

Thursday evening last arrived here the brig Mercury, captain Howard, belonging to Connecticut river, in 10 weeks from Amsterdam. He informs that great preparations for war continued to be making in that capital, where 36 companies of militia are exercised daily—that frequent skirmishes happen between the militia and the prince's troops—that the populace have demolished several houses belonging to the adherents of the prince—that 20 sail of men of war are fitting for sea—that the Prince of Orange continued at Utrecht with 6000 troops, and that the United Provinces were in a state of anarchy, similar to that of America immediately after the battle of Lexington.

About the 10th of August, capt. Howard spoke capt. John Wilton, from L'Orient, in France, bound to Charleston, South-Carolina, who informed him that 25 sail of men of war were fit for sea at that port, and others fitting out with the utmost expedition.

On Thursday last, St. James's Church, in this city was consecrated; when a sermon was delivered on the occasion by Bishop Seabury.

NEWPORT, Sept. 27.

A correspondent observes, that this is a period of momentuous concern,—to be a united nation of importance, or petty anarchies is now the question.—The inefficacy of our present government is fully proved by the encroachments on our commerce, the decline of national honor, and the confusion pervading every state. Thus maturated in knowledge by painful experience, we are called on to adopt a system, produced and organised by the deliberations of men whose virtues and abilities will be an immortal honor to America.—Should any state reject this salutary system, unbiassed posterity will consign their names to an infamous immortality——should it be rejected by the union it will involve in consequences the most fatal—some bold usurpers will establish governments for us pregnant with all the evils of the most abject slavery.

America, says a bachelor, hath no convents nor systems regularly established for celibacy; but her towns and cities have adopted the instultifying habitudes of Europe. Although young in government, agriculture and manufactures, she is prematurely old in luxury, effeminacy and debauchery. The farcical ceremonies and absurd customs of the old world she hath adopted with the greatest avidity. Before the age of puberty her sons are taught to avoid matrimony as the Scylla and Charybdes of life, while her modest daughters pine in solitariness and desires.—"My son obtain a fortune before you marry," is the language of parents; but had I the steps of youth to tread over again my first act of manhood should be a matrimonial alliance, and my highest ambition would be to sustain the exalted character of a good husband and father.——Youth is the seed time of virtue, procrastinate the injunctions of nature to a later period in quest of wealth to crown the bridal bed, and the sinews of attachment are unnerved or basely prostituted.—The great causes of unhappy matches, says our speculative correspondent, is a foolish predilection for nobleness of birth, riches or beauty—seek first, says he, a congenial mind, be industrious, frugal and virtuous, and the Author of our being will crown the union with every necessary blessing.

BENNINGTON, (Vermont) Sept. 10.

Extract of a letter from Manchester, Sept. 4.

"We have just closed our freeman's meeting: Major Ormsby is elected representative, We were much divided in our votes for governor. General Safford had the most, judge Robinson the next, and a number for the reverend Mr. Swift and his excellency the present governor. The freemen were unanimous in choosing Mr. Marsh for Lieutenant governor.

ALBANY, Sept. 27.

With the deepest regret we inform the public of the great number of Counterfeit Bills, which are now in circulation in this and almost every part of the state. Within a few days past two persons have been detected in this city (and committed to goal) in knowingly offering to pass counterfeit ten and three pound bills—one of them had in his possession about fifty pounds of this paper, with a few good bills. The counterfeits are of almost every denomination, and scarcely a day passes without more or less of them being discovered.

NEW-YORK, September 27.

A correspondent remarks, that the wonderful propensity of Europeans, to rob the Americans of the fame of having accomplished every thing great, or glorious, puts him in mind of the following genuine anecdote: An Irish Officer upon seeing a beautiful picture, sketched upon a wall in America, exclaimed, "By Jasus it is fine painting—but it was never done in America." "Oh, Sir," says his friend, "don't you see it is on a solid wall, and therefore must have been done in this country." "Ah," replies he, "by Jasus I see that plain enough, but I only meant that the man who did it, was never in America."

Last Sunday morning, after a lingering illness, which she bore with the most exemplary fortitude, departed this life, in the 51st year of her age, Mrs. DEBORAH FRANKLIN, the truly amiable consort of Mr. John Franklin, merchant of this city, and eldest daughter of the late Anthony Morris, Esquire, of Philadelphia. Her remains were, on Tuesday evening, attended by a very numerous and respectable concourse of citizens, of almost every denomination, to the Friends burying ground, where they were interred agreeable to the order of the society.

This benevolent lady had, prior to the year 1780, long been subject to those acute arthritic complaints which frequently subdue the most robust, but which she bore with a truly Christian patience. On the 21st of November, 1780, the British Commandant of this city, no longer able to hear of, or bear, the daily accounts of her contributing, with unbounded liberality, to the relief of her fellow-citizens, who were prisoners of war, banished her, without any regard to her situation or sex, or the inclemency of the season, from this city, by which act of cruelty she became deprived of the use of her feet. But neither the threats, power, nor cruelty of Britons could change her sentiments relative to the justice of her country's cause, nor deter her from exercising her humanity towards those whom the fortune of war brought within the reach of her relief. Nor was her benevolence confined merely to those unhappy objects, but extended to all those, without distinction, with whose distresses she was acquainted.

As she lived greatly beloved, she died much lamented by those who wish to imitate her virtues, and has left a husband and seven children, to deplore their irretrievable loss.

RICHMOND, Sept. 26.

We learn from good authority, that the Federal Constitution was unanimously passed on the 17th inst. when the honorable Convention of the United States closed their deliberations. We are sorry to add, from the same authority, that his Excellency Edmund Randolph, Esq; our worthy chief magistrate, will not return to this city as soon as might be expected, owing to the indisposition of his lady. But however anxious we may be for the pleasure of beholding him among us, we cannot, without exultation, reflect on the profitable sacrifice which we have made of it this some time past: What Virginian's breast glows not with the expectation of the boon he is bearing towards us, when he considers, that its first shoot sprung from this state; that it has been reared to maturity by men, who give dignity to human nature; that it is the Tree of Life, whose fruit will enthrone this western empire high among the nations, and raise the firmest and fairest temple to Liberty that has ever yet dignified this globe.

Philadelphia, Oct. 9.

A set of gentlemen lately travelling in the interior parts of South Carolina were benighted in such a storm as if the jarring elements had combined for their destruction—even hope was nearly extinguished; but when despair had almost risen to the summit, they beheld that soul-cheering sight to forlorn travellers—a light. To it they repaired, with jocund hopes of finding an asylum from the storm. When they came to the place, it was a little cottage, half uncovered; around a little fire were crouded the landlord, his wife and four children, and whilst the pealing thunder roared portentous over their heads, and through each open place the teeming rain descended, the host unconcernedly thrummed a tune on a little kit, the strings of which were half broken. Our travellers were so astonished at this stoic, that they forgot their wretched plight in admiration. Good God! exclaimed one, what can possibly be the reason that you do not thatch your house? Why, because it rains. Well but, says another, why do you not cover it in fair weather? Because, Sir, then you know (still playing on) you know then there will be no occasion.

At a court of Nisi Prius, oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery, lately held at St. John's, Nova-Scotia, was tried by a special jury, a civil cause of a singular nature, in which Mr. Samuel Randall, merchant, was plaintiff, and W. D. Esq; defendant.—The defendant drew a set of bills of exchange on a respectable mercantile house in London; which were for 50l. transferred by a blank indorsement to Mr. William Charlton, and by him to the plaintiff. The first and second of these bills were sent to England by the plaintiff, both returned protested, the first copy of the bill returned first, and was inclosed by Mess. Rutherford and Young of London to the house of Thomson and Reid of that city, who shewed the protest to the defendant, and demanded payment for principal, interest, damages, &c. Payment was accordingly promised, but before payment could be made, the plaintiff (who had also the third of exchange in his possession) received the second copy under protest from Richard Heatly, Esq; of London, and in like manner demanded payment, but was refused, and payment was afterwards secured to Mess. Thomson and Reid, whereupon the plaintiff brought his suit.

N. B. It did not appear, how or by what means the two bills came into the possession of the different bearers. The jury found a verdict for the defendant.——Counsel for the plaintiff, Mr Solicitor General; for the defendant, Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Hardy.

The ADDRESS of the OFFICERS and MANAGERS of the PENNSYLVANIA SOCIETY for the Encouragement of MANUFACTURES and the USEFUL ARTS.

To the People of Pennsylvania.

Friends and Fellow Citizens!

AN association has been formed in Philadelphia, by a respectable number of its inhabitants, for the encouragement of manufactures and the useful arts in America.

The board which now addresses you, is deputed to carry into effect the objects of this institution; in the fulfilment of which trust, they deem it a measure of essential importance to call upon you for your assistance and co-operation.

During our existence as a dependent people, the extension of manufactures in this country was of less importance than at present: the various markets then open to its commerce, afforded a sure demand for its exportations, and the inhabitants of it found constant employment, in the production and transportation of its commodities. The wealth then sent away to pay for our importations, either returned back to us through other channels, or contributed to enrich an empire of which we were ourselves a part, and in whose losses or prosperity we bore a share.

We have now assumed a new political station, and experience demonstrates, that we must adopt a correspondent alteration in our internal œconomy. The markets for our produce are reduced in number and certainty; our navigation is depressed; we feel an hourly diminution of our wealth; and the support of our artificers and labourers, is becoming precarious and difficult.

Nature has done her part in our behalf, by giving us eminent advantages in soil, climate and situation:—Let it be remembered that no free country to which she has been bountiful, can suffer lasting distress or difficulty, unless from neglect or abuse of her favors. Hence our situation loudly proclaims to us that the evils we suffer originate only in ourselves; that our present system of manners and policy is destructive to our interests; and that if we continue to pursue it, our population will be diminished, our strength as a nation destroyed, and our country reduced to poverty, insignificance and contempt.

You have exhibited to the world a ſpectacle of magnanimity in war—ſuffer not yourſelves to be pointed at for imbecility in peace:—Let mankind be convinced, that you are not more diſpoſed to remain the dupes of prejudice, than to become the victims of power. The legiſlators of America are performing their part in this alarming criſis; it is the duty of its citizens to ſupport them by correſponding exertions:—Let us then vigorouſly exert ourſelves to remove thoſe cauſes of our difficulties which lie within our reach—Let us baniſh indolence and foreign luxuries from our habits of life, explore the reſources which nature has beſtowed on us, reject the uſe of all foreign manufactures which are ſuperfluous, and employ our own people as much as poſſible in making thoſe which are neceſſary.

By ſteadily purſuing theſe meaſures, we ſhall not only ceaſe to purchaſe more than we can pay for, but ſhall turn the tide of commerce in our own favor, and finally oblige the nations of Europe to refund the wealth they have lately drawn from us. It is by preſerving a due proportion between their income, and their expences, that the affairs of individuals are found to ſucceed; nor do nations riſe to wealth or importance without cloſely attending to the ſame principles. By a ſtrict adherence to this ſyſtem, Holland under many diſadvantages has obtained a place among the firſt powers of Europe; while other nations from neglecting it, ſunk into impotence, though favored with the choiceſt gifts of nature, and poſſeſſed of the richeſt mines in the world.

If there be any among you, who ſuppoſe that the intereſts of agriculture, will be injured by an attention to manufactures they ſhould recollect, that a conſtant demand for the productions of our lands, cannot be ſecured, without manufacturing towns to conſume them; and that notwithſtanding the important advantages reſulting from exportation, to rely on it alone for the ſupport of our agriculture, is a precarious dependence in our preſent circumſtances. Such a reliance, muſt be ſubject to the fluctuating wants of other countries, the caprice of foreign princes, and the interruptions of war; while a conſumption at home is regular and certain.

But this is not the only weighty objection, to the excluſive purſuit of agriculture, in a nation whoſe protection depends on themſelves: A people employed wholly in the cultivation of lands, muſt always be a weak one, becauſe its wealth and population muſt continue in a ſcattered ſtate; and this inconvenience, would be peculiarly felt in America, where the cheapneſs of its weſtern land, will prevent our numbers from accumulating, if they are not induced to keep together, by towns and their neighbourhood.

There may be other perſons, who think it in vain to apply to manufactures, while our numbers continue ſo few: We reply to this objection, that altho' we cannot fabricate, all the manufactures we conſume, yet experience proves, we ſucceed in making ſome of them: It may therefore be inferred, that by more exertion, others which are yet untried, may be undertaken with ſucceſs, & that thoſe which are eſtabliſhed, may be carried to greater perfection and extent. The preſent moment is peculiarly proper for ſuch enterpriſes, becauſe the decline of our commerce and navigation, deprives many of our citizens, of their cuſtomary employment. The labour of theſe people, if employed in manufactures, will yet contribute to our welfare, whereas if driven by diſtreſs, beyond the limits of the ſtate, little future benefit can be derived to us from their induſtry.

Under a belief, that the objects to promote which our board was appointed, are of importance to every deſcription of men, our zealous and unbiaſſed exertions, ſhall not be wanting to accompliſh them. We call upon you to aid us on your part, by pointing out thoſe means which may occur to you, for promoting the manufactures which already exiſt here; and for the eſtabliſhment of ſuch others, as may be ſuitable to the ability of our country. We call upon you at the ſame time, to co-operate with us by encouraging the productions of America; by diſcarding from your houſes, your tables, and your perſons, the ſuperfluous luxuries of foreign countries; and by a ſtrict obſervance of induſtry, frugality and ſimplicity. Thus it will be evinced to the world that you have no leſs virtue in the character of citizens, than firmneſs in aſſerting your rights as men; and that you are worthy by your wiſdom, of holding that ſtation as an independent people, which you have acquired by your courage.

By order of the Board,

SAMUEL MILES, Vice-Preſident.

Atteſt, George Fox, Secretary.

Philadelphia, October 5, 1787.

Meſſ. Printers,

THE under-written is a true copy of an anſwer from a Member of the Engliſh Parliament to a letter from his borough, concerning the extenſion of the exciſe, and which clearly points out the contumely thoſe electors are treated with by their repreſentatives, who baſely ſurrender their rights and dignity.

Oct. 8, 1787. TIBERIUS GRACHUS.

" Gentlemen,

" YOURS I received, and am very much ſurprized at your inſolence, in troubling me about the exciſe;—you know what I know very well, that I bought you; I know what perhaps you think I don't know, that you are about ſelling yourſelves to ſomebody elſe; and I know what perhaps you don't know, that I am about buying another borough;—and as you meanly ſurrendered your rights in electing me, depend I will let ye up to a political market, and make the moſt of ſuch degenerate men.—And now may the curſe of God light on you all; and may your houſes be as common to exciſemen, as your wives and daughters were to me, when I ſtood candidate for your corporation."

Commerce deſtructive of American Proſperity.

A New-England Story.

THERE is no inſtance in which the benevolence of the Deity is more apparent, in the natural world, than in his accommodating the temperature and fertility of every climate to the original neceſſities of its inhabitants. That this peculiarly diſtinguiſhes the climates of the American ſtates, muſt be evident to every one, who is acquainted with their ſituation. By the fertility and ſalubrious quality of the air and ſoil—by the no leſs uſeful than beautiful variegation of hill and dale, it ſeems that nature deſigned this luxuriant ſpot to terminate the moſt unbounded wiſhes of her civilized ſons.

Having ſoil and climate ſuited to the various productions of prolific nature, it muſt be imputed to that roving, enterpriſing ſpirit which characteriſes man, that the inhabitants of this country ſhould engage in extenſive commerce. Whenever a country has grown ſo populous, or the ſoil ſo barren, that agriculture cannot ſuſtain its needy ſons, then, and then only, ſhould commerce be encouraged. Theſe reaſons are obvious. The proſperity of a nation depends upon the internal peace and contentment of its inhabitants. A free intercourſe with foreign nations begets diſſipation, the greateſt bane of a community; it introduces a different turn of thought among the commonality. They ſoon look with contempt upon thoſe employments which heretofore were the ſources of ſubſiſtence and contentment. They now leave their patrimonial and houſhold Gods, the ſure protectors of their happineſs, and riot for a moment in diſſipation and extravagance. Dependent for the trapping of their new ſphere, they alienate their patrimony, and become the ready tools of ambition and faction. Theſe obſervations very naturally ariſe upon a view of the preſent ſituation of the American police; but more particularly of the ſtate of this commonwealth. That our embarraſſments are principally occaſioned by the neglect of agriculture, and application to an ill judged commerce, is a truth, which may be eaſily demonſtrated. For many years, while commerce was prohibited, the Americans made great proficiency in agriculture and manufactures. While induſtry went hand in hand with public virtue, our demands, tho' many, were readily anſwered. Peace found our finances low, and our manufactures imperfect: a taſte for high life and extravagance ſoon univerſally prevailed. The populace fondly imagined, that Independence would put an end to every future exertion, and prove a Midas in politics. The doctrine, ſo flattering to indolence, that commodities could be purchaſed much cheaper than manufactured, was univerſally believed. The farmer, who had conſidered himſelf the moſt important character in the commonwealth, now looked upon his farm as an unneceſſary incumbrance. He allowed his ſons to take, as they thought, a more expeditious and leſs laborious method of acquiring reſpect and opulence. His daughters, who heretofore had ornamented themſelves with the modeſt work of their own hands, now leave their half-ſpun webs. The rich dairy is borne away to purchaſe gewgaws for their empty heads. The income of his eſtate, with which he was wont to pay his honeſt debts, is now too ſcanty to diſcharge his proportion of the public tax. At length, he is obliged to mortgage his eſtate, and becomes a noiſy advocate for paper money and a leveling act.

A landed intereſt, divided through a whole community, while it diſcards luxury, by encouraging induſtry, preſerves that equality among the inhabitants, which is the only foundation of a laſting Republic. Whatever therefore tends to leſſen this equality of landed poſſeſſions, is repugnant to good policy in a free government. That unreſtricted commerce will have this effect, is a truth too obvious to need demonſtration. If ſimilar cauſes will produce ſimilar effects, we may read our deſtiny in the termination of the Spartan republic; for more than five hundred years, while commerce was reſtricted, the Spartans flouriſhed, and were renowned for the exerciſe of every public and private virtue: But when this reſtriction was taken off, in the days of Lyſander, luxury, with its concomitant train of vices, poured in like a torrent, and wholly deluged and deſtroyed that commonwealth.

Should another Lycurgus ariſe, regulate our commerce, and encourage agriculture and manufactures, we may yet be drawn back to ſome point of excellence: but ſhould we proceed in our miſtaken policy, our deſtruction is as inevitable as the decrees of heaven.

HYMN to HEALTH.

FIRST-BORN of Heaven! for without thee,
Bleſt Health, the gods themſelves would be
Oppreſs'd by immortality!
Come then, thou beſt of bleſſings! come,
And make my humble roof thy home;
Propitious come, and ſhed a ray
Of gladneſs on my ſitting day.
For if there be in wealth a charm,
If joys the parent's boſom warm,
Whate'er the good, to thee 'tis giv'n
To perfect ev'ry boon of Heav'n.
If diadems the Fancy pleaſe,
Thy hand muſt make them ſit with eaſe:
Loſt without thee were Cupid's wiles,
And Venus owes thee half her ſmiles.
Whate'er we hope, whate'er endure,
Thou giv'ſt the enjoyment, or the cure;
Where'er thou ſpread'ſt thy balmy wing,
Ills vaniſh, blooming pleaſures ſpring;
All wiſhes meet in thee alone,
For Happineſs and Health are one!

The MERRY FELON.

A FELON going to execution on a cold day, and coming to a pond near Tyburn, deſired the carman to ſtop, that he might ſpeak with the ſheriff; who being come to him, he ſaid thus—' Mr. Sheriff, I am now going to leave the world, and am loth to conceal any thing which may do others good: I confeſs that the laſt robbery I committed was on this ſpot, and being cloſely purſued I threw a large purſe of money into this pond.' The people hearing him tell this to the Sheriff, notwithſtanding the coldneſs of the weather, ran into the pond to ſearch for the money: which they did for a long time, till they were weary, as was alſo the ſheriff with ſtaying; whereupon he came again to the fellow, and aſked him if he was not miſtaken? ' No,' ſays he, ' my intention was to have ſome mirth and ſport before I was hanged—I have now had my deſire, in ſeeing the people wet and cool themſelves for nothing—you may now drive on when you pleaſe.'

STOLEN from the ſtable of the ſubſcriber, in Amwell, Hunterdon county and ſtate of New Jerſey, on the night of the 1ſt inſtant, a bay brown Stallion, four years old, about 15 hands and one inch high, remarkable lengthy, has no white on him except a ſmall ſtar, has not been docked, and had when taken away, a long tail, carries well and is very heavy and ſtrong made at his age. October 3 eptf.

MR. SICARD, pupil of the celebrated monſ. Veſtres, preſents his compliments to his former employers and the public in general, and begs leave to inform them that he has opened his Dancing School, at the Long Room in White Horſe alley, near Cheſnut ſtreet.

The hours of attendance for young ladies will be from 10 till 1 o'clock every Monday, Wedneſday and Friday —and for young gentlemen from 6 till 9 o'clock in the evening of the ſame days.

He will devote one day in every two weeks to inſtruct the pupils of his dancing ſchool, and of the boarding ſchools, where he attends gratis, in the polite accompliſhments of the genteel graces and manners, on the plan that he conducted the ſame at Paris, in conjunction with the celebrated monſieur Gaudelle.

Mr. Sicard propoſes attending private families, boarding ſchools, and academies, one day in every week, if required, for the purpoſe of inſtructing young ladies and gentlemen in this important part of a polite education, viz. How to come into the preſence of their ſuperiors—How to come into and go out of a room—How to ſalute in the ſtreet, and walk gracefully—How to preſent any thing to another—and how to move the fan elegantly, &c. &c. &c.

He would eſteem it a particular favour if thoſe ladies and gentlemen who have had an opportunity of aſſociating with the polite in the European capitals, would honor him with their company whenever he practices, in order to ſatisfy them of his abilities in that particular line of his profeſſion. mtf.

Bordentown Academy.

THE ſubſcriber takes this method to inform the public, that he ſtill continues his Academy open at Bordentown, and that having ſupplied himſelf with a good tutor, means to increaſe his ſchool to about thirty pupils, having formerly confined himſelf to a ſmaller number, being confident that he and his aſſiſtant can fully do their duty by them. The branches that are taught in his academy are reading, writing, arithmetic, the Latin, Greek and French languages, practical mathematics, geography, with the uſe of the globes, and the arts and ſciences in general. He has in ſaid Academy a good library and philoſophical apparatus, for the uſe of his pupils; ſo that gentlemen may have their children fitted either for any particular claſe in college, or their education finiſhed with him. He pays a particular attention to rhetoric and oratory, and flatters himſelf that he has turned out ſome good ſpeakers, ſo neceſſary in our republic. He provides board, waſhing, lodging and every neceſſary accommodation, either in his own houſe, or in a genteel family, who accommodates part of his pupils. The exceeding healthineſs and pleaſantneſs of the ſituation, together with the ready communication with both the cities of Philadelphia and New-York, render it the moſt eligible ſpot on the continent for a ſeminary of learning. As there will be a vacation during the month of October, ſuch gentlemen as wiſh to ſend their ſons had beſt apply to him at Bordentown, either by letter or otherwiſe, during the time of vacation, that they may enter when the ſchool commences on the firſt of November, as he cannot admit any more when his number is compleated. Thoſe gentlemen who confide their children to his care may depend upon every attention being paid by

Their moſt reſpectful humble Servant,

Bordentown, Oct. 1. 1787. B. ALLISON.

For Grist Mill & other Water Works

On an extensive Plan,

One of the best situations in America is offered

FOR SALE,

Together With

Batsto Iron-Works,

At the forks of Little Egg-Harbour river, one of the most healthy spots in New Jersey, 38 miles by land from Philadelphia, and within a few hours sail of New York.

THE river, communicating with the sea by the best inlet on the Jersey coast, is navigable for vessels of 200 tons within a few miles of the works; those of 100 tons may approach within one mile; flats and scows carrying 10 or 12 tons, load and unload at the works. The usual freight to New York or Philadelphia is 10 shillings per ton. The furnace stream affords plenty of water, in the dryest season, for 3 or 4 pair of mill stones, besides supplying the iron works.——An excellent dam, which has been increasing in strength many years by the cinder from the furnace, is well secured from the danger of freshes, and the works are scarcely ever injured or delayed by either ice or backwater, though the tide swells to the foot of the dam: mills may therefore be erected at a moderate expence. This being a part of the country in which many people and many teams are necessarily employed in collecting and preparing for market the iron and lumber with which it abounds, and at the same time illy adapted to the raising of grain for their support, there is, and must continue to be, a demand for large quantities of midlings, cornell, shorts and bran, at advanced prices; and the convenience of conveying flour at a light expence, either to New York or Philadelphia, or to more distant markets, will not be overlooked nor considered as of small importance, especially as there are few mill seats of any considerable capacity equally adapted to the New York market, which is not unfrequently supplied with superfine flour from Philadelphia. A choice of the various kinds of wheat may be drawn to this seat from Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, and New York with greater ease and convenience than to almost any other mills now in being.

The FURNACE, which by the extensive lands annexed to it, is abundantly supplied with wood and ore, is now in blast, and is noted for producing the best hollow ware in America, the metal being peculiarly well adapted to the making of castings of all kinds, as well as excellent bar iron.

A FORGE, with four fires and two hammers, belongs to the estate, and stands about half a mile from the furnace, on another fine stream which affords plenty of water.

A SLITTING and ROLLING MILL, having been disused for the last two or three years, may want some repairs to prepare it for use; but the forebays and gates are in perfect order, and being in the proper spot for grist mills, may be appropriated to that use.

Two SAW MILLS in good order, and a small Grist Mill.

The MANSION HOUSE is elegantly situated about 100 yards from the furnace, on an height which commands a view of the whole works, and of the two villages formed by the surrounding buildings belonging to the estate, such as barns, stables, coal houses, workshops, storehouses and dwellings for work men. Adjoining the mansion house is a large and fruitful garden, affording plenty of vegetables, and well stored with chosen fruit trees: also a young bearing orchard, containing near 2000 apple trees, mostly grafted.

These excellent accommodations for extensive and profitable manufactories, are offered to sale at a very low rate, and on terms of payment calculated for the ease of the purchaser, who may pay the greater part in the produce of the Iron Works, at a price to be agreed upon; and they are capable of producing more in one year, than will pay the whole price demanded.

For particulars, apply to WILLIAM RICHARDS, at the said Works, JOHN COX, at Bloomsbury, near Trenton, or CHARLES PETTIT, in Philadelphia.

TO BE SOLD,

MOORE-HALL,

THE Estate of the late William Moore, esquire, situate upon the river Schuylkill, in the township of Charles-Town, in the county of Chester, distant 23 miles from this city.

The Estate consists of upwards of 600 acres of most excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Mansion House is spacious, convenient and airy; it is situated upon a high and healthy spot, and commands a most delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Grist Mill on the premises, near the Mansion House, on a never-failing stream, called Pickering, running through the estate, and watering a great body of meadow; this stream empties itself into the Schuylkill, in front of the house; it formerly supplied water for a saw mill, which might with much ease, and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Estate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any person inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premises before the day of sale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, esquire, in Arch street, or PETER MILLER, esquire, in Third street.

Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, June 21.

THE following whimſical, abſurd, and indecent behaviour of two undertakers, abſolutely happened a few days ſince, at a houſe near the Eight Bells, in Green Walk, Chriſt Church, Surrey:—The executors of a woman (who died on Thurſday laſt) by accident, ſpoke to two different undertakers to bury the corpſe; and one of them had ſo far proceeded in the job, as to put on the ſhroud before the other arrived; the meeting of theſe ſons of mourning was not altogether the moſt friendly, each claiming the right to enter the corpſe; but the coffin brought by the firſt man not being long enough, he left his deputy with the body, whilſt he went home to fetch another; during which time the ſecond undertaker put the corpſe in his coffin, and left his man to guard it. He had not been gone long, before the new coffin arrived, and the corpſe was ſhifted into it; and in that manner was the corpſe bandied about no leſs than four times by the different ſtratagems of thoſe two men, who each write up, 'Funerals decently performed;' and on Sunday afternoon during divine ſervice, the firſt undertaker threw the coffin of his adverſary out of the window into the ſtreet, where it lay until ten o'clock at night; at which time the overſeers ordered it to the Bone-houſe, and there it remained yeſterday for public inſpection.

July 28. The preſent ſtate of the ſeven provinces appears to be thus:——Zealand, Gueldres, and Frieſland, for the Stadtholder and the old conſtitution; Holland and Weſt Frieſland on the other ſide—the other provinces either neutral or divided in their ſentiments. Though Holland thus ſtands alone, it is formidable on account of its ſuperiority in wealth over all the others. This is ſo great, that it is reckoned to pay ſixty per cent. towards all the charges of the confederation.

Under the town-houſe at Amſterdam is depoſited, treaſure to the amount of three hundred tons of gold, about thirty four millions ſterling; but the debt of the provinces exceeds that ſum. What a noble object of plunder for the conquerors in the preſent conteſt!

We hear from Bombay, that one of Tippoo's veſſels which ſailed to Cuſſorah with pepper, cardaums, and ſandal wood, &c. as a preſent to the Grand Signior, blew up, off Buſſorah, the day after ſhe arrived there. There were four ambaſſadors on board going to Conſtantinople, and from thence, they ſay, to England and France.

It is much againſt the Prince of Orange that he has nothing of an enterpriſing ſpirit in his compoſition, and is beſides deſtitute both of military genius and education.

Extract of a letter from Verſailles, July 22.

'The Count Mailebois obſerves the ſtricteſt neutrality in Holland; the States General have not required him to declare for either ſide: but it is certain that being in the pay of the patriots, raiſed to the rank he enjoys at the demand of the Dutch, and ſucceſſor to the Duke of Brunſwick, he will, with the permiſſion of Louis XVI. take up arms for the republic. As long as the General remains neuter, we may believe that the Dutch defend their liberty under the protection of France, who will only appear as mediator, until the enemies of the patriots of Holland, animated by the different powerful intereſts, proceed to extremities.'

Extract of a letter from a gentleman who went paſſenger in the Auguſtus Cæſar, Captain Fowler, dated July 6, 1787.

'Immediately after the ſhip came to an anchor, ſeveral greedy waiters, belonging to the Cuſtom-houſe, boarded us to look for contraband goods.—In the midſt of their ſearch for ſo laudable a purpoſe, one of them who ſeemed to be more induſtrious in the piratical vocation than any of his brethren, came in contract with a ſmall box of mine, which was full of Stizolobium, or Cowhage, and demanded in the King's name, to ſee the contents; upon which the box being inſtantly opened, my gentleman ſuppoſing it to be a valuable prize, eagerly thruſt both his hands into it up to wriſtbands of his ſhirts, and was very ſoon convinced to his ſorrow, that it would not bear ſuch rude examination with impunity; for in a moment, the innumerable and piercing points of the Stizolobium entered the pores of his ſkin, already opened by the heat of the weather and the man's inquiſitive diligence: This threw him into a paroxyiſm of anguiſh and involuntary agility, which was increaſed to an inconceivable degree by rubbing his hands over his face; whereby the inflexible ſpiculæ adhered to his lips, his noſtrils, and his eyes, and the poor devil jumped and ſkipped about the deck like an intoxicated monkey, to the infinite diverſion of the ſpectators. At length he made ſhift to go over the ſide into a boat, muttering the heavieſt curſes upon the box, its contents and the owner; in which he did not forget to include himſelf in for giving the reins to his inſatiable curioſity.'

DUBLIN, Aug. 3.

Extract of a letter from London, July 18.

'Curioſity brought me to ſee the glorious veteran, the defender of Gibraltar, preſented to his Majeſty under his new titles, In full expectation of ſeeing him honored, with the warmeſt marks of grateful affection, royal dignity could beſtow; but to my great ſurpriſe, the King received him with a formal bow, (and how do you my Lord?) then turned his back on the hero that kept alive the renown of Britiſh valour, which had ſunk low in the unnatural war, and with a face conjured into pleaſing ſmiles, entertained a privy counſellor from your country about ten minutes, with congratulations on his deſerved advancement & repeated thanks for his ſupport and ſervices in his kingdom of Ireland."

PARIS, July 5.

Monſ. Beaumarchais has publiſhed his juſtification againſt the attacks of M. Kornman—It appears thereby, that Kornman confined his wife in the Hotel de la Force as a proſtitute, which it however appears, he to gain ſome favor of his friend, had inſtigated her to—Beaumarchais found means to ſet her at liberty, and provided for her—for this Kornman attacks him—and Beaumarchais in vindication ſays,—'It is very hard, that ſix years after I ſhould be attacked by Kornman, who really deſerves all the infamy he bears; and ſhould be blamed for having ſuccoured a beautiful young woman of diſtinguiſhed birth, of the family of the Fueſch, at Baſil in Switzerland, who had for her portion upwards of four hundred thouſand livres (almoſt 17,000l.) It is cruel, I ſay, that I ſhould become the object of deteſtation and horror, for having, I repeat it, relieved a beautiful woman in the greateſt diſtreſs and miſery; who would, perhaps, have been obliged (had my aſſiſtance been a month too late) to be brought-to bed in a dungeon. This is my crime; but ſurely all tender and ſenſible hearts will be on my ſide; and let the conſequence be as it will, I ſhall ever eſteem it an honor, a meritorious and commendable action, to protect that charming part of the creation, when in imminent danger or diſtreſs. Yes, I am not aſhamed to own, that I always looked on, and read with enthuſiaſm, the feats of ancient chivalry for the protection of injured damſels. I adore the Prince of Naſſau Seighen, who intereſted himſelf in obtaining the letter from his majeſty in favor of the unhappy Mrs. Kornman; and, in ſhort, as the fair have rendered my youth a continual ſcene of delight and inexpreſſible joy, by the happy union of love and friendſhip, they ſhall be ſure to find an intrepid protector in Beaumarchais, though declining now to old age.'

AMERICA.

KINGSTON, Auguſt 18.

On Sunday evening laſt, as the owner of a plantain-boat from Rocky-Point was lying with his veſſel off the Wherry-wharf of this town, he was applied to by a perſon who went on board genteelly dreſſed, and requeſted him to take on freight to Rocky-Point, ſeveral articles of merchandize for that place—which requeſt being promiſed to be complied with, the captain was entreated to leave his veſſel, and go up with the ſuppoſed ſhipper to a tavern in town, where he ſaid the articles were, in order, as repreſented, that he might take a view of them and fix the price of freightage accordingly. With this requeſt the captain complied; but ſhortly after their entering the houſe, TOM THUMB ſneaked off, and entirely diſappeared. The captain however waited about half an hour for Tom's return—in vain: But on going on board his veſſel, he found to his great ſurprize and mortification, that ſhe had been rifled, robbed, and all the money that was on board her, amounting to 23l. 10s. conveyed away in peace and quietneſs.——Who could have atchieved this dexterous exploit, but TOM THUMB, the gentleman apparent abovementioned?——A piece of dexterity of ſo novel a nature, that we earneſtly wiſh and adviſe every perſon, and in particular our readers, to guard againſt any future ſimilar impoſition.

On Wedneſday laſt, a race of a curious nature, was run for the wager of a guinea and a pair of ſhoes—by Peter Pull Noſe, a barber, and Timothy Tapſter, a waiter at a tavern in this town. The race was from Thomſon's brick kiln to the one mile ſtone on the Spaniſh-Town road, and back again. Being immediately after the violent rains that have lately fallen, the racers were immerged at almoſt every ſtep they took up to their knees in mire; and in a beſpotted condition they returned to town.——Pull Noſe in particular, who was the conqueror, having on a pair of ſilk ſtockings, and other correſpondent habiliments, exhibited an appearance truly ludicrous.

Auguſt 25. A commander in chief of this iſland, ſome few years paſt, not being very popular with the aſſembly, and having ſent a demand to the receiver general's office, for payment of his ſalary, was informed in anſwer, there was no money in the office;—word was thereupon ſent, that if money was not there to pay his ſalary, he muſt appoint another receiver general; in conſequence of which the demand was in a few hours ſatisfied.——Query.—If the premier of the preſent day was to make a ſimilar demand of the grand financier, whether it might not in probability produce the ſame effect?

ST. GEORGE's (Grenada) Aug. 25.

The troops lately arrived at Martinico have long been expected, as appears from the following extract of a letter from Breaſt, dated the 16th April laſt.

"The ſquadron commanded by Monſieur Turnay, who is going to the Weſt Indies to the ſtation at Martinico, is compoſed of the following ſhips—l'Amerique, of 60 guns, the flag ſhip; La Sageſſe of 48 guns, La Fiere of 30, La Veſtale of 32, and La Puce of 16 guns. The regiments of Neuſtrice, La Blanche and Dijon, at leaſt detachments from them, are arrived here to be embarked on board of the above ſquadron, in order to relieve or reinforce the garriſons in the Leeward Iſlands."

HARTFORD, Sept. 17.

Lately died at his wagwam in Pomachaug, (near Norwich) old Zachariah, regent of the Mohegan tribe of Indians, in the 100th year of his age. It is ſaid, that in his younger years he was greatly addicted to drunkenneſs, but that for near 40 years paſt he has entirely abſtained from all ſpiritous liquors.

At the ſupreme court held in this city laſt week, John Payne, a native of Charleſtown, Maſſachuſetts, William Aylmore, an Iriſh lad, and Amos Olevy, a free negro, were convicted of burglary—the two former were ſentenced to receive 35 ſtripes each, be impriſoned 12 months and pay coſts of proſecution—the negro was likewiſe ſentenced to receive 35 ſtripes, be impriſoned 3 months and pay coſts of proſecution—The former part of the puniſhment they received on Wedneſday laſt.

NEW-YORK, September 29.

Yeſterday morning was held the quarterly examination of Columbia College Grammar School; when the young gentlemen acquitted themſelves with much credit. The premiums were given to Brevoort Woodward, Cornelius Van Horne, Jonathan Pearſee, Samuel Gilford, and John Woodward.

In the afternoon, many Orations were delivered to a very crowded and elegant audience, with uncommon applauſe. The ſeparate premium of eloquence was adjudged to John Woodward. Brevoort Woodward, who delivered one of Cicero's orations againſt Catiline, in the original Latin, aſtoniſhed and delighted the learned part of the audience, by the propriety and elegance (ſcarce unworthy of the great author) with which he ſpoke it. Among the many other little orators, who diſtinguiſhed themſelves, James Inglis was particularly admired; as was alſo John Fiſher.

October 3. Yeſterday commenced the Races at Haarlem, where uncommon ſport was produced by five competitors, for the Fifty Pounds Purſe; the equal contention of the ſeveral racers extended it to four heats; and the purſe was won by Mr. Naſh's bay mare, who ſecured the firſt and fourth heats, notwithſtanding ſhe was not the favorite of the field at ſtarting. The Races will be continued this day and to-morrow.

Philadelphia, Oct. 10.

ACCORDING to advertiſement, a very great concourſe of people attended at the State-Houſe on Saturday evening, to fix on a ticket of repreſentatives for the enſuing General Aſſembly.

Mr. Nixon was choſen chairman, and Mr. Tench Coxe ſecretary of the meeting.

Mr. Jackſon having ſpoken, Mr. Gurney reported from a committee that had been previouſly appointed, the following names, which were ſeparately offered to the conſideration of the citizens preſent, and approved of, viz.—

WILLIAM WILL,
THOMAS FITZSIMONS,
GEORGE CLYMER,
JACOB HILTZHEIMER,
WILLIAM LEWIS.

On motion of Mr. Donaldſon, the citizens of the reſpective wards were requeſted to meet on Monday evening, to appoint proper perſons for making out and circulating a ſufficient number of tickets in favour of the above perſons.

Mr. Wilſon then roſe, and delivered a long and eloquent ſpeech upon the principles of the Fœderal Conſtitution propoſed by the late Convention.——The outlines of this ſpeech we ſhall endeavour to lay before the public, as tending to reflect great light upon the intereſting ſubject now in general diſcuſſion.

Mr. Chairman and Fellow Citizens,

HAVING received the honor of an appointment to repreſent you in the late Convention, it is perhaps, my duty to comply with the requeſt of many gentlemen whoſe characters and judgments I ſincerely reſpect, and who have urged, that this would be a proper occaſion to lay before you any information which will ſerve to explain and elucidate the principles and arrangements of the conſtitution, that has been ſubmitted to the conſideration of the United States. I confeſs that I am unprepared for ſo extenſive and ſo important a diſquiſition; but the inſidious attempts which are clandeſtinely and induſtriouſly made to pervert and deſtroy the new plan, induce me the more readily to engage in its defence; and the impreſſions of four months conſtant attention to the ſubject, have not been ſo eaſily effaced as to leave me without an anſwer to the objections which have been raiſed.

It will be proper however, before I enter into the refutation of the charges that are alledged, to mark the leading diſcrimination between the ſtate conſtitutions, and the conſtitution of the United States. When the people eſtabliſhed the powers of legiſlation under their ſeparate governments, they inveſted their repreſentatives with every right and authority which they did not in explicit terms reſerve; and therefore upon every queſtion, reſpecting the juriſdiction of the Houſe of Aſſembly, if the frame of government is ſilent, the juriſdiction is efficient and complete. But in delegating fœderal powers, another criterion was neceſſarily introduced, and the Congreſſional authority is to be collected, not from tacit implication, but from the poſitive grant expreſſed in the inſtrument of the union. Hence it is evident, that in the former caſe every thing which is not reſerved is given, but in the latter the reverſe of the propoſition prevails, and every thing which is not given, is reſerved. This diſtinction being recognized, will furniſh an anſwer to thoſe who think the omiſſion of a bill of rights, a defect in the propoſed conſtitution: for it would have been ſuperfluous and abſurd to have ſtipulated with a fœderal body of our own creation, that we ſhould enjoy thoſe privileges, of which we are not diveſted either by the intention or the act, that has brought that body into exiſtence. For inſtance, the Liberty of the Preſs, which has been a copious ſource of declamation and oppoſition, what controul can proceed from the fœderal government to ſhackle or deſtroy that ſacred palladium of national freedom? If indeed, a power ſimilar to that which has been granted for the regulation of commerce, had been granted to regulate literary publications, it would have been as neceſſary to ſtipulate that the Liberty of the Preſs ſhould be preſerved inviolate, as that the impoſt ſhould be general in its operation.——With reſpect likewiſe to the particular diſtrict of ten miles, which is to be made the ſeat of fœderal government, it will undoubtedly be proper to obſerve this ſalutary precaution, as there the legiſlative power will be excluſively lodged in the Preſident, Senate, and Houſe of Repreſentatives of the United States. But this could not be an object with the Convention, for it muſt naturally depend upon a future compact, to which the citizens immediately intereſted will, and ought to be parties; and there is no reaſon to ſuſpect that ſo popular a privilege will in that caſe be neglected. In truth then, the propoſed ſyſtem poſſeſſes no influence whatever upon the preſs, & it would have been merely nugatory to have introduced a formal declaration upon the ſubject—nay, that very declaration might have been conſtrued to imply that ſome degree of power was given, ſince we undertook to define its extent.

Another objection that has been fabricated againſt the new conſtitution, is expreſſed in this diſingenious form—'the Trial by Jury is aboliſhed in civil caſes.' I muſt be excuſed, my fellow-citizens, if upon this point, I take advantage of my profeſſional experience to detect the futility of the aſſertion. Let it be remembered then, that the buſineſs of the Fœderal Convention was not local, but general—not limited to the views and eſtabliſhments of a ſingle ſtate, but co extenſive with the Continent, and comprehending the views and eſtabliſhments of Thirteen Independent Sovereignties. When therefore, this ſubject was in diſcuſſion, we were involved in difficulties which preſſed on all ſides, and no precedent could be diſcovered to direct our courſe. The caſes open to a Trial by Jury differed in the different ſtates, it was therefore impracticable on that ground to have made a general rule. The want of uniformity would have rendered any reference to the practice of the ſtates idle and uſeleſs; and it could not with any propriety, be ſaid, that 'the Trial by Jury ſhall be as heretofore,' ſince there has never exiſted any fœderal ſyſtem of juriſprudence to which the declaration could relate. Beſides, it is not in all caſes that the Trial by Jury is adopted in civil queſtions, for cauſes depending in courts of admiralty, ſuch as relate to maritime captures, and ſuch as are agitated in courts of equity, do not require the intervention of that tribunal. How then was the line of diſcrimination to be drawn? The Convention found the taſk too difficult for them, and they left the buſineſs as it ſtands, in the fulleſt confidence that no danger could poſſibly enſue, ſince the proceedings of the ſupreme court, are to be regulated by the Congreſs, which is a faithful repreſentation of the people; and the oppreſſion of government is effectually barred, by declaring, that in all criminal caſes, the Trial by Jury ſhall be preſerved.

This conſtitution, it has been further urged, is of a pernicious tendency, becauſe it tolerates a ſtanding army in the time of peace. This has always been a topic of popular declamation; and yet, I do not know a nation in the world, which has not found it neceſſary and uſeful to maintain the appearance of ſtrength in a ſeaſon of the moſt profound tranquility. Nor is it a novelty with us: for under the preſent articles of confederation, Congreſs certainly poſſeſſes this reprobated power, and the exerciſe of that power is proved at this moment by her cantonments along the banks of the Ohio. But what would be our national ſituation were it otherwiſe? Every principle of policy muſt be ſubverted, and the government muſt declare war, before they are prepared to carry it on. Whatever may be the provocation, however important the object in view, and however neceſſary diſpatch and ſecrecy may be, ſtill the declaration muſt precede the preparation, and the enemy will be informed of your intention, not only before you are equipped for an attack, but even before you are fortified for a defence. The conſequence is too obvious to require any further delineation, and no man, who regards the dignity and ſafety of his country, can deny the neceſſity of a military force, under the controul and with the reſtrictions which the new conſtitution provides.

Perhaps there never was a charge made with leſs reaſons than that which predicts the inſtitution of a baneful ariſtocracy in the fœderal ſenate. This body branches into two characters, the one legiſlative and the other executive. In its legiſlative character it can effect no purpoſe, without the co-operation of the houſe of repreſentatives, and in its executive character it can accompliſh no object, without the concurrence of the preſident. Thus fettered I do not know any act which the ſenate can of itſelf perform, and ſuch dependance neceſſarily precludes every idea of influence and ſuperiority. But I will confeſs that in the organization of this body, a compromiſe between contending intereſts is diſcernible; and when we reflect how various are the laws, commerce, habits, population and extent of the confederated ſtates, this evidence of mutual conceſſion and accommodation ought rather to command a generous applauſe, than to excite jealouſy and reproach. For my part, my admiration can only be equalled by my aſtoniſhment, in beholding ſo perfect a ſyſtem, formed from ſuch heterogeneous materials.

The next accuſation I ſhall conſider, is that which repreſents the fœderal conſtitution as not only calculated, but deſignedly framed, to reduce the ſtate governments to mere corporations, and eventually to annihilate them. Thoſe who have employed the term corporation upon this occaſion, are not perhaps aware of its extent. In common parlance, indeed, it is generally applied to petty aſſociations for the eaſe and conveniency of a few individuals; but in its enlarged ſenſe, it will comprehend the government of Pennſylvania, the exiſting union of the ſtates, and even this projected ſyſtem is nothing more than a formal act of incorporation. But upon what pretence can it be alledged that it was deſigned to annihilate the ſtate governments? For, I will undertake to prove that upon their exiſtence, depends the exiſtence of the fœderal plan. For this purpoſe, permit me to call your attention to the manner in which the preſident, ſenate and houſe of repreſentatives, are propoſed to be appointed. The preſident is to be choſen by electors, nominated in ſuch manner as the legiſlature of each ſtate may direct; ſo that if there is no legiſlature, there can be no electors and conſequently the office of preſident cannot be ſupplied. The ſenate is to be compoſed of two ſenators from each ſtate, choſen by the legiſlature; and therefore if there is no legiſlature, there can be no ſenate. The houſe of repreſentatives, is to be compoſed of members choſen every ſecond year by the people of the ſeveral ſtates, and the electors in each ſtate ſhall have the qualifications requiſite for electors of the moſt numerous branch of the ſtate legiſlature—unleſs therefore, there is a ſtate legiſlature, that qualification cannot be aſcertained, and the popular branch of the fœderal conſtitution muſt be extinct. From this view, then it is evidently abſurd to ſuppoſe, that the annihilation of the ſeparate governments will reſult from their union; or, that having that intention, the authors of the new ſyſtem would have bound their connection with ſuch indiſſoluble ties. Let me here advert to an arrangement highly advantageous, for you will perceive, without prejudice to the powers of the legiſlature in the election of ſenators, the people at large will acquire an additional privilege in returning members to the houſe of repreſentatives——whereas, by the preſent confederation, it is the legiſlature alone that appoints the delegates to Congreſs.

The power of direct taxation has likewiſe been treated as an improper delegation to the fœderal government; but when we conſider it as the duty of that body to provide for the national ſafety, to ſupport the dignity of the union, and to diſcharge the debts contracted upon the collective faith of the ſtates for their common benefit, it muſt be acknowledged, that thoſe upon whom ſuch important obligations are impoſed, ought in juſtice and in policy to poſſeſs every means requiſite for a faithful performance of their truſt. But why ſhould we be alarmed with viſionary evils? I will venture to predict, that the great revenue of the United States muſt, and always will be raiſed by impoſt, for, being at once leſs obnoxious, and more productive, the intereſt of the government will be beſt promoted by the accommodation of the people. Still, however, the objects of direct taxation ſhould be within reach in all caſes of emergency; and there is no more reaſon to apprehend oppreſſion in the mode of collecting a revenue from this reſource, than in the form of an impoſt, which, by univerſal aſſent, is left to the authority of the fœderal government. In either caſe, the force of civil inſtitutions will be adequate to the purpoſe; and the dread of military violence, which has been aſſiduouſly diſſeminated, muſt eventually prove the mere effuſion of a wild imagination, or a factious ſpirit. But the ſalutary conſequences that muſt flow from this enabling the government to receive and ſupport the credit of the union, will afford another anſwer to the objections upon this ground. The ſtate of Pennſylvania particularly, which has encumbered itſelf with the aſſumption of a great proportion of the public debt, will derive conſiderable relief and advantage; for, as it was the embecility of the preſent confederation, which gave riſe to the funding law, that law muſt naturally expire, when a competent and energetic fœderal ſyſtem ſhall be ſubſtituted—the ſtate will then be diſcharged from an extraordinary burthen, and the national creditor will find it to be his intereſt to return to his original ſecurity.

After all my fellow citizens, it is neither extraordinary or unexpected, that the conſtitution offered to your conſideration ſhould meet with oppoſition. It is the nature of man to purſue his own in-tereſt, in preference to the pub'ic good; and I do not mean to make any perſonal reflection, when I add, that it is the intereſt of a very numerous, powerful, and reſpectable body to counteract and deſtroy the excellent work produced by the late convention. All the officers of government, and all the appointments for the adminiſtration of juſtice and the collection of the public revenue, which are transferred from the individual to the aggregate ſovereignty of the ſtates, will neceſſarily turn the ſtream of influence and emolument into a new channel. Every perſon therefore, who enjoys, or expects to enjoy, a place of profit under the preſent eſtabliſhment, will object to the propoſed innovation; not, in truth, becauſe it is injurious to the liberties of his country, but becauſe it affects his ſchemes of wealth and conſequence. I will confeſs indeed, that I am not a blind admirer of this plan of government, and that there are ſome parts of it, which if my wiſh had prevailed, would certainly have been altered. But, when I reflect how widely men differ in their opinions, and that every man (and the obſervation applies likewiſe to every ſtate) has an equal pretenſion to aſſert his own, I am ſatisfied that any thing nearer to perfection could not have been accompliſhed. If there are errors, it ſhould be remembered that the ſeeds of reformation are ſown in the work itſelf, and the concurrence of two thirds of the Congreſs may at any time introduce alterations and amendments. Regarding it then, in every point of view, with a candid and diſintereſted mind, I am bold to aſſert, that it is the beſt form of government which has ever been offered to the world.

Mr. Wilſon's ſpeech was frequently interrupted with loud and unanimous teſtimonies of approbation, and the applauſe which was reiterated at the concluſion, evinced the general ſenſe of its excellence, and the conviction which it had impreſſed upon every mind.

Doctor Ruſh then addreſſed the meeting in an elegant and pathetic ſtyle, deſcribing our preſent calamitous ſituation, and enumerating the advantages which would flow from the adoption of the new ſyſtem of fœderal government. The advancement of commerce, agriculture, manufactures, arts and ſciences, the encouragement of emigration, the abolition of paper money, the annihilation of party, and the prevention of war, were ingeniouſly conſidered as the neceſſary conſequences of that event. The Doctor concluded with an emphatic declaration "were this the laſt moment of his exiſtence, his dying requeſt and injunction to his fellow citizens would be, to accept and ſupport the offered conſtitution."

Mr. Gurney moved, that a committee be appointed to write and publiſh anſwers, under the authority of their names, to the anonymous pieces againſt the fœderal conſtitution. But Mr. Donaldſon obſerving, that it would be improper to expoſe any particular gentleman to a perſonal attack, Col. Gurney's motion was withdrawn.

The thanks of the meeting being preſented to the chairman, the buſineſs of the evening was cloſed.

Extract of a letter from Boſton, dated Oct. 2.

"Sunday laſt ſailed from this port, the ſhip Columbia and ſloop Waſhington, commanded by captain J. Kendrick and captain R. Gray, on an enterpriſing voyage to Kamſchatka, on the weſtern part of this continent. The object of this voyage is to open an intercourſe between theſe ſtates and the natives of that diſtant country, by trading with them for furrs, of which commodity, it is ſaid, that country abounds in. The greateſt commercial advantages are expected to be derived from this intercourſe."

Was married on Saturday evening laſt, by the Rev. Doctor Ewing, Maſkell Ewing, Eſq. Clerk of the General Aſſembly of New-Jerſey, to Miſs Jane Hunter, daughter of Mr. James Hunter, merchant, of this city.

REMEDY FOR THE CRAMP.

A Gentleman, having been often liable to be affected by the cramp in his feet and legs when in bed, was mentioning it in company, when another gentleman preſent told him, he would preſcribe him a very ſimple remedy, that would immediately remove it; which was, as ſoon as he found the cramp coming on, he ſhould take a roll of common ſulphur in that hand that was on the ſame ſide with the leg or foot affected, and ſqueeze it pretty hard, and it would immediately remove the pain. He accordingly provided himſelf with the ſulphur, laid it by his bed ſide, and in two or three nights after, had occaſion to try the experiment, which removed the cramp in leſs than a minute. He frequently ſince repeated it with like ſucceſs, and found the return of the diſorder neither ſo frequent nor ſo troubleſome. This remedy was communicated by him to ſeveral of his acquaintance, who, when troubled with the cramp, always found it attended with the like ſucceſs.

Meſſ. DUNLAP & CLAYPOOLE,

NOTHING at preſent appears more ſurpriſing and unaccountable, than the depreciation of our paper money, and although it is a ſubject of general inveſtigation, I do not find any perſon who can give a ſatisfactory account of the cauſe, only that there is a prevailing diſtruſt in government, and that paper will not anſwer all the purpoſes intended by a medium of trade.

It is agreed upon all hands, that its redemption is well ſecured; and if ſo, and admitting it will not anſwer all the purpoſes of gold and ſilver, there is no good reaſon why there ſhould be ſuch an amazing difference in value.

I think we may take the following poſitions for granted, viz. That the paper money of Pennſylvania is well funded, and that no more will be made, let the majority of the enſuing houſe of aſſembly be of what political ſentiments they may.

That the demands for 1 year, including taxes, impoſts & exciſe, are nearly equal to the whole ſum. And it is highly probable, the enſuing aſſembly will not allow any more of it to be re-iſſued from the Treaſury.

It is alſo a fact well known, that when the new federal government is eſtabliſhed, no paper money can be made on any account whatever; but that the ſtate will have time to call in and faithfully redeem what may then be in circulation.

So that whatever change may happen either in the general government or in the legiſlature of this ſtate, the redemption of the money ſtands perfectly ſecure; and ſo far as reaſon and judgment can direct, muſt be a ſafe ſpeculation in the end for thoſe who have confidence.

TRANSLATION

Of the Fourth Idyllium of MOSCHUS.

WHEN o'er unruffled Ocean's azure plain
Soft zephyrs ſigh, my ſympathetic breaſt
Sinks into ſadneſs; then the Muſe's ſtrain
Delight not; all my wiſh, oblivious reſt.

But when th' infuriate Deep's vex'd billows roar,
Daſhing their ſounding ſurge, what joy to find
The grove's deep ſhelter on the ſtable ſhore,
Where the tall pine-tree ſings beneath the wind!

How wretched he, whoſe toil is on the main,
A boat his home, the fiſh his dangerous prize!
While, by ſome fountain marge, the ſpreading plain
Its friendly ſhade to my repoſe ſupplies.

Ah! then how ſweet the murmur to mine ear,
Which ſoothes my ſenſe, and not alarms my fear!

ONE of our modern ſelf-admiring beaux has lately been a ſubject for laughter to every polite circle from the ſubſequent ridiculous circumſtance. He wiſhed to have the reputation of being in the good graces of a lady in the neighbourhood of Portman-ſquare, whoſe amiable diſpoſition, wit and beauty, will be her chief recommendation to a huſband. Unfortunately for this blight of manhood, in one of his viſits to the lady, a monkey, famous for its imitative powers, was introduced into the ſame room:—my lord ogled the lady, and yawned—the monkey did the ſame.—My lord moved two or three ſteps in a minuet—the monkey did the ſame.—My lord drawing his mirror toothpick caſe from his pocket, admired his pretty face, picked his teeth, and, falling into a gentleman like ennui, remained ſilent for ſome minutes:—the monkey affected the ſame good breeding.—Deſpiſing the one, and entertained with the other, the lady alternately beſtowed a look on each of the animals, and was alſo ſilent. At that inſtant her ſiſter entered the room, and exclaimed, Bleſs me, lady A—, quite mute! what are you ruminating on? Pointing towards her irrational companions, lady A— replied, with a contemptuous ſmile, I am endeavouring to ſolve a very knotty point, and determine which is the man!

MOORE-HALL,

THE Estate of the late William Moore, esquire, situate upon the river Schuylkill, in the township of Charles-Town, in the county of Chester, distant 23 miles from this city.

The Estate consists of upwards of 600 acres of most excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Mansion House is spacious, convenient and airy; it is situated upon a high and healthy spot, and commands a most delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Grist-Mill on the premises, near the Mansion House, on a never-failing stream, called Pickering, running through the estate, and watering a great body of meadow; this stream empties itself into the Schuylkill, in front of the house; it formerly supplied water for a saw mill, which might with much ease, and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Estate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any person inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premises before the day of sale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, esquire, in Arch street, or PETER MILLER, esquire, in Third street. Sept 17 eptf

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be exposed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thursday the 29th of November next, at the Court-House in Harford county, state of Mryland,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

TO THE CITIZENS of PENNSYLVANIA.

Friends and Fellow Citizens,

THE important moment is at length arrived, which must fix the Fate of America, perhaps for ever. The Fœderal Convention have at length submitted to your consideration, that plan of government which appeared to them best calculated to ensure the future happiness of these States: with you, therefore, it rests to say, whether you will establish order and good government: whether laying aside every narrow selfish motive, you will open wide your circling arms, to embrace your fellow citizens of every denomination, with these generous exclamations—O ye, who have every claim to our fraternal regard!—O brothers, and more than brothers, descended from the same cruel parent, fostered by the same unnatural mother, taught in the same school of national adversity!—O ye, who have fought, bled, and conquered at our sides, whose brothers, friends, and relations, have mingled their martyred bodies with those of our brothers, friends, and relations!—O ye, who have participated in our good fortune, and sympathized with us in the hour of our distress! whence is it, that our mutual ties are forgotten, our family compact almost dissolved, and our very existence, as a nation, threatened with an immediate and total annihilation?——Let us once more embrace with that brotherly affection which inspired every heart among us in 1775 and 1776, and which, under the guidance of a benign Providence, established the Freedom and Independence of America.——Such are the sentiments of every candid, of every generous, of every truly exalted and noble heart among us.

Indeed, my friends, it would be an insult to your understanding, should I attempt to prove to you, what is self-evident, viz. The absolute necessity of cherishing Fœderal Sentiments; or should I tell you, that we are as sheep wanting a shepherd. These things have been acknowledged by 12 of the States, who sent delegates to the late Convention. And I am bold to say, that in this congregated body, was more real wisdom, patriotism, and integrity, than in any assembly that ever was convened, in any age or country, for the same, or even for different purposes—It was composed of men, whose liberal souls were not influenced by any partial, self-interested, or local views, who were no less tenacious of your liberties, than they were desirous to give sufficient force and energy to your government; for while they, agreeably to your instructions, gave the Fœderal government power of making war, peace, and treaties, regulating commerce, &c. they nevertheless, guarded against any possible abuse of this power, by instituting two distinct houses, each of which holds a check upon the proceedings of the other.

But, my friends, this NEW constitution is like the form of government it proposes, simple and easy to be understood, not fraught with puzzling mazes or perplexing intricacies; the judgment, therefore, of the meanest capacity is adequate to the task, of fully and fairly examining it.

In short, it implies no more than is expressed in the plainest and most unequivocal terms, so that there is no need of any comments or learned disquisitions to explain it.

Be therefore aware of men who insult your understanding, by telling you, "this NEW constitution is not intelligible to you, or you would not hesitate one moment to fling it in the fire;—we who have more learning, and better judgments, have discovered many faults in it—and in particular, it smells strong of the British form of government, which consists of three distinct branches, viz. King, Lords, and Commons."

Let us, my friends, weigh well this objection, with respect to its similitude to what is British.—Is it a crime to imitate our enemies in what is right?—Reason and common sense answer NO.—A retrospect to the conduct of the ancient Romans, will confirm the justness of this answer. I allude to that period of their history, when their country was invaded by a powerful army under Pyrrhus, an experienced commander, and one, who, perhaps in those days, was first in the knowledge of military discipline. On his invasion of their country, he found them rude, barbarous, and ignorant of regular discipline. So that he expected an easy conquest; but mark the consequence. The Romans attentively observed his method of attack, &c. which they never failed to imitate, until they at length became complete masters of the art of war, were able to fight him with his own weapons, and finally obliged him to relinquish the conquest of their country, as impracticable and absurd.

I might also instance your conduct, my friends, in the late war with Great Britain.

We are next to consider, whether the Convention have copied from the British form of government what is right only:——Had they suffered the President and Senate of the United States to become hereditary, and the House of Representatives only to be elected septennially, then would they have given you the British form of government, with all its faults and imperfections; but this they have not done. In England, they may have a boy, a fool, or a knave for their King, for the son MUST always succeed his father, who, I affirm, is as absolute and despotic, as the Grand Signior, or the Great Mogul, with this difference only, that the people of Great Britain have insult added to injury, for they are enslaved under the show of liberty—That he is vested with despotic power to all intents and purposes, is by no means strange, when we reflect, that all offices of emolument are in the gift of the Crown; that the men who fill these offices are not excluded from seats either in the House of Commons or House of Lords; that the Crown has also a power of creating any number of sinecures, with enormous salaries annexed to them; and this prerogative the Kings of Great Britain have not failed to exercise effectually. Hence it is, that the influence of the Crown has swallowed up the power of the Commons, who are the only part of government that is chosen by the people; and that sep ennially, in a country where none but freeholders vote, and where landlords have an absolute controul over these freeholders, who are their tenants. I have known two men of large landed property, by uniting their interests, procure the election of themselves as representatives for a whole county, contrary to the real sense of at least five-sixths of the people.

The influence of the Crown in the House of Lords is still greater if possible, composed as it is, of men, many of whom hold profitable offices in the government, and have younger sons provided for in the revenue, &c. The number of Bishops who sit in this House, also much increase the influence of the Crown. Thus, we see, that the King and his minions, can always command a decided majority in either House, to give a sanction to any the most infamous measure he may recommend.—So that in truth, we may say, Great Britain is governed by the Crown alone.

Widely different is our proposed Constitution—the President of the United States bears no similitude to the despot I have just described—he will not be hereditary, for he is to be chosen by you every fourth year; nor can he be a boy, or a giddy young man, for he must have attained the age of 35 years, when all the whims of youth are generally superseded by reason and sound judgment; he will never have an undue influence in the Senate, nor in the House of Representatives, for no man who fills any office in the gift of the President, or of Congress, can be a member of either House; he, like every other officer of government, is at all times amenable to the people for his conduct, is liable to be impeached by the House of Representatives, tried by the Senate, and if convicted of treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors, shall be removed from office.

If we proceed to examine the other two branches, you will find that the Senate and House of Representatives, are the voluntary choice of a free people; since one-third part of the former, and the whole of the latter, are to be elected every second year.

Upon the whole, my friends, it evidently appears that this is a truly republican form of government, by which your liberties can never receive the smallest injury, but on the contrary, will be transmitted inviolate to your latest posterity.

From what has been said, I trust you will think with me, that the proposed Fœderal Constitution comes very near that perfect form of government which has been aimed at by the English, but they unluckily overshot their mark, by leaving too much in the power of the Crown.

These thoughts, my fellow-citizens, I committed to writing a few days since, and afterwards proceeded to answer sundry objections which have been made to the NEW Constitution; this part, however, I have suppressed, on finding the matter has been taken up by a learned gentleman, who was a member of the Convention, and whose satisfactory speech at a late meeting, will, I flatter myself, appear for your perusal, before the publication of this.

A PLAIN CITIZEN.

Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, July 11.

THE following matters are now under the consideration of government, as part of the great business of the next session of parliament:

Sale and allotment of all the Crown Lands in Great Britain.

An act to call in all the old silver, and to enable government to go into a more full coinage for the public service.

The building barracks for soldiers in all the counties of the kingdom; towards the sea coasts in particular.

Bamber Gascoyne, esquire, is just embarked for Ireland, on a visit to his old hospitable friend the Earl of Hillsborough; who sits down for the remainder of his life, on his extensive estate in that kingdom. His lordship, with unremitting zeal, and considerable expenditures, has made Hillsborough not only the most beautiful, but one of the most flourishing towns in the north of Ireland!

Lord North, once the great minister of this great country, who saw and foresaw every thing, the Sampson of England, is now, like Sampson, led about at Turnbridge, with this only consolation, that he is so led by the affectionate hand of a dutiful daughter.

Extract of a letter from Vienna, June 15.

'A report has been spread here, that the perfect friendship which subsisted between the emperor and his august ally had suffered some slight alteration; it appears, however, that this is false, and that, on the contrary, these two illustrious personages have agreed more than ever on the re-union of their interest.

'After some councils held at Cherson between the two sovereigns, at which their respective ministers at the Turkish court (now at Cherson) were present, we are assured that they are going to join in some new project against the Ottoman Porte. The French minister, Mr. Segur, is not inactive in the midst of the pleasures with which the Imperial courts probably cover their design; he has, within this little time, sent off two couriers for Versailles, and one to Mr. de Choiseul at Constantinople.

'No one knows how long their majesties will stay at Taurida, but it seems they have given up the most brilliant as well as useful ceremony of the coronation, the ostensible occasion of the journey. We assured that the empress, at her return, will fix her residence for nine or ten months at Moscow, where the foreign ambassadors are also to establish themselves. The city of Cherson is a kind of phœnomena of industry and population, considering the little time that has passed since its establishment.

'The affairs of the Netherlands, with which the emperor is by this fully acquainted, seem not to have shortened the time his majesty proposed to pass with the empress.

'Nevertheless, nothing is more serious than the turn those affairs have taken, since nothing less is intended than putting a stop to the new measures intended to be introduced into those provinces. Will the emperor ratify the promises made by the governor general? Those who know his majesty, answer No: and that he will rather renew the ancient ideas of exchange. We are assured even that there are some able heads employed to find out a plan proper to facilitate this operation; but as all these suppositions have not as yet any solid foundation, we think it reasonable to suspend our judgment until we see what happens.

In the mean time the advices from Brussels, Antwerp, Malines, &c. are not very agreeable; the minister, Count Belgiogioso has lost all his authority; the Imperial commissary, the captains, and in general those who had any part in the innovations intended to be introduced, are not at all in safety. It is, at the same time, a matter of inquietude and curiosity to know how the emperor will settle with the states of the Low Country, whose arguments vigorously maintained by the dispositions of the people, are, or at least appear to be, invincible. In the mean time, the ministry at Vienna are well pleased with the deference of the governors general to the desire of the inhabitants. It was the only means to prevent the greatest misfortunes.'

In England, Spring begins the 19th of February. The snow-drop and some early flowers appear; the buds of trees swell, and the sap begins to rise.

Summer, the 21st of May. The fruits are set, trees in full leaf, and Nature puts on her finest dress.

Autumn, August 23. The fruits of the earth tending in general to their utmost perfection, and the earth cloathed in her richest dress.

Winter, November 22. The trees stripped of their leaves, the sap retiring to the roots, and all Nature preparing to resist the winter's blast.

A Siberian Year.

June 18th. Snow begins to melt.
30th. Snow quite gone.
July 2d. The face of the country in full verdure.
18th. Plants at their full growth.
Aug. 15th. Fruits and seeds in perfection.
23d. Snow and winter begins.

Spring, Summer and Autumn together, seldom exceed two months.

July 14. The following short account of the European treaties, from that of Westphalia to the treaty of Paris, cannot fail being interesting to our readers: for by it they will see almost at one view their periods, contending powers, and what each lost and acquired:—

The Treatp of Westphalia made in the year 1648, was between the Emperor, France, Sweden and the Protestant German Princes. By it, Elsas, Brisac and Philipsburg, were yielded to France; Pomerania, Bremen, Verden and Wismar to Sweden; a free exercise of religion was allowed to Germany.

The Treaty of Oliva was made in the year 1660, between Sweden and her enemies. By it the king of Poland renounced all claim to the crown of Sweden: and Schonen, Holland and Blekinge, were yielded to the latter power.

The Treaty of Breda was made in the year 1667, between England and Holland. By it the commercial disputes between us and the United States were ended.

The Treaty of Aix la Chapelle was made in the year 1668, between France and Spain. By it Spanish Flanders was yielded to Spain.

The Treaty of Nimergen was made in the year 1677, between France and the Allies. Franche Comte was delivered to Lewis the XIVth.

The Treaty of Ryswick was made in the year 1697, between France and the Allies. Almost all the French conquests were restored.

The Treaty of Carlowitz was made in the year 1699, between the Emperor and the Turks. Transylvania was yielded to the Emperor.

The Treaty of Altranstad was made in the year 1706, between Sweden and Saxony. King Augustus of Poland was dethroned.

The Treaty of Utrecht was made in the year 1713, between the House of Bourbon and the Allies. Spain was given to Philip the Fifth; Sicily to the Duke of Savoy; Gibraltar and Minorca to Great-Britain, and Lombardy, with the Low Countries, to Austria.

The Treaty of Rastad-Baden was made in the year 1714 between France and Germany. The Peace of Utrecht was accepted, and King Philip of Spain acknowledged.

The Treaty of Passarowitz was made in the year 1718, between the Turks and the Emperor. Belgrade was yielded to the Emperor.

The Alliance of Vienna was made in the year 1725, between the House of Austria, Russia and Spain. Spain effected this alliance in consequence of France being so closely united with Great Britain.

The Alliance of Hanover was made in the same year, between France, England, Prussia, Sweden, Denmark and Holland. France and the maritime powers entered into this alliance to preserve peace, and to counterbalance the alliance of Vienna.

The Treaty of Vienna was made in the year 1731, between England and the House of Austria. The Pragmatick Saction was guaranteed by the maritime powers.

The Peace of Vienna was made in the year 1735, between the House of Bourbon and the Emperor. Lorrain and Bar were yielded to France; the Two Sicilies to Don Carlos; Parma and Placentia to the Emperor, and Tuscany to the Duke of Lorrain. France guaranteed also the Pragmatick Sanction.

The Treaty of Belgrade was made in the year 1739, between the Ottoman Porte and the Emperor. Servia, Walachia, and Belgrade were conquered by the Turks.

The Treaty of Breslaw was made in the year 1742, between Austria and the King of Prussia.—Silesia and the country of Glatz were given to the Prussian King.

The Treaty of Abo was made in the year 1743, between Sweden and Russia. A small district of Finland was yielded to the Czarina.

The Treaty of Dresden was made in the year 1745, between Prussia, Austria, and Saxony. The King of Prussia had one million of crowns of the Saxons, and Silesia was again yielded to him. He acknowledged the reigning Emperor.

The Treaty of Aix la Chapelle was made in the year 1748, between the Allies and the House of Bourbon. Austria made an entire cession of Parma, Placentia, and Guastella, to the Infant Don Phillip.

The Treaty of Paris was made in the year 1763, between Great Britain, France, Spain, and Portugal. Canada, East and West Florida, a part of Louisiana in North America, the islands of Grenada, Dominica, and Tobago in the West Indies, were confirmed to Great Britain.

What would the historians, orators, and poets of ancient Rome say, could they re-visit this world, and be told that Scipio Africanus was last week convicted at the Old Bailey of stealing a petticoat, and sentenced to Botany Bay!

As the intestine broils of the Dutch have made them the greatest object and topic of the day, the following particulars may not be deemed incurious on the present occasion:

The inhabitants of the Low Countries have always been distinguished by their trade, but their wealth has also rendered them fierce and impatient of any sort of yoke.

The Dutch provinces having passed in the fifteenth century under the dominion of the Spaniards, they presently found in the severity natural to that nation motives to excite their dislike; they accordingly united to support their freedom, and combated so fortunately for independence, that, with the aid of England, and France in particular, seven among them in the end formed this republic, after having supported a bloody war, both by sea and land, in every region of the earth, against the three Philips, most powerful kings of Spain, for more than eighty years, and made peace in 1648. The republic, in less than half an age, carried its arms and commerce into all parts of the world, and "made the establishment so solid (observes sir William Temple) that there are now no powers able to shake them, except the fall of the republic comes from itself."—That fall is probably now at hand, which comes from the Dutch themselves.

In 1665 they raised forty millions of guilders, and of these the province of Holland paid 22 millions. They generally calculate two millions of people in the United Provinces, and two millions at the lowest computation are annually paid in taxes. They are reckoned to contain only 7500 square miles; whereas England has 49,450 square miles, consequently those provinces are six times as populous as England, which pays only three times as much taxes as the Dutch, notwithstanding the great disparity of inhabitants and extent.

Sunday last arrived at Harwich, in one of his majesty's packets from Helvoetsluys, Lord George Gordon, from Holland. He was escorted on board by a file of musquetteers.

The original cause of national disputes is generally soon forgotten in the heat of tumultuous proceedings. The patriots of Holland, who once only thought themselves aggrieved by the stadtholder's supposed attachment to England, will now listen to nothing less than a revolution. They have forgot why they first took up arms, but seem desperately determined not to lay them down till they have used them. Revolutions are made up of little animosities, which taken separately are insignificant. Thus America was severed from Great Britain by a trifling duty on TEA.

AMERICA.

KINGSTON, August 29.

We are informed a forged indorsement upon a bill of exchange has been lately discovered in rather an extraordinary manner.

A. draws a bill of exchange on London for 140l. which he tendered as a payment, but not being able to pass it, applied to his friend B. who indorses it—On offering it a second time, it was, for some reasons, refused, but at length, being brought with another indorsement by C. a merchant residing in Kingston, it was received and the value accounted for. Here the matter rested for some time until B. wishing likewise to draw, and having seen the hand writing of C. on the back of his friend B's bill, thought he had a right to expect a similar act of friendship, when on applying to C. he was, to his utter astonishment, informed by C. that he had never indorsed any bill for A.

The matter now becoming serious, proper advices were taken, and warrants for the apprehension of A. were issued. He has absconded, but it is said has given notice of his intention to appear at the next Surry assizes to take his trial.

BOSTON, October 2.

Last Saturday the ceremony of opening Malden Bridge was performed by firing a cannon, and the regaling of the workmen, at the expence of the proprietors. In the afternoon the established toll was received from all passengers who crossed the bridge.

Yesterday, at nine o'clock, A. M. the ancient and honorable Artillery Company, commanded by the honorable major-general J. Brooks, paraded in Faneuil-hall, and at eleven began their march for Medford.—On their arrival at Charlestown they were met by the Medford independent Light Infantry commanded by captain Hall, who politely escorted the artillery to Blanchard's tavern, in that town, where both companies, "in friendship's fetters bound," partook, reciprocally, of an elegant repast, provided for the purpose. Towards the close of the day, the artillery, after mutual congratulations between the two companies, left Medford, and arrived in town about eight o'clock last evening.

PORTLAND, (Mass.) Sept. 27.

By a gentleman who lately passed through this town, from Kennebeck river in the county of Lincoln, we are informed, that the address of the late convention has been received there—that the inhabitants of Hallowell, Winthrop, Vassalboro, Winslow, Pittston, Hancock, Canaan, Norrigewalk, Washington, Wales, &c &c. were agreeably to there commendation of the convention, putting their names to the subscription paper—and it was supposed that at least nine tenths of the subscribers in those towns and plantations would be in favor of a separation.

Extract of a letter from New-Glouster, September 23.

"The address of the late convention, on the subject of erecting a new government, with the yea and nay paper, has lately been circulated in this town. I am informed that every man has put his name under the word yea, except one; and he is a J——se of the P——ce."

PROVIDENCE, (R. I.) Sept. 29.

On Thursday, last week, a convocation of episcopal clergy, from the states of Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire, was held in New London; at which time a new and very elegant church, completely finished in two years, was consecrated by Bishop Seabury to the service of Almighty God.——It must afford pleasure to every friend of religion, of virtue, and of America, to behold our churches, which were destroyed in the late war, now rebuilding with new and greater magnificence, and to see such as have been long vacant now supplied with clergymen of distinguished piety, learning and abilities, from one end of the continent to the other. From such sudden good effects we may figure great advantages, not only to church but state, by erecting new places of public worship, and extending the benefits of religious instruction far and wide. These benefits are to be enlarged by the general toleration which God's good providence secured to us all in the late revolution. Whilst all agree in promoting love and charity among all denominations, and all these are united amongst themselves in faith and uniformity of worship, and abhor bigotry, superstition, and persecution; whilst those concerned in sacred things take heed to themselves and their doctrines, enter not into the labours of others, do not attempt to insult each other by assuming new titles, or borrowing plumes from others, but agree as brethren, and in their different places and stations confederate as one allied body against vice and irreligion, American independence will be established, her peace and prosperity promoted, more than by all the combined force of fleets and armies, individuals will enjoy the rights of conscience and private judgment, family government and affection be fashionable, the alliances by blood, marriage and friendship, increased; government obeyed, industry practised, agriculture and commerce flourish, this continent become an asylum from tyranny and oppression, and posterity enjoy those blessings for which we have fought and bled, for which our heroes have died.

RICHMOND, October 4.

On Monday last an accident happened near this city by a waggon running over its driver, the wheels of which going over his neck severed the head from the body.

FREDERICKSBURG, Oct. 4.

On Saturday night last, a warehouse in this town, occupied by Mr. Jacob Kuhn, was broke open, and robbed of goods to a considerable amount.

On Monday last, the Jockey Club purse of 100 guineas, was run for over the course in this town, and won by Actæon, the property of Mr. W. D. Claiborne.

On Tuesday, a purse of 75 guineas was run for over the same course, and won by Mr. Claiborne's horse Hazard.

And on Wednesday, a purse of 50 guineas was run for, and won by Diana, the property of Mr. J. Foster.

BALTIMORE, October 5.

On Monday last the following gentlemen were elected Delegates to the General Assembly for Ann-Arundel County, without opposition, viz.

Brice T. B. Worthington,
Nicholas Worthington,
Richard Harwood,
James Carroll, Esquires.

At 10 o'clock last night, the Delegates to the General Assembly for Baltimore County, closed, when the four first mentioned gentlemen were declared to be duly elected. On numbering the polls, the votes for the several candidates were as follow, viz.

Harry Dorsey Gough, Esquire	1401
Edward Cockey, Esquire,	1277
Thomas Cockey Deye, Esquire,	1155
Charles Ridgely, Esquire,	1101
Charles Ridgely, Esq. (Son of Wm.)	940
John Cradock, Esquire,	902

On Wednesday last the polls for this town were closed, 830 votes were taken, and the numbers stood as follow:

Mr. Chace,	612
Mr. M'Mechen,	593
Mr. M'Henry,	206
Mr. Rogers,	168

WORCESTER, October 1.

A correspondent observes, that the mode proposed by the federal convention for adopting the new plan of federal government, reflects the highest honor on that august body, and discovers the members to be be worthy the confidence of the people, by their having pointed out such a mode, which is by delegates chosen immediately by the people for that particular business; this will prevent the arts and designs of great and ambitious men from working iniquity; as the people have now an opportunity of reasoning and judging for themselves.

On Friday night last the house of the hon. Levi Lincoln, esq. was broken into, and cash to the amount of between 40 and 50 dollars taken from his desk, which was forced open. A person is in custody on suspicion of being the burgler.

Philadelphia, Oct. 11.

The following gentlemen were on Tuesday last elected Representatives in General Assembly for the city of Philadelphia, for the ensuing year, viz. William Will, Thomas Fitzsimons, George Clymer, Jacob Hiltzheimer, and William Lewis.

On Saturday last John Franklin was brought before the supreme court, to shew cause why he should not be committed upon a charge of high treason. The Chief Justice stated, that many depositions and proofs of his treasonable practices were in possession of the executive council, besides the affidavit upon which issued the warrant for apprehending the prisoner and several other persons, whose names it would be improper at this time to divulge. In this affidavit it was sworn, that Franklin and a number of the Luzerne malcontents had assembled for the purpose of opposing the authority and laws of the commonwealth, and that a paper subscribed with his name, and in his hand writing, was posted up in different places by which the people were invited to throw off their allegiance to the state of Pennsylvania, and to erect themselves into an independent state. It appeared likewise, that the insurgents had appointed a court, consisting of three judges, which was vested with jurisdiction in all cases, criminal and civil, whether capital or otherwise. These facts being read, the chief justice observed, that if proved, they would clearly constitute the crime of high treason, but that the lenity of the government had prevailed upon them to institute a prosecution for misprision of treason only; and the prisoner being accordingly asked, if he could assign any reason why he should not be committed, to take his trial for that offence—he answered respectfully, that he was not guilty of the practices with which he was charged, and referred his defence to Mr. Daniel Clymer and Mr. James Biddle, his council. Mr. Clymer then moved, that the sum should be specified in which the prisoner should give bail; but the chief justice observed, that however inclined he might have been to consider that subject yesterday, the information which had since been received from Luzerne was a conclusive bar to the application; for it appeared that the insurgents, of whom Franklin was the leader, had proceeded to acts of open rebellion, in consequence of his imprisonment; that they had surrounded the house of Colonel Pickering, and seized his family as hostages, and that Mr. Montgomery, one of the commissioners, had escaped with difficulty, after suffering the greatest personal violence. Upon this the attorney-general stated, that as the circumstances were now essentially altered, it became his duty to pray, upon the part of the commonwealth, that the prisoner might be committed for the crime of high treason, which was incontrovertibly charged in the deposition that had just been read. The judges unanimously agreed to make out the warrant accordingly, and as the commitment is by the whole court, a single judge will not, of course, admit the prisoner to bail during the vacation.

In consequence of the miraculous preservation of the life of George Washington, Esquire, in General Braddock's defeat, a dissenting clergyman in Virginia predicted, that God had preserved his life, to be an eminent blessing to his country. This prophecy has been literally fulfilled. May not the providential preservation of the valuable life of this great and good man, on his way home from the Convention, be for the great and important purpose of establishing, by his name and future influence, a government, that will render safe and permanent the liberties of America, which he has acquired by his sword?

Extract of a letter from Richmond, dated Oct. 1.

"With respect to the Constitution recommended by the Convention, it is, generally speaking, very highly approved of here; and it is expected when the Assembly meets, that the first business they proceed on will be, to direct the people to make choice of their delegates for the Convention."

Extract of a letter from George Town, (Potowmack.)

"The impression in favour of the new constitution is considerable and general, from the information I have received. There are to be meetings in Alexandria and the county of Fairfax, in which it stands, to instruct their delegates to promote the calling of a convention."

Extract of a letter from Sussex (Delaware) Sept 29.

"I must not forget to mention by way of postscript, that one of the newspapers of your city some time in August last, by the accidental transposition of a single letter, occasioned an explanation that has caused some merriment. The paper, instead of the words United States read Untied States. A farmer of my acquaintance in reading over the paper was at a loss what to make of the matter. Untied States, Untied States, said he, what can this mean? certainly it cannot mean that our governments are dissolved.—The same evening he carried the paper to old Mr. G—, who, you know keeps a school in the neighbourhood, and desired an explanation. Mr. G—, after putting on his spectacles to prevent a possibility of deception, examined the paragraph, and found what the man said to be true.—It is even as you say, John, replied he, and I think can mean nothing more than that the states are, or shortly will be, no longer bound by their old constitutions: that is, they will be compleatly untied from them, as soon as the new constitution comes abroad!"

It is a fact (says a London print) that our celebrated poet Mr. Hayley was lately robbed on Kensington common of more than thirty guineas. The footpad, we hear, was very polite; Mr. Hayley (said he) you have lately had a benefit, cannot you afford a poor devil a few shillings in a particular exigency?—Mr. Hayley assured the fellow he had no money to spare. Then, by Jasus (cried the footpad) you must swear upon this loaded pistol that you speak the truth, and nothing but the truth, Mr. Hayley. Upon saying this he presented his pistol, and obliged Mr. H. to deliver up his purse. In the annals of the English history there is not an instance of a son of the Muses being robbed of so considerable a sum. The thief has since been apprehended, and is to have his trial next sessions. It is thought the jury will bring him in Insane, for having thought it worth his while to attempt robbery upon a poet.

On Saturday last expired at his lodgings in Front-street, BROOKE SMITH, Esq. a native of Birmingham, in Great Britain. His remains were interred on Monday afternoon in the grave-yard of the first Presbyterian church, attended by a number of respectable citizens, whose acquaintance with his merits, during several years residence in America, induced them to pay this tribute to his memory.

The distinguished abilities and moral rectitude of Mr. Smith eminently entitled him to those testimonies of grief and of respect, which it is the lot of few to meet with in an equal degree amongst those whom neither affinity has endeared, nor early habits associated. His mind was comprehensive and intelligent, his invention copious, his judgment sound, and his conversation eloquent.

Yet however superior his parts, he rendered them wholly subservient to the practice of the social virtues; he was zealous in the duties of friendship, and in the works of charity active, delicate and judicious. In the busy occupations of mercantile life, he preserved a purity of mind, which it has sometimes been supposed was peculiar to retirement and seclusion; and with the manners of one long accustomed to the world, he lived scrupulously moral and fervently pious.

On the 28th of September last departed this life Mr. James Kennedy, merchant, of Talbot Eastern Shore, Maryland, after a long and severe illness, which he bore with uncommon fortitude, and resignation to the will of his Maker. His loss is much lamented by his friends and acquaintance. He was an affectionate and tender husband, a kind neighbour, a benevolent, charitable and honest man.

INDUCED by motives of curiosity, on hearing that a person named LOUIS CASTLEMAN said to be aged 109 years, was in this city, I requested that he might be brought to my house, in order to make some enquiries relative to his age, constitution, manner of living, &c. At that time I knew nothing of his having been charged with bearing any marks of an ignominious punishment: but having viewed his head, I saw no other defects in any part thereof than what appeared to be the effects of extreme old age. Thus far I freely testify, being called on for the purpose.

Oct. 2, 1787. W. BARTON.

WE, the subscribers, having carefully and particularly examined the Ears and Hands of Mr. Lewis Castleman, of the county of Bedford, at his particular request, have found those parts of his body whole, sound and entire, and have not perceived the least sign or indication of his having suffered the ignominious punishments of cropping or branding; and in justice to his character, we have subscribed our names to this certificate.

Several gentlemen of character and distinction came on board the ship, when her leaks obliged her to take refuge in this port, where they experienced that urbanity from the Admiral Don Francisco de Moralez, sen. which characterise the Castilian nation."

Description of the Goddess Discord.

THE trumpets sound, and with a dismal yell
Wild Discord rises from the vale of hell,
From her swell'd eyes there ran a briny flood,
And clotted gore upon her visage stood.
Around her head serpentine elf locks hung,
And streams of blood flow'd from her sable tongue.
Her tatter'd cloaths her yellow skin betray,
(An emblem of the breast on which they lay)
And brandish'd flames her trembling hand obey.

ANECDOTE.

SOMETIME ago at a yearly commencement in one of the Eastern States, we were entertained part of the forenoon with a Hebrew Oration. Being quite weary of the discourse, I whispered my companion, who was a New-England sea captain, that I wished the young man, instead of facing the audience, would address himself to those that understood Hebrew.—"Do you so, said the tar—then, by nowns, brother Jonathan, there would not be a single point of the compass that would suit him."

WHEREAS in pursuance of an application and order, dated the 3d day of April 1769, there was surveyed unto Thomas Jordan, a tract of land, situate in Buffaloe township, in the county of Northumberland, adjoining lands of doctor Rush, Philip Stever, Thomas M'Fadin, Benjamin Worrel, and vacant land, containing 374 acres, and the usual allowance: and whereas the said Thomas Jordan, by indenture, for the consideration therein mentioned, did grant and convey the said land unto George Troy, in fee, who made application to the land-office at Philadelphia for a patent of confirmation for the same; but it appearing that in the year 1772, a caveat was entered by the said Jordan against the said Troy, which never was decided, and it is alledged that the said Troy is long since gone to live in Carolina: these are therefore to give notice to the said Troy, and to every other person or persons claiming any estate in the premises under him, to be and appear before the honorable the Board of Property, to be held at Philadelphia aforesaid on the first Monday in December next, and to shew cause, if any they have, why the said patent shall not issue.

BY virtue of a precept from David Rittenhouse, esquire, sole trustee of the general loan-office of (the late province, now state of) Pennsylvania, to me directed, will be exposed to sale by Public Vendue, at the Merchants' Coffee-House, in the city of Philadelphia, on Wednesday the 14th day of November next, two two story Brick Messuages and lot or piece of Ground, situate, lying and being on the south side of Shippen street, and west side of George street, in the district of Southwark and county of Philadelphia, containing in breadth on Shippen street aforesaid 30 feet, and in length or depth 63 feet, bounded northwardly by Shippen street aforesaid, eastwardly by George street, and southwardly and westwardly by ground of John Stagg: taken in execution as the property of Robert Allison, carpenter, and to be sold by Joseph Cowperthwait, sheriff.

TO BE SOLD,

A Valuable Plantation and Tract of Land, situate in the township of Paxton, in the county of Dauphin, seven miles distant from Louisburg, the seat of justice in said county, and one mile from the river Susquehanna. The soil is fertile, the title indisputable, the quantity two hundred acres and allowance. There is upon the premises a dwelling house, barn, and young apple orchard, about six acres of excellent watered meadow, and more may be made; a great quantity of excellent timber for rails and fuel. There is also a Fulling Mill, in compleat repair, upon a never failing stream of water; and with the same dam an oil or other mill may be erected with convenience. The fulling mill is well situate for that business, as it commands great part of the custom from the Juniata and the branches of the Susquehannah, the carriage being so easy by boats. Any person inclining to purchase may apply to John Brown, administrator, in Whiteland township, Chester county.

DOCTOR HILL's
American Balsam,
IS to be sold in Philadelphia, by Mr. William Poyntell, at his store the corner of Black-Horse alley, in Second street, also by Mr. George Reinholt, in Market street, the second door above Fifth street; by Mr. Steiner, at the German Printing-office in Race street; at Germantown by Mr Justus Fox; at Lancaster by Ludwick Lowman, esquire; at New-York by Hugh Gaine, and by the subscriber at her place in Blockley, price 6/6 per bottle, and by the dozen 6/. a bottle.
This Balsam is now upwards of 20 years so well known in America, that it is a most effectual and infallible medicine for colds, coughs and asthmas; it gives great relief in the most painful rheumatism, in cholics, gravel and consumption; it is a most excellent cure in the whooping cough, and in most all the disorders and sicknesses in children, and for many other diseases, as may be seen in the printed directions in English and German on each bottle. In old diseases of long standing it will be necessary to continue the use of this healing medicine for a reasonable time, by more than one single bottle, and then they may expect relief from this, as thousands of people can testify, who have tried other things without success; there are indeed several balsams and preparations of medicine which gives, sometimes present relief for a short time in many disorders, but soon after returns more furious than before, but this American Balsam performed perfect and effectual cures; its fame is spread most every where; it is almost inconceivable to hear what surprising cures this Balsam has performed with people who have tried and experienced its wonderful effects: each bottle is sealed up with the representation of a certain plant in a heart, and if any balsam under this name should be sold in any place not mentioned in my advertisements, the Public may be assured it is not Dr. Hill's Balsam, but counterfeit, because no other person is able to prepare the genuine Balsam, for want of the principal ingredients of which Dr. Hill's American Balsam is composed.
Since the former proprietors are deceased, both William Young, junior and senior, the present is a sister to William Young, jun. botanist.

For Griſt Mills & other Water Works

On an extenſive Plan,

One of the beſt ſituations in America is offered

FOR SALE,

Together With

Batſto Iron-Works,

At the forks of Little Egg-Harbour river, one of the moſt healthy ſpots in New Jerſey, 38 miles by land from Philadelphia, and within a few hours ſail of New York.

THE river, communicating with the ſea by the beſt inlet on the Jerſey coaſt, is navigable for veſſels of 200 tons within a few miles of the works; thoſe of 100 tons may approach within one mile; flats and ſcows, carrying 10 or 12 tons, load and unload at the works. The uſual freight to New York or Philadelphia is 10 ſhillings per ton. The furnace ſtream affords plenty of water, in the dryeſt ſeaſon, for 3 or 4 pair of mill ſtones, beſides ſupplying the iron works.——An excellent dam, which has been increaſing in ſtrength many years by the cinder from the furnace, is well ſecured from the danger of freſhes, and the works are ſcarcely ever injured or delayed by either ice or backwater, though the tide ſwells to the foot of the dam: mills may therefore be erected at a moderate expence. This being a part of the country in which many people and many teams are neceſſarily employed in collecting and preparing for market the iron and lumber with which it abounds, and at the ſame time illy adapted to the raiſing of grain for their ſupport, there is, and muſt continue to be, a demand for large quantities of midlings, cornell, ſhorts and bran, at advanced prices; and the conveniency of conveying flour at a light expence, either to New York or Philadelphia, or to more diſtant markets, will not be overlooked nor conſidered as of ſmall importance, eſpecially as there are few mill ſeats of any conſiderable capacity equally adapted to the New York market, which is not unfrequently ſupplied with ſuperfine flour from Philadelphia. A choice of the various kinds of wheat may be drawn to this ſeat from Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jerſey, and New York with greater eaſe and convenience than to almoſt any other mills now in being.

The FURNACE, which by the extenſive lands annexed to it, is abundantly ſupplied with wood and ore, is now in blaſt, and is noted for producing the beſt hollow ware in America, the metal being peculiarly well adapted to the making of caſtings of all kinds, as well as excellent bar iron.

A FORGE, with four fires and two hammers, belongs to the eſtate, and ſtands about half a mile from the furnace, on another fine ſtream which affords plenty of water.

A SLITTING and ROLLING MILL, having been diſuſed for the laſt two or three years, may want ſome repairs to prepare it for uſe; but the forebays and gates are in perfect order, and being in the proper ſpot for griſt mills, may be appropriated to that uſe.

Two SAW MILLS in good order, and a ſmall Griſt Mill.

The MANSION HOUSE is elegantly ſituated about 100 yards from the furnace, on an height which commands a view of the whole works, and of the two villages formed by the ſurrounding buildings belonging to the eſtate, ſuch as barns, ſtables, coal houſes, workſhops, ſtorehouſes and dwellings for workmen. Adjoining the manſion houſe is a large and fruitful garden, affording plenty of vegetables, and well ſtored with choſen fruit trees: alſo a young bearing orchard, containing near 2000 apple trees, moſtly grafted.

Theſe excellent accommodations for extenſive and profitable manufactories, are offered to ſale at a very low rate, and on terms of payment calculated for the eaſe of the purchaſer, who may pay the greater part in the produce of the Iron Works, at a price to be agreed upon; and they are capable of producing more in one year, than will pay the whole price demanded.

For particulars, apply to WILLIAM RICHARDS, at the ſaid Works, JOHN COX, at Bloomſbury, near Trenton, or CHARLES PETTIT, in Philadelphia.

MOORE-HALL,

THE Estate of the late William Moore, esquire, situate upon the river Schuylkill, in the township of Charles-Town, in the county of Chester, distant 23 miles from this city.

The Estate consists of upwards of 600 acres of most excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Mansion House is spacious, convenient and airy; it is situated upon a high and healthy spot, and commands a most delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Grist-Mill on the premises, near the Mansion House, on a never-failing stream, called Pickering, running through the estate, and watering a great body of meadow; this stream empties itself into the Schuylkill, in front of the house; it formerly supplied water for a saw mill, which might with much ease, and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Estate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any person inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premises before the day of sale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, esquire, in Arch street, or PETER MILLER, esquire, in Third street. Sept 17 eptf

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be exposed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thursday the 29th of November next, at the Court-House in Harford county, state of Maryland,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

Those who wish to view the land, on application to Mess. Ashton and Waters, the present tenants, will be shewn it. Possession will be given the 1st of January, if required. The title good and free of all incumbrances. The terms will be easy to the purchaser, and will be made known on the day of sale, by Wm. WEST.

Baltimore, September 6, 1787. dtf

ALL persons indebted to the estate of JOHN HOOD, Merchant, in Front street, late deceased, are requested to make immediate payment; and those who have demands against said estate, are desired to bring in their claims properly attested.

To the PEOPLE of AMERICA.

THE preſent ſituation of the United States has attracted the notice of every country in Europe. By the diſcuſſions which led to the revolution, we have proved to the world, that we were intimately acquainted with the natural rights and political relations of mankind. By thoſe diſcuſſions, and the ſubſequent conduct of America, her enemies muſt be well convinced, that ſhe is ſincerely attached to liberty, and that her citizens will never ſubmit to a deprivation of that ineſtimable bleſſing. To enſure the continuance of that real freedom in the ſpirit of which our State Conſtitutions were univerſally formed; to enſure it from enemies within, then exiſting and numerous; to enſure it from enemies without, then and ever to be watched and repelled, the firſt confederation was formed. It was an honeſt and ſolemn covenant among our infant States, and virtue and common danger ſupplied its defects. When the immediate perils of thoſe awful times were removed by the valor and perſevering fortitude of America, aided by the active friendſhip of France, and the follies of Great Britain, thoſe defects were too eaſily ſeen and felt.—They have been acknowledged at various times by all the legiſlatures of the Union; and often, very often indeed, repreſented by Congreſs. The Commonwealth of Virginia took the firſt ſtep to obtain this object of univerſal deſire, by applying to her ſiſter States to meet her in the Commercial Convention in the laſt year. Some of the States immediately adopted the meaſure, Congreſs afterwards added their ſanction, and a few more of the States concurred. A meeting of the deputies, though not a general one, took place at the appointed time. The members of that body, influenced, I am perſuaded, by the pur[e] conſiderations, added their voice to the general wiſh for another Convention, whoſe object ſhould be the reviſion and amendment of the fœderal government. It is worthy of remark, that theſe proceedings of the States were not conducted through thoſe channels the confederation points out, but they were not inconſiſtent with it, they were certainly not improper: for it is not material, in what manner the United States in Congreſs become poſſeſſed of the matter and form of changes really deſired by the PEOPLE of the Union. It is only neceſſary when that body ſhall determine on alterations, that they proceed conſtitutionally to obtain the adoption of them. It may be obſerved further, that the addreſs of the Annapolis Convention ſigned by the Hon. JOHN DICKINSON, Eſq; was publiſhed in Sept. 1786 in the News-papers, of all the middle States, and particularly thoſe of Pennſylvania, during the ſitting of the Hon. the General Aſſembly of the Commonwealth. The People, therefore, throughout the Union, and moſt certainly in Pennſylvania, muſt have known that the important duty of amending our Fœderal Conſtitution (ſo far as the legiſlatures could interfere in it) muſt come before the members they were then about to chuſe. I have drawn the attention of my fellow-citizens to this fact, and requeſt they will obſerve it, becauſe a contrary idea has been given by ſome members of our legiſlature.

The recommendation for calling the late Convention for the purpoſe of giving the requiſite efficiency to the Union, was adopted by Congreſs and all the States, but Rhode Iſland. I will not abuſe that unhappy, fallen, loſt ſiſter. As a ſincere relation, however, wounded by the diſhonor to our family name—as an honeſt man, diſtreſſed at the injury ſhe has done to the cauſe of public and private virtue—as a friend to liberty, alarmed at the arguments againſt our Republican Governments, which ſhe has furniſhed to Royal Tyrants, I ſolemnly conjure her to conſider her late conduct, unexampled in the Hiſtory of the world. She exhibits to mankind the unheard of ſpectacle of a People, poſſeſſed of a conſtitution containing all the principles of ſubſtantial juſtice, and of civil and religious liberty, diſregarding the rights of property, and the obligations between man and man, & trampling under their feet, a ſolemn compact with neighbouring and related States yet bleeding with wounds, ſuſtained in fighting by their ſide in a common cauſe, and infringing the eſtabliſhed laws of nations, and treaties with allies moſt powerful and friendly. Let them aſk themſelves, let them permit a friend to aſk them, what they can hope from ſuch a conduct, or in what fatal cataſtrophe it may not iſſue?

The twelve States which made the appointment, ſent forward their deputies in due time. I wave all weight of names, but they were ſuch in general as it became the States to appoint. Exceptions, perhaps juſt ones, may have been made to ſome of them; but remember theſe were not alone; they did not even form a majority of the repreſentation of one State; much leſs could they affect the general views of the whole body. I am not acquainted with the ſituation of parties in the other States, but have had too much opportunity with the reſt of the world, of judging of them in Pennſylvania. I acknowledge, that in my mind there might have been more propriety in the appointment from this State. The gentlemen were individually fully competent to the duty. They were ſo collectively. Had ſome of the ſame men reſided in the weſtern counties, it would have been more ſatisfactory. In point of good policy it ſhould have been ſo. While candor forbids us to withhold theſe obſervations, the public good requires that even the juſt offence it may have given, ſhould not interfere with a plan ſincerely intended to promote the happineſs of our country. I wiſh to avoid offence, but I beg to be indulged in remarking, that the appointment of our deputies to the Convention, from the city and county of Philadelphia, does not appear to have made any painful impreſſions on the People of the Weſtern counties. Perhaps it is becauſe they have not obſerved the fact. If that is the caſe, it cannot be of importance to the tranquility of the State, nor to the great buſineſs before us. I confeſs my wiſhes were ſtrongly in favour of ſome Weſtern deputies, though it ſeems the ſeceding members themſelves propoſed but one. I believe, however, many perſons wiſhed at the time, he had been appointed. Yet the people of that part of the State have not complained, and it was the act of a real majority. Beſides, I feel too independent a freeman to endure the idea, that any one man could be indiſpenſibly neceſſary in that appointment.——The truth is, that ſome members of the Pennſylvania Aſſembly after ſeceding from their brethren, have brought the idea for the firſt time, at an ill-judged moment, before the public. They have ſuggeſted it to their conſtituents, not their conſtituents to them. Reflect diſpaſſionately on theſe circumſtances, my Pennſylvania readers. I mean not offenſive cenſure, which I deſpiſe and condemn. The ſeceding members, I ſay, ſuggeſted the idea of offence at the appointment of our deputies, after an unlucky quarrel had taken place. Does it not ſeem to be a little in the way of apology? When theſe gentlemen ſay they were apprehenſive of the conſequences of the appointment, I can believe they ſpoke truly—but when they bring it forward to the people, only after their own ſeceſſion from the houſe, to the people who have never complained of it; does it not rather appear, that the jealouſy they entertained in their own minds, has, by too much brooding over it, grown to a ſore, & that their letting it out now, is rather a proof of their own feelings, than of any diſcontent among the people. Is it conſiſtent with the delicacy of one of thoſe gentlemen, that he ſhould ſign this ſentiment among the ſixteen, when he was himſelf a candidate. It were to be wiſhed his name at leaſt had not been there, or that the obſervation in their addreſs had been omitted. Is it conſiſtent with propriety, that another gentleman ſhould vote for calling the Convention, and afterwards ſecede from his brethren. How much more becoming the honor of their private characters, and the dignity of their public offices, was the conduct of the two gentlemen who were brought to the houſe by the Speakers order, in entering freely into the debates that enſued. Though they have not accuſtomed themſelves to ſpeak often, they, on this occaſion, propoſed matters for the good of their conſtituents, (which they could not have done if abſent) and their motions were adopted.

The addreſs carries an idea that the new fœderal conſtitution has been only approved by what is called the republican party. I would chearfully reſt the diſproving this inſinuation upon any Man of honor in the conſtitutional party. Dr. Franklin and Mr. Ingerſol, who aſſiſted to frame, and afterwards ſigned the act of the convention, never oppoſed our ſtate conſtitution. Meſſrs. Will, Foulke, G. Heiſter, Kreemer, J. Heiſter, Davis, Trexler, Burkhalter, and Antis, and other members of the houſe, who voted for the call of a ſtate convention, are ſurely not republicans; and among the four thouſand petitioners for the adoption of the new fœderal government, will be found many of the moſt zealous, active and reſpectable friends of the conſtitution of this commonwealth.—This I aſſert as an incontrovertible fact, of which every individual of the ſixteen ſeceding gentlemen was fully poſſeſſed, for the petitions, with a very great number of the names of ſuch perſons, were preſented to the houſe on Monday, Wedneſday and Thurſday. The ſeceſſion took place on Friday afternoon, and was repeated on Saturday morning. The good men of Pennſylvania will ſatisfy themſelves whether their ſixteen repreſentatives have given this wrong idea from want of temper or from want of virtue—it was indeed unguarded to paſs upon their conſtituents a ſuggeſtion that the friends of the new fœderal government were all of them enemies to the conſtitution of the ſtate of Pennſylvania, and had all of them deſtructive deſigns on the ſtate frame of government. Before I quit this point let me add one piece of information, which is, that the gentleman alluded to in a preceding paragraph, is the only unſucceſsful candidate for a ſeat in the convention who has not declared for the adoption of the fœderal conſtitution.

But to return.——The twelve ſtates which concurred ſent forward their deputies in due time. I ſhall not attempt, as I have already ſaid, to paſs upon your underſtandings the weight of names—determine that matter for yourſelves Suffer me to remark only, that the faithful, diſintereſted and invaluable ſervices of WASHINGTON—the inceſſant, faithful and eſſential ſervices of FRANKLIN might have ſaved them from the contemptuous inſinuations of a late writer. Were ſuch compoſitions applauded, it might indeed be ſaid "that republics are ungrateful."

The conſtitution which theſe gentlemen have offered to their fellow citizens has been conſidered with manly freedom, ſuch I am ſure as they wiſhed it to meet. If in ſome caſes it has been carried further, it is a proof at once of our liberty, and of the paſſions which we know to prevail among men; and as every cauſe is open to the friendſhip and enmity of bad men, there can be no doubt but that very wicked and dangerous motives influence ſome, both among the friends and enemies of the new frame of government. Leaving all obſervations upon ſuch points, in treating which even truth will appear uncertain, and candor may heat and inflame, I recommend to all men of pure honeſt intentions the utmoſt moderation and forbearance. The object before us is indeed great and intereſting. We are to arrange affairs eſſential to our own happineſs, and highly important to the preſent and future people of the earth. Tho' it muſt be admitted that too much and too bitter contention has appeared in our affairs, yet it is no leſs true that the active and ſpeculative friends of liberty, throughout the world, conſider us at this day as the enlightened and ſincere ſupporters of their cauſe, and look to us for examples which the one expects to approve, the other to imitate. Let us refrain then from theſe little, mean, bitter invectives: let us ſuppreſs thoſe contemptable remains of narrow party ſpirit, and conſider our critical ſituation with decency and candor, remembering that the true ſons of Liberty are brothers to each other.

Much obſervation has been made in regard to the omiſſion of a bill of rights in the new frame of government. Such remarks, I humbly conceive, ariſe from a great inadvertency in taking up the ſubject. When the people of theſe ſtates diſſolved their connection with the crown of Great Britain, by the declaration of independence, they found themſelves, as to government, in a ſtate of nature: yet they were very ſenſible of the bleſſings of civil ſociety. On a recommendation of Congreſs, who were then poſſeſſed of no authority, the inhabitants of each colony reſpectively, formed a compact for themſelves, which compacts are our ſtate conſtitutions. Theſe were original agreements among individuals, before actually in a ſtate of nature. In theſe conſtitutions a bill of rights (that is a declaration of the unaliened rights of each individual) was proper, and indiſpenſibly neceſſary. When the ſeveral ſtates were thus formed into thirteen ſeparate and independent ſovereignties, Congreſs, who managed their general affairs, and their reſpective legiſlatures thought it proper (and it was ſurely abſolutely neceſſary) that a confederation ſhould be prepared and executed. The meaſure was accordingly adopted; and here let us obſerve this was a compact among thirteen independent ſtates of the nature of a perpetual treaty. It was acceded to by the ſeveral ſtates as ſovereign. No individuals were parties to it. No rights of individuals could therefore be declared in it. The rights of contracting parties (the thirteen ſtates) were declared Theſe rights remain inviolate. No bill of the rights of the freemen of the union was thought of, nor could be introduced. No complaint was made of the want it. for it was a matter foreign from the nature of the compact. In articles of agreement among a number of people forming a civil ſociety, a bill of the rights of individuals comes in of courſe, and is indiſpenſibly neceſſary. In articles of agreement among a number of independent ſtates, entering into an union, a bill of the rights of individuals is excluded of courſe. As in the old confederation or compact among the thirteen independent ſovereignties of America, no bill of rights of individuals could be or was introduced: ſo in the propoſed compact among the ſame thirteen independent ſovereignties, no bill of the rights of individuals has been or could be introduced. This would be to annihilate our ſtates conſtitutions, by rendering them unneceſſary. The liberty of the preſs, from an honeſt republican jealouſy, which I highly applaud, has alſo been a ſubject of obſervation; but the right of writing for publication, and of printing, publiſhing and ſelling, what may be written are perſonal rights, are part of the rights of individuals. Thus we ſee when attempts have been made to reſtrain them in any country, the individuals concerned have only been, or indeed could be the objects of attention. They are the rights of the people in the ſtates, and can only be exerciſed by them. They are not the rights of the thirteen independent ſovereignties, therefore could not enter into either the old or new compact among them. Every conſtitution in the union guards the liberty of the preſs. It has alſo become a part of the common law of the land. But who is to deſtroy it? Not the people at large, for it is their moſt invaluable privilege—the palladium of their happineſs——Not the ſtate legiſlatures, for their reſpective conſtitutions forbid them to infringe it. Not the fœderal government, for they have never had it transferred into their hands. It remains amongſt thoſe rights not conveyed to them. But who are the fœderal government, that they ſhould take away the freedom of the preſs, was it not out of their reach? Are they not the temporary reſponſible ſervants of the people? How then, my countrymen, is this favorite ineſtimable privilege in danger? It cannot be affected. It is underſtood by all men that it is never to be touched. It is guarded by inſurmountable barriers, as you have already ſeen; and woe betide—the heavieſt woe will betide the ſacrilegious hand that ſhall attempt to remove them.

A Citizen of Pennſylvania.

Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, July 11.

THE following great improvements are in projection at the court of St Peterſburgh:—1. To unite the Caſpian to the rivers Sudkilma and Nordkilma. This canal will be 20 werſts in length, and will have two ſluices. A Mr. Van Suchtelen has the job, and his eſtimate of expences amount to near half a million of rubles. 2. To unite the Baltic to the Caſpian Sea by the rivers Whitgra and Koſcha. The canal of junction will be 60 werſts in length, and will have above 40 ſluices; the expence of which muſt be very great. Major Wilt, the engineer, has taken this upon him. 3. To unite the Baltic and the Black Sea, by a double canal traverſing White Ruſſia, and which opens a communication between Cherſon, Peterſburgh and Riga. This immenſe work will be 200 werſts in length, and will coſt from nine to ten millions of roubles.

The Breſt fleet—the Toulon ſquadron—and the recruits in France, do not all, in our opinion, amount to a probability of a war, in which we ſhall be dangerouſly concerned. If we are little prepared for ſuch a change of affairs, it cannot be denied that the French are ſtill leſs ſo—and if we may credit authority from Paris, which is ſomething more than mere report, there is not an idea of war with England prevailing in the cabinet of Verſailles. Their aims are towards the Eaſt-Indies—they have long wiſhed to have a ſecure footing, and the Dutch ſpice iſlands will amply repay them for what ſervices this great and good ally may perform in favor of the diſ-united ſtates.

Poor Lord George!—cannot find a reſting place for the ſoles of his feet——even his good friends the Dutch have behaved uncivilly to him—the Jews refuſe him circumciſion, and he muſt, at length, try his old correſpondents the Turks. They may make him keeper of the Seraglio——when properly qualified!

The invention of the ſtock jobbers ſeems to be exhauſted. Why don't they maſſacre the Princeſs of Orange; or engage the French and Ruſſian armies? It would be eaſy enough to do ſo; and as ſuch events are amuſing, it is a pitty John Bull ſhould not be indulged.

July 13. Let the republican ſpirits of Great Britain look to the inteſtine feuds, and we may ſay domeſtic broils of the Hollanders; let them look to the happy tranquility and ſettled moderation of the government here, and then praiſe republicaniſm if they can.

July 21. Yeſterday goods to the amount of ten thouſand pounds were entered at the cuſtom-houſe for France, the principal part was earthen-ware, that article being very ſcare in that country.

Auguſt 3. Yeſterday the duke of York arrived in town from Germany. His royal highneſs went immediately to the ſecretary of ſtate's office at Whitehall. It is ſaid, that he brings account that the Pruſſians are actually marched to the aſſiſtance of the ſtadtholder.

Extract of a letter from the Hague, July 27.

'There are new commotions at Amſterdam: one of the frigates belonging to that admiralty, has brought in a ſloop having the Orange flag, whoſe whole crew are ſent to priſon, and they talk of puniſhing the officers as pirates, with death. This has made a freſh ferment, and the friends of the Orangites again erect their fallen creſts.'

A letter from Neufs ſays, 'The king of Pruſſia has ordered 50,000 men to march into Holland, to ſupport the ſtadtholder's cauſe. There will be a camp near Vedloo, and another at Zutphen. The rendezvous for the artillery horſe was at Hogſtrat. They were furniſhed by the province of Moers, and proceeded on the 11th ultimo, at break of day, to Weſſel.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Peterſburgh, Virginia, to his correſpondent at Edinburgh, dated June 3, brought by the Blandford.

'In February laſt I ſent you a commiſſion for a few articles. I would now wiſh you to decline ſhipping them, if attended with no inconvenience to you, as from the preſent ſituation of this country (occaſioned by the weak laws and unſettled government) I do not think I would be juſtifiable in entering into any new engagements. At the convention now met at Philadelphia, which is compoſed of delegates appointed by the different ſtates, in order to reviſe the fœderal conſtitution, it is expected that they will adopt ſuch meaſures as will enable Congreſs to act with ſtability, and give force and permanency to their laws. At preſent they are deſtitute of every power, and only poſſeſs the name. I hope they will place power ſomewhere, for they are now as a great body without a head.'

A letter from Smyrna, dated May 3, ſays, 'For ſome days paſt we have been buſy enliſting 600 Janiſſaries, which has given room to a number of diſorders and inſolences which theſe people are guilty of every day: they go ſo far even as to attack every one they meet in the open ſtreets without diſtinction. No trouble is taken to ſet them to rights, although many perſons, and amongſt others a French merchant, have been killed, and many wounded by theſe wretches. All the foreign conſuls have ſent complaints of it to Conſtantinople, and they flatter themſelves the Porte will not delay uſing ſome method to re-eſtabliſh good order and repoſe.'

We are credibly told, that the French court have come perfectly into agreement with us, on the ſteps which ſhall be purſued on the preſent diviſions in Holland; in conſequence of which ſtocks roſe yeſterday two & half per cent. conſols being down early in the day to 70 and a half, with dividend, and ended at 73.

Auguſt 10. By a gentleman who left Liſle on Tueſday laſt, we are aſſured, that all the horſes and carriages in that neighbourhood are buſily employed in the tranſport of cannon and ammunition; and that an expreſs arrived there a few hours before he left it, notifying, that orders had been iſſued for the march of 60,000 troops toward Holland.

Mr. Grenville's abilities demand employment, and in Holland he will have room for them all. Perhaps as that country may ſoon be the ſeat of war—even with all the talents of Sir James Harris, ſomewhat additional may not be found uſeleſs.

The troops of the ſtadtholder, it is ſaid, have to thank this country for preſent pay and good quarters. The ſum to the amount of one hundred and fifty thouſand pounds.

A whole Dutch family have been reduced to beggary in a few minutes, by the rage of a civil war. A prodigious quantity of ſmall maſſes of gold and ſilver, for the purpoſe of making touch needles, were ſeized by the troops of the ſtates, belonging to this family, attached to Orange cauſe. And a very ingenious young man, in his hurry of eſcaping from the enemy, loſt a tapis electricus, or ſtone gathered at Ceylon, which had the power of attracting and repelling ſmall light bodies; which ſo affected him that he ſhot himſelf!

Extract of a letter from Paris, July 13.

"This city was ſcarce ever ſo thin of inhabitants as at preſent. The court are gone to Verſailles, and are expected afterwards to remove for ſome time to Marli. Our principal nobility are all abſent; ſome at Spa, many in England. The Engliſh ambaſſador takes leave this day, he is going to London for a few weeks. Baron D'Adhemer is at his country ſeat in the Guienne, and returns to England in October."

General Haldimand is to be the ſucceſſor to general Elliott, now lord Heathfield, and the new governor of Gibraltar. General O'Hara will be lieutenant governor in the room of general Boyd, who does not return to that fortreſs, having received the king's permiſſion to retire.

The Veſtal frigate, of 28 guns, which is now fitting for ſea at Deptford yard, is ordered for the Mediterranean ſtation, and to carry over Sir Frederick Haldimand to his government of Gibraltar, to which he was appointed on Monday laſt.

A penſion is in agitation to be ſettled on lord Heathfield, for his ſervices in the defence of that important fortreſs, Gibraltar, during four ſieges. This is to be recommended to parliament by the king next ſeſſion.

Extract of a letter from Conſtantinople, July 8.

'His royal highneſs the Sultan, for the firſt time, has this day gone over the whole arſenal here; among others he went on board the San Sophia Auguſte, a new ſhip of 86 guns, building on the ſtocks. The Happy Preſage, of 74 guns, launched lately, is now fitting for ſea; a number of French officers are appointed on board by the intereſt of the ambaſſador of that nation.'

Among the new meaſures intended to be brought forward in the courſe of the enſuing ſeſſions in the Iriſh parliament, is a bill to repeal the incapacities laid upon Roman Catholics from holding commiſſions in the navy and army, and all thoſe which preclude them from being called to the bar. Indeed it would be extraordinary if men who fight well in foreign ſervices, and have always been found true to their employers, ſhould not act with fidelity when fighting for their native country.

No order whatever has been iſſued from the admiralty to the maſters, ſurgeons, or any other officers on the half pay liſt of the navy, to hold themſelves in readineſs for ſervice; on the contrary, no ſooner is a ſhip commiſſioned than the applications to the board for commiſſions and warrants are more numerous than can be attended to. The ſtanding order of the board to take the names as they appear on the liſts, which is moſt rigidly obſerved, prevents all complaints of preference.

The depredations committed on the perſons and property of people in open day, in and near about this metropolis, by thieves and robbers, are become very alarming, as ſcarce a day paſſes without inſtances of mal-practices of this kind; but none more daring has happened of late than the following circumſtance:——A few days ago, as a lady who lives in Clerkenwell was dreſſing herſelf at noon, and having put on a new cap, and laid her ſilk gown, hoop and petticoat, upon the bed, ready to put on, ſhe ſtept down ſtairs to a next door neighbour's, to take her neighbour's opinion on the faſhion of her new cap, leaving the door open. A thief obſerving the door in that ſituation, had the audacity to ſlip up ſtairs, and ſteal the gown, petticoat, and hoop, and made off with them without moleſtation. Fortunately, and what is ſingularly ſurprizing, a gold watch hung at the bed's head, and two gold rings lay on the toilet, which eſcaped his obſervation; but the thief in his way through the room, willing to take ſome other trifles beſides the articles of wearing apparel, took a ſmall ſnuff box, which he expected, no doubt, contained ſomething of value, and which were indeed to the lady of more value, than all the wearing apparel, the box containing ſomething of more conſequence than the wearing apparel, no leſs than five of the lady's teeth, which had been extracted to cure the tooth ach, and which ſhe ſaved with the intention of having depoſited in her coffin at her death. Bad times indeed, when we cannot even prevent thieves from ſtealing the teeth out of our heads!

The friends to oppoſition, like Sempronius the traitor, bellow out for war! but mark their reaſon: a war, ſay theſe deſperadoes, would produce a change in the miniſtry—Unthinking men! Is Lord North's party fit to conduct a war? The Americans say yes;—and as to Mr Fox's abilities; the Americans will also say yes, for between North and Fox this country lost America.

DUBLIN, August 3.

On Sunday last Mr. Duff, engraver, was seized with an apoplectic fit on the road in the outlets, and instantly fell down dead from his horse.—This ingenious artist was an engraver, and had been from his infancy deaf; but was not only a good engraver, but also an excellent proficient in electricity, and other branches of natural philosophy. His mode of receiving intelligence was by the communication of any friend's moving his fingers on the table or the wall, in the manner of writing, which he understood, though done in the most rapid manner.

A Flemish engineer who has lately made a tour on the northern coast of this kingdom, offers to give security, that for the sum of 25,000l. he will construct a safe, commodious, and permanent harbour at Ballycastle, capable of containing 50 large colliers at a time.

We are informed that the course of the river Dodder will be turned, so as to gain several hundred acres from the sea, at a moderate expence, agreeable to a plan which has been approved of, and will shortly be proceeded upon; by which means the navigation of our harbour will be rendered more secure, eventually deepening the bed of the Liffey, by a proper embankment.

AMERICA.

KINGSTON, August 29.

The following melancholy accident happened on Saturday last at New Works estate, in the parish of St. Mary, the property of Doctor Campbell: Mr. Duncan Campbell, the Doctor's brother, being assisting in driving a gudgeon into the mill wheel, and having hold of a handspike, one end of which rested on his shoulder, in order to guide the roller, the negroes who were employed in working the battering-gudgeon, as it is called, consisting of several hundred weight, through inadvertency missed their stroke at the head of the mill-gudgeon, and struck the handspike, by which Mr. Campbell was instantaneously killed; his head and shoulders being dashed entirely to pieces, in a most shocking manner.

A correspondent informs the officers of the police, that about the middle of Prince street, a Gambling-house, in a superior stile to the common ones, is nightly kept open by a Gentleman having a foreign accent, well known in this town, and formerly well respected, and who, within these seven years past possessed a property in Liguanea. The mode of obtaining admission into this seminary of learning and morality is thus—pass through the folding blinds or wicker next the street, then through the house, and across the yard to the place which the noise occasioned by the instruments of instruction being put in motion will direct you, there gently tap at the door, and observe the watch-word, "Who's there?" "A friend." On this you gain ready admission, and to your great comfort will find a side-table well covered with a cold collation and plenty of liquors to refresh you during the intervals of study.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.

A new æra will commence, and this country will be in existence, but from the moment when the plan of government submitted to the people shall be generally adopted. The distinctions of state councils will be lost in the stronger ties by which the citizens of America will be connected to one another. As yet, every thing looks fair, and the voice of opposition is scarcely heard in whispers; may it then perish! and may peace, unanimity and happiness become perpetual throughout America!

The partiality of the English in favour of the Stadtholderian party, in Holland, induces very unfavourable representations respecting the Dutch patriots—these are copied into the American papers, much to the prejudice of the latter. From better authority than that of the British newswriters, we can inform, that the conduct of the Dutch patriots has been firm, consistent and determined, in the pursuit of their great object, the salvation of the liberties of their country. Of their firmness we have the following instance—The King of Prussia, by his minister, lately demanded satisfaction for the obstruction put to the Princess of Orange's journey; the states of Holland and West-Friesland in answer say, that they, as sovereign of the province, always should act for the good of their country, and make no alterations in any of their resolutions, by paying regard to the threats or intreaties of any foreign power whatever.

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.

The following gentlemen are elected for Lancaster county:—

Counsellor——George Ross.

Assembly——Alexander Lowry, Adam Hubley, Joseph Work, James Clemson, Jacob Erb, John Hopkins.

On Friday last, Congress appointed his Excellency Arthur St. Clair, Esq; now President of Congress, to be governor of the Western Territory of the United States, with a salary of one thousand dollars per annum, and to exercise the office of superintendant of Indian affairs and to receive the pay and emoluments of the same, amounting to about eight hundred dollars per annum.

They have also appointed Winthrop Seargeant, Esq; to be secretary to the governor, with a salary of seven hundred and fifty dollars per annum.

A gentleman who writes an essay on the promoting federal sentiments in the United States, makes the following judicious observation——"In all national affairs, and especially in the modern state of political society, money is a great and necessary instrument. The federal government, though frugal, has a considerable expence in time of peace: it must have certain and adequate resources for an eventual war, and for discharging the national debt. No person of any sense can believe that foreign powers will wait for ever——When they cannot even obtain interest for a generous loan, what must they think of national honor, integrity, gratitude! Will they think America worthy of their friendship, or even common civility? Will they again spend their blood and treasure for her independency? In case of war with any formidable power, how will an army be raised and equipped? Will the troops again list for money, of which a month's pay will soon scarcely buy a morning's dram? Will men of honor suffer hunger and cold, bleed and die, for a country that will not do them common justice? While the states are disputing whether they shall grant the federal requisitions or not, an enemy may penetrate into the heart of the country, and cut off some members of the union. In the midst of a debate, whether a few hundred pounds more or less shall be granted, an enemy's grenadiers may step in and say deliver or die: raise immediately so many thousand pounds, or have your city pillaged and burnt? This is plain sense; those who will not comprehend it, are insane, and if nothing else will cure them, had better be bled by their own citizens, than massacred by an enemy. Was I an American, my sword would not sleep in the scabbard, while sordid wretches ruined my country. Is it not horrible, that at this very time the savages riot in blood and destruction, because the federal government cannot support a regiment of troops on the frontiers!

A correspondent observes, that he has read with pleasure a remarkable circumstance in regard to the person of the president in the new Federal Constitution, which is thus expressed by a writer in a late paper—"His person is not so much protected as that of a member of the house of representatives; for he may be proceeded against like any other man in the ordinary course of law." This circumstance has escaped the observation of all our correspondent has conversed with, and shews how many imperceptible (as well as striking) checks are imposed, by the plan of the Convention, on the servants of the people.

From a Providence paper.

There are now living four sisters, viz. Mrs. Briggs, of Berkely, aged 90 years—Mrs. Smith, of Rehoboth, aged 86—Mrs. Peck, of Rehoboth, aged 74—and Mrs. Viall, of Barrington, aged 70 (the daughters of a Mr. Samuel Whiteaker) whose ages together amount to 320 years—none of whom have been disobedient to the Divine command, having each a numerous offspring to perpetuate the memory of a natural mother, and furnish society with sufficient cause to bless those mothers in Israel.

Mess. Dunlap & Claypoole,

Through the channel of your useful paper give me leave to address the public. P. E.

I HAVE followed the sea out of this country since I was fourteen years old; was four times taken by the English, confined in prison, and on board men of war: I have the misfortune at present to be a stranger here, have tried every method but this to get into business, but in vain, having no acquaintance to recommend me. It is very hard, that a man in his prime of life and health should want bread, in such a flourishing city as this is, and that a person capable to take command of a ship should solicit for the lowest station, and could not get it: my character will bear scrutinizing, or examining, in the several places I have failed from, and by the persons that I have commanded vessels for, or sailed in their employ. I would willingly do any kind of business in ever so low station, and by proving me, let merit speak for itself. A line left at the printers' will be esteemed a favor by

Their humble servant,

ON FORTUNE.

ON high, where no hoarse winds or clouds resort,
The hood-wink'd goddess keeps her partial court.
Upon a wheel of amethist she sits,
Gives and resumes, and smiles and frowns by fits.
In this still labyrinth around her lie
Spells, philtres, globes and schemes of palmistry;
A sigil in this hand the gipsy bears,
In t' other a prophetic sieve and shears.
'Tis she that gives (so mighty is her power)
Faith to the Jew, complexion to the Moor.
She is the wretch's wish, the rook's pretence,
Th' sluggard's ease, th' coxcomb's providence.
Souls heav'nly born her faithless boons defy;
The brave has to himself a Deity.

EFFORTS of HEROISM.

WARS carried on for liberty, religion, honour, and in the last defence of country, life, parents, wives and children, have produced such efforts of heroism as will for ever astonish the world.

The Numantines, a people of antient Spain, closely besieged by Scipio Africanus, and denied any terms that brave men could accept, determined to die sword in hand: they made a vigorous sally, in which a great number was slain: the remainder fed upon these. Being disappointed in a desperate attempt to retreat, they strangled their wives out of love: and having made a loud lamentation over their cruel destiny, they set fire to the city, and perished to a man—some by the flames, others by their swords or poison. It is remarkable, that this gallant people drew upon them this destructive war by their fidelity to unfortunate allies.

When the Hollanders were overwhelmed by the unequal power of Lewis XIV. they resolved, in case of extremity, to abandon their country, and go to the new colonies in the East Indies; they had for this purpose embarked their families and best moveables on board of a large fleet, ready to sail at a moment's warning.

Christiern, the tyrant, massacred at one time 200 of the principal Swedes, and among them the father of Gustavus Vasa. To make this hero lay down his arms, he threatened to put his mother to a cruel death. She wrote her son a magnanimous letter, beseeching him not for a moment to slacken his warlike operations, but to think only of Sweden, the common mother; and was immediately ordered to sew, with her own hands, the bag in which she was thrown into the sea.

Among the first German reformers, in the 14th century, was Zisca, a valiant commander.—He desired his partizans to take off his skin when dead, and to make a drum of it, promising them by his last words victory over the Catholics, whenever it was used. The event verified the prophecy—animated by this relique of their admired hero, with zeal for a religion sacred to him and them, they performed wonders, and by enthusiastic bravery often defeated numerous battalions of veterans.

LANDS FOR SALE

IN MARYLAND,

THE subscriber has for sale, all that TRACT of LAND called Beall's Plantation and Bateman's Field (being part of Snowden's Reputation Supported) containing from a late survey 676 and a half acres, situate on the head of South river, Anne Arrundel county, about 3 miles from navigable water, 12 from the city of Annapolis, 28 from Baltimore town, 24 from George town, and about 7 from the inspection Houses of Indian Landing and Queen Anne; is well adapted for corn, wheat, and particularly tobacco.

This Plantation has not been tenanted for 3 years; is a most pleasing and desirable situation, and capable of great improvement at a small expence; there are 259 acres of timber land, a greater part of which is very valuable. The subscriber would prefer disposing of the whole in one lot; but has no objection to making several of it: the timber land is conveniently situated for making such divisions in equal proportions, & there are many pleasant situations for erecting different buildings; it is also well watered—A very good mill stream runs through it, and there is some meadow ground, and much more may be very readily made.

The improvements upon it are, a good dwelling house with three large rooms on each floor, kitchen, quarter, corn house, stables, tobacco house, and two very fine apple orchards, one of which contains 220 trees, together with a number of other valuable fruit trees.

A plan of this estate may be seen at Mr. Vachel Stevens, surveyor, Annapolis, who will shew the premises; also at Mess. William Patterson & Brother's, Baltimore, and further information had. For price, terms, &c. apply to JOHN WADDINGTON.

MOORE-HALL,

THE Estate of the late William Moore, esquire, situate upon the river Schuylkill, in the township of Charles Town, in the county of Chester, distant 23 miles from this city.

The Estate consists of upwards of 600 acres of most excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Mansion House is spacious, convenient and airy; it is situated upon a high and healthy spot, and commands a most delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Grist Mill on the premises, near the Mansion House, on a never-failing stream, called Pickering, running through the estate, and watering a great body of meadow; this stream empties itself into the Schuylkill, in front of the house; it formerly supplied water for a saw mill, which might with much ease, and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Estate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any person inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premises before the day of sale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, esquire, in Arch street, or PETER MILLER, esquire, in Third street. Sept 17 eptf

Foreign Intelligence,

Received by the late Arrivals at New-York, from Europe.

PARIS, July 13.

IT appears very true that M. de Calonne is seriously menaced with the rigour of the law if he cannot justify himself. It is said he must absolutely give an account of what use has been made of fourteen million of livres.

HAGUE, August 3.

Letters from Berlin announce that the reigning duke of Brunswick has accepted the command of the army, which his Prussian majesty has ordered to be assembled in the country of Cleves.

Letters from Brunswick mention, that the Prussian h. ssars had marched past that place, on their way to Cleves, and were followed by fifty horses of the stables of his royal highness.

We learn from Liege, that the camp which was said to be formed at Givet, of a body of French troops, is countermanded. This intelligence is doubted by some people.

BERLIN, July 21.

Since my last, affairs have changed here. After the arrival of many couriers and Estufottes, a council of war was held last Tuesday, on the issue of which orders were sent to the different regiments of infantry and cavalry in the provinces to prepare for marching on the first notice; since many movements have been made here relative to their general departure on the 8th of August. The regiment of Ebens Hussars, has received orders to march by the first of August. And a large convoy of artillery is already sent to Magdebourg.

DU COMTE DE LA MARCK, 27th July.

It is very certain that between 50 and 60 000 Prussian troops are under orders for marching, to be commanded by the duke of Brunswick. The regiments in Westphalia, which formed a body of 18,000 men are commanded by general Gaudi. The cavalry and infantry intended to relieve Holland, are all in motion. A heavy train has been sent from Magdebourg.

UTRECHT, August 1.

One hundred men of the regiment of Sulliard, having deserted from Gueldres, are come hither on their way to Holland, and a great number of other deserters daily arrive from the camp of Zeyst, Friesland and Gueldres; they are going to Overyssel, where the Chevalier Ternan, commands the little provincial army, destined to curb the aristocratics of Gueldres. Another platoon of Sulliards regiment are arrived at Woerden, with their captain. There has not been any other Soobie, since that towards Seoystdayk

We learn from Williamstadt, that the colonel of the second regiment of Waldeck, has acquainted the States of Holland, that all the soldiers of the first battalion have deserted: but that the officers remained firm. The soldiers after committing the greatest excess, tore the colours: Williamstadt, is one of the places of the generality; and we shall see, whether the captain general, or council of state will punish these rebels; but as they augment the army at Zeyst, there is no probability of his doing it.

AMSTERDAM, July 31.

The Burtman of Hardewyk has brought the disagreeable news, that the military have plundered twenty nine patriots houses at that place, and killed several who refused to surrender or declare for the Prince of Orange; and that when he left the place, it appeared the whole town would be destroyed.

The states of Holland have resolved to send word to general Van Ryssel, that if any of the officers or soldiers under his command, were proceeded against, in consequence of the surreptitious resolutions of the States General of the 26th, that he would immediately transmit an account thereof to their noble mightinesses, for their immediate consideration; at the same time declaring that they would take any and all such officers under their special protection, and defend them in every respect against the unconstitutional resolutions of their high mightinesses aforesaid.

ALGIERS, June 18.

The situation of this country is very disagreeable. A number of Christian powers propose to revenge the frequent outrages committed on their ships, and menace the regency with a war which may prove very fatal, as in all appearance they will find no support from the other nations, as their corsairs have for some time past attacked and plundered every vessel they met of every nation. The plague continues its ravages, which in fact encrease, as they use neither preservatives to prevent the disease nor remedy when they are first attacked with it. Two-thirds of the ships of the last armament which sailed, have perished, and the rest have been obliged to come again into port, for want of hands to work the ships and fight. One of our corsairs which had taken a ship belonging to Portugal, and conducted her into Tangiers, has been forced by the emperor of Morocco to restore her, and remain in port 24 hours after the prize sailed from it. The dey was very much displeased with this news, but he has discretion enough to keep his complaints to himself, lest he should bring 60 000 Moors upon him, who are ready to descend from the mountains at the first order of the emperor of Morocco.

LONDON, July 28.

An eminent wine merchant in this city was long afflicted by an asthma, which was brought on by a violent cough. He applied to different gentlemen of the faculty, who prescribed many recipes, which he took, but found not the least benefit from any of them. After passing some years in this melancholy situation, and expending much money, he was advised by an old woman in the country to smoak colts foot, mixed with a little grass-cut. Though his faith in her prescription was not great, he determined to make trial of it; he accordingly smoaked morning and evening, about two pipes, and in a very few days perceived in himself a great change for the better.

Aug. 7 The Dutch mail which arrived yesterday, brought no News papers from Utrecht. The article from Utrecht, that is in the mail, is copied from a Leyden paper This circumstance occasions a suspicion, that the siege of Utrecht has commenced; or at least, that the Prince of Orange's army have cut off the communication between Utrecht and Holland.

In reasoning from past to present events, the analogy often determines the truth of prophecy. The French Court now affect to have countermanded their former orders for a camp at Givet, in Flanders. These assurances are perfectly similar to those they made to Lord Stormont, Mr. Forth, &c. at the beginning of the late American war:—Although at the same time, France was privately supporting the Americans with money and officers. Precisely the same thing she is now doing, with respect to the disputes in Holland. She furnishes the Dutch with money to pay their army, and she furnishes them with officers. In the Dutch account of the skirmish near Utrecht, there are two French officers killed. So early as when the American army besieged General Gage in Boston, there were French officers in the American camp: At the same time, France was assuring us of her pacific disposition; and our King reported these assurances to both Houses of Parliament. The analogy is obvious. These pretended assurances are only made to dupe us.

The States of Holland in consequence of the resolutions taken by the States General to punish all officers and others, who obeyed the orders of Holland, have come to a resolution, which they have signified to the Advocate Fiscal (Attorney General) that if he, or any other person whatever, pays the least regard to, or attempts to enforce the said resolution of their High Mightinesses, they will punish him or them with all possible rigour.

A Dutch civil war will make a greater revolution in trade than any other war in Europe. A war between two nations may in divers instances be beneficial to the individuals of both of them, by captures &c. but in a civil war, the very source of trade is entirely stopped up, and the industry of the people utterly annihilated.

An Ordinance was issued at Bruxelles last week, in the name of the Emperor, forbidding all persons whatever, publishing, either by printing, writing, or speaking any matter, tending to hinder the re-establishment of peace in the Emperor's dominions, under the penalty of 500 florins.

Extract of a letter from Legborn, July 4.

"The plague still continues to rage on every part of the coast of Barbary, so that all communication from hence is stopped; and two armed vessels are stationed to cruize at the mouth of our port to prevent any vessels from those parts coming into this harbour.

"The Algerines have broke the peace with Spain, for they plunder every Spanish ship they meet with. We have just received advice from Tangiers, that the plague has carried off all the Emperor of Morocco's attendants, and that he is obliged to shut himself up in his palace, to escape the disorder."

Extract of a letter from the Hague, Aug. 2.

"Baron de Thulemeyer has had a conference with the Counsellor Pensioner to inform him, That the King of Prussia was by no means satisfied with the answer of the States of Holland; and that his Majesty still insists on having such satisfaction as he before demanded.

"The deputies of the States of Zealand and Friesland, have delivered to their High Mightinesses a resolution of their respective Provinces, declaring against the mediation of the Court of France."

August 10. On Monday night one of the admiralty messengers arrived at commissioner Martin's, at Portsmouth, with an express from the board: and we learn that some more ships are to be put in commission, but not their names, as there is unusual secrecy observed in this department lately.

It was reported yesterday, with apparent confidence, that the king of Prussia had actually put his troops in motion, with a resolution of marching them into Holland. But we rather rely on our own authority, and previous intimations, from our confidential correspondent abroad, viz. that no circumstance was likely to happen, that could alter his majesty's resolution of not marching his troops before the sixth instant, the time fixed for a decisive answer from the rebellious states, and for his majesty's last resolve.

Another dispatch went yesterday to Berlin—and the Hanover regency.

The epistolary correspondence of the princess of Orange, is in the perfection of that kind of writing—she is unquestionably of a great mind, full of enterprize and resource; her alacrity and chearfulness have rather encreased with the present emergencies.

The French remit their military preparations in consequence of the late spirited representations.

The report of a sloop being seized in the in the Zuyder Zee, is pretty well confirmed, with this addition, that the admiralties of Holland and Friesland have ordered their men of war to seize all vessels that they may find in future with such distinguishing marks of being in the stadtholder's interest.

A second remonstrance, of the most spirited nature, has been sent to his highness the prince bishop of Leige, relating to his giving up the person of the minor lord Gormanstown, of the kingdom of Ireland, and it is not doubted but this last missive will have the desired effect.

Wednesday a full board of admiralty was held, when four more frigates were put into commission, the officers appointed to them, and several promotions took place.

Extract of a letter from Dublin, July 20.

"Friday last, a set of Epicurean Virtuosi dined on one of the largest salmons that has appeared for many years in this or any other kingdom. It weighed 52lb. was roasted whole, with 3 dozen of whitings and 6 large mackrel in the belly."

AMERICA.

BOSTON, October 4.

The following is the Substance of the Opinion given by one of the Council, on the Question of granting a pardon to Jason Parmenter—when he observed,

THAT this was a question of great importance, not only because the life of this individual citizen depended upon it, but because if a pardon was granted in this case, the reasons upon which it would be issued, might demand a similar decision in favor of three other persons, under sentence for the same crime, and whose cases had been moved at the board: That Parmenter was convicted of treason; his indictment was in the form commonly used in such offences: it had however been suggested abroad, that he had also been guilty of murder: there was nothing in the record of the process which intimidated this; every indictment found against persons for the late rebellion was in the same form with that against him; but he had, however, examined into the nature of the evidence against him, as far as he had been able, and believed that, if he had been tried for murder, without the idea of his having been engaged in the rebellion, the killing of Walker would have been but manslaughter at most, because there was a recounter between the parties, began by Walker, who discharged his fire-arm at the same instant, or rather before Parmenter discharged his: But if he has been guilty of murder, a pardon of the offence he is under sentence for, is no pardon of that crime.

He observed, that for all measures intended to make a deep impression on the public mind, there is a critical moment: If that is not improved, the effect wished for can never be produced at any subsequent period; and to suppose that his excellency the late governor, and the honorable gentlemen then of the board, postponed the execution of the sentences, that others might finish the work they had began; or that they did it to throw a disagreeable task upon their successors in office which they wished to avoid themselves; or from an idea that an odium would rest upon the man, or men, who should complete by public executions, a system they had raised, but had not firmness to support, would be fixing a very disagreeable imputation on their characters: That it was done from a doubt of the legality of the trials, was not by them suggested: If they acted upon the last mentioned reason, it yet remains in force: To say that it was done "because reprieves had been usual," will by no means do; for this is the first conviction for high treason that has been in the country, and to obtain this, the court was carried up, in a difficult and inclement season for the avowed purpose of making immediate examples.

That the benefit of the act of indemnity extended to all except nine of the untried people concerned in the late rebellion. Amongst those who were indemnified, are many who have been more atrociously guilty, than those who are condemned; it is true that the latter have been apprehended and brought to trial, but this adds nothing to their guilt.

That it was true that a provision is made in the abovementioned act, that the indemnity shall not be construed to extend to persons convicted of crimes, and it is true that no act of that nature could be extended to them; the power of pardoning after conviction, being by the constitution, lodged with your excellency and honors.

Upon these measures having been adopted in the legislature, and it appearing to be the wish of so many thousands of the people to have the unhappy commotions settled without the loss of any more lives, the examples of the best governments were resorted to, and it appeared that other states, and even Britain, whose sanguinary disposition daily gluts the grave with legal consignments, furnished examples of clemency in this case: That thereupon his excellency, with advice of council, respited the execution of the sentences to the 20th instant.

That he did not mean to suggest that the council were unanimous in this point. Some of the gentlemen who advised the late governor to postpone the executions to the 25th of June, as he had been informed, had uniformly urged the present governor against a pardon. That even this measure was adopted in a way that effectually tried the strength of government, for every preparation, in the county of Hampshire at least, was made for a serious execution; but this parade of death was so far from exciting opposition to legal authority, that a gloomy silence and solemn awe, at the power of government, was universally exhibited.

That those who were then in favor of this measure, cannot but consider themselves as under the most solemn obligations now to grant a pardon: for he considered this as a sort of compact, if not on the part of government, at least binding on those counsellors who advised to the measure, that if it appeared by the subsequent conduct of the insurgents that peace and tranquility could be restored without public sanguinary examples, a pardon should be granted.

That the act of indemnity was limited to those alone who should take the oath of allegiance, upon, or before the 12th day of September 1787. We are well assured that all those who were the objects of the act have complied with this requisition.

That the troops were disbanded, the ideas of paper money, and demolition of the courts of justice are so far from being entertained by the people, that they are universally execrated.

That the late unhappy commotions did not fix the character of the people as ungovernable, they arose from an unfortunate concurrence of circumstances, with which all countries, in their turns, have been afflicted, but which, in a free government, have a more dangerous and disagreeable effect; we had but lately resisted a government long established over us.

That the taxes in preceding years, though not heavy when they were granted, upon the sudden exit of money became intolerable; whilst cash was plenty, the people were prodigal of credit, but when it became scarce, the property for which they were indebted would not pay one half of the purchase money stipulated. Lawsuits were multiplied and the legal bills of cost were so augmented by delays at the request of the debtors, that they became oppressive:—Add to this, that there stands ready at such a crisis, a number of sharpers, who will improve the moment of keen distress, to extort from the wretched the small remains of property by excessive usury.

That a pile thus prepared was easily kindled into a flame by Gazette writers, who mistook those burdens which were the necessary price of our independence, and the security of our future freedom, for grievances which demanded redress.

And that it could not be wise and prudent, under our present prospects, and in our present situation, to recall to public view, the ideas of injury to private individuals, indignity to the government, and reproach to our country.

That he was not afraid of raising new commotions by a public execution of the sentences under consideration; the people indeed might murmur, upon an idea that the parade of death was unnecessary at so late an hour. But if he thought there would be any kind of opposition, he should be full for trying the experiment; but as he did not, and could see no necessity of, or public advantage from, the execution of these people, after all sufferings, and at a time when the state has sunk into the arms of peace and tranquility, he was clear in advising his excellency to grant a full pardon to Jason Parmenter.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 9.

Last Sunday morning the company of Grenadiers, and the Light Infantry of Col. Varick's regiment, paraded at the burnt church in the Broad-way, and from thence marched to the Baptist church, where a sermon, adapted to the occasion, was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Gano.

In this discourse the Doctor pointed out the duty of a soldier, together with the dangers and hardships to which he is necessarily exposed while in the discharge of his duty; and concluded with an animated address to the officers and men present, exhorting them to unite the characters of a Christian and Soldier; and be always ready and willing to defend those inestimable liberties, which have been purchased with the loss of so much blood and treasure.

In the ship Governor Clinton, which arrived here yesterday in 13 weeks from St. Petersburgh, came passenger, Mr. John Franklin, merchant, of this city.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 25

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Augusta, to a merchant in this city, Sept. 18.

"In the present situation of affairs I would not wish you to forward any goods, as an Indian war is now thought inevitable.—We cannot help being pleased with the thoughts of your state being broke into the scrape, as the Creeks have been doing considerable mischief on your frontiers, the inhabitants of which are already preparing for their defence. It is expected the state of Franklin, with two Indian nations, viz. the Chickesaws and Choctaws will join Georgia—I expect to be able in a few days to give you further information."

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 4.

The following gentlemen are elected members of the house of delegates in the ensuing general assembly, viz.

For the city of Annapolis, Allen Quynn, and Gabrael Duvall, Esquires.

WILMINGTON, (Delaware) Oct. 10.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Port-au-Prince to his friend in Wilmington.

"If the new administration which is proposed to be introduced into this colony takes place, we must be Frenchmen indeed to submit to it. There is a committee now sitting here on that subject. It is intended to lay a tax of 12 livres on every negro instead of 2 1-2 livres—150 livres on white men instead of 50 which they pay now—50 livres instead of 18 on coffee per 1000lb.—66 livres instead of 54 per 1000lb. on sugar. You may look on this colony as ruined, if these innovations take place."

On Monday last came on at New Castle before the court of Oyer and Terminer, the new trial of Sarah Kirk, for petty-treason, in murdering her husband; when she was found guilty, and condemned to be hanged, agreeable to the law lately passed for altering the punishment of that crime. The following is the return of representatives, &c. for Kent county.

Counsellor.
John Cook
Assembly.
James Raymond
John Gordon
Mark M'Call
Thomas Rodney
Jehu Davis
John Revell
John Vining
Sheriffs.
Ezekiel Anderson
Andrew Barret

We learn from Sussex, that a mob collected at the court-house, on the 1st instant, to prevent the election. The returning officer was obliged to adjourn it for several days. The election however was at last made, but the particulars are not yet come to hand.

Philadelphia, Oct. 13.

We have the pleasure to inform the public, that the men who flew to arms last week in the county of Luzerne, after John Franklin had been apprehended by a state warrant, soon after dispersed; and their leaders have sent letters to government, apologizing for their conduct, and promising to submit to the laws and government in all things. Colonel Pickering's family had been ordered to prepare for a long journey, and they got ready accordingly: but it now appears that this order was given without the knowledge of the person who commanded the party; and that as soon as he heard of it, he gave counter orders. So that excepting the alarm and distress occasioned by the order to remove, they knew not whither, no injury was offered to his family. His property also remains uninjured. The avowed object of their removal was to secure them as hostages for Franklin's release. Government, we learn, will now take effectual measures to preserve the future peace of that county.

A drill of Colonel Morgan's construction is to be seen at Carpenters Hall. This machine has an additional box for sowing of ashes, or other powdered manure, over the grain. This drill is intended for rice; but when they are intended for wheat or rye, they are to be made to sow at eight or thirteen inches apart, and with four or five rows, at the option of the farmer. In ground perfectly clear of stone, the distance of eight or thirteen inches might be preferable, but in stoney ground eleven, twelve or thirteen inches will be necessary. The construction is so simple, that any workman can make the drill, without the manure box, for fifty-two shillings and six pence. In turning at the head land, the driver has only to hold the wheel on the side he turns to, in order to prevent the shedding of the seed in turning, and the driver will have no other difficulty than to keep one wheel on the last furrow; but it will be necessary to have a boy to watch the drill, to see they shed the seed, as sometimes the drill will choak. If the ground be wettish, the driver must then stop, and open the passage with his finger or bit of stick. If the notches are not large enough, any person with a knife, or a chissel, may enlarge them by only scraping them a very little; the box is so contrived to raise or lower, to sow more or less seed at pleasure.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Paris to his friend in Baltimore, dated Aug. 7. 1787.

"The account of the public revenue having been laid before the several boards, it has been found that the interest of the American debt had been very irregularly paid, of which it was impossible for the boards not to make mention. In this delicate juncture, the Marquis de la Fayette gave a very satisfactory account of the solidity of the American debt, saying, no debt contracted by England, France, or any other European power, could be founded on so good a basis; that besides the arguments that ought to be derived from their magnanimous national character, that debt had been settled on immense tracts of the most fruitful lands, which were eagerly sought for, and purchased by crowds of migrators, and were the property of the federal government. He could not therefore suppose there might be the least uncertainty on the minds of the committee respecting the principal of that debt; and it is with great propriety that government had formerly rejected the idea of selling it to a company, under a small loss. But as it might be natural for some to think, that necessity to refit a country from the desolations of war, to give the federal government that perfection which it still may acquire, and every circumstance resulting from the situation of the country after the glorious, happy, but dearly purchased revolution, would make it difficult for the United States to be very punctual for some time to come. He declared, that not the smallest want of punctuality would have taken place, had the selfish views of the farmers-general, and many prejudices about American produce, which experience will destroy, permitted the United States to liberate themselves with those commodities which are paid in gold to other nations. He then spoke of the consent of twelve states to the 5 per cent. that are more than sufficient to fulfil every engagement; of the Convention to be held in Philadelphia; and represented the credit of the United States in the most satisfactory point of view. I hear that the Notables have spoken of the American debt with great delicacy, apologizing for the want of payment: But how can our American brethren reconcile it to their feelings, to be so deficient in punctuality?"

A late London newspaper mentions, that Lord Hood would be appointed to the command of a very formidable fleet, which was equipping with the greatest expedition for the Channel service.

The Royal Danish American Gazette, of the 22d ult. printed at St. Croix, gives an account of a dreadful hurricane which happened at Dominica and Martinique on the 23d of August. A number of vessels at the port of Rosseau, the buildings, trees, canes, plantains, and other produce, particularly on the beach, have suffered exceedingly. Fourteen sail of vessels at Martinique were drove on shore, and immense damage done by land; such as houses blown down, and others untiled; the fences, sheds, &c. all blown to pieces.

Messrs. Dunlap & Claypoole,

Gentlemen,

BY direction of the Society for alleviating the Miseries of Public Prisons, I do myself the pleasure to send you an Extract of a Letter written by Dr. John Coakely Lettsom, of London, to Dr. Benjamin Rush, of this city, and by this gentleman communicated to the society above-named, at their last quarterly meeting. As it contains some further particulars than are generally known, relative to the celebrated Mr. Howard's late visits to the Prisons and Lazarettos in Turkey, France, and Germany, it is not doubted but it will prove an agreeable communication to your Readers, who cannot but feel themselves interested in the history of a man, whose time, and whose attention has been so long and so humanely devoted to the relief of the wretched and indigent in every part of the world.

I am, very sincerely,
Your obedient servant,
J. SWANWICK, Secretary
Oct. 11, 1787. to the Society.

"ON Howard's return from Turkey he refused any public honors, which put a stop to the encrease of the fund under his name; out of 1500l. subscribed, above 500l. have been reclaimed. Of the appropriation of the residue we cannot yet conclude, but my ideas will appear from the Gentleman's Magazine inclosed, in which I have grafted a part of thy letter. Though Howard absolutely refused the public honor, he seemed highly gratified by the spirit of the nation, and truly sensible of the grateful sense of his labours. I was closeted with him three hours soon after his return, and tho' I have introduced to him persons of fashion, title, and respect, he remains immovably fixed against all intreaties to admit of public honor. He has not published any account of his Asiatic tour, as it must be illustrated with at least 13 plates, and he remained here scarcely a month before he set off for Ireland, in which kingdom he is now employed in visiting the prisons, but his papers he informed me were in readiness for the Press. Happily he had duplicates of his remarks, and these were kept in different trunks; with these he travelled safely through different regions, till he arrived in Bishop's-gate-street, London; and just as he got out of the stage to take a hackney coach, into which he was removing his trunks, one was stolen, and has never since been recovered: Besides a duplicate of his travels, it contained 25 guineas and a gold watch. A friend of mine who visited Newgate the next day, was told by a convict, (such intelligence and communications have they) that the papers were all burnt. Of the lazaretto at Marseilles, he had no duplicates, and luckily the drawings were in the preserved trunk. Howard told me he valued them so highly, that had they been stolen, he would have returned to Marseilles to acquire new ones.—To enter this place is forbidden to strangers, and it was by a singular stratagem that he got in nine days successively, without being discovered. Having heard at Marseilles, that an English Protestant was confined in a prison at Lyons, into which the intrusion of a stranger was always punished with confinement to the gallies for life; the difficulty of access only stimulated the enthusiasm of Howard. He learned as well as he could, the different turnings and windings that led to the prisoner he more particularly wished to visit. Howard is a little man of extenuated features, who might pass for a Frenchman: He dressed himself like a Frenchman, with his hat under his arm, and passed hastily by 24 officers, and entered the very apartment he wished to see, without suspicion: He disclosed the secret to an English minister at Lyons, who advised his immediate departure, as he would inevitably be discovered if he remained at Lyons all night: He therefore departed hastily, and got to Nice.

"When he arrived at Paris it was almost eleven o'clock at night, he had concluded to depart at three in the morning by the Brussels stage, and to the inn he sent his baggage, and hoping to get an hour or two's sleep, he went to bed. He had scarcely fallen asleep, before his room door was forced open, and in stalked a formal dressed man, preceded by a servant bearing two lighted candles, and solemnly interrogated in French to this purpose:—'Are you John Howard?' I am, replied the Englishman. 'Did you travel with such a person?' I do not know any thing of him, said Howard. The question was again repeated, and the same reply, (but with some warmth) was given to it. The personage left the candles on a table in the room, and departed; immediately Howard dressed himself and stole to the Lyons hotel; he heard of two messengers in pursuit of him, but he arrived at Brussels undiscovered.

"At Vienna he purposed to remain two days, but the Emperor Joseph, hearing of his arrival, desired to see him; but as he had found his prisons upon a bad plan, and badly conducted by persons in high trust, Howard evaded an interview at first; but Joseph sending him a message that he should chuse his own hour for an interview, the Englishman consented to the Emperor's request. The moment Howard's name was announced, he quitted his secretaries, and retired with him into a little room, in which there was neither picture nor looking-glass. Here Joseph received a man who never bent his knee to, nor kissed the hand of any Monarch; here he heard truths that astonished him, and often did he seize hold of Howard's hand with inexpressible satisfaction and approbation. 'You have prisoners,' said Howard, 'who have been confined in dungeons without seeing day-light for 20 months, who have not yet had a trial, and should they be found innocent, your Majesty has it not in your power to make a compensation for the violated rights of humanity." To the honor of this great Prince, let it be remembered, that alterations were made in the prisons before Howard's departure."

A LAPLAND SONG.

THE snows are dissolving on Torne's rude side,
And the ice of Lulhea flows down the dark tide!
Thy dark streams, O Lulhea! flow freely away,
And the snow-drop unfolds her pale beauties to day.

Remote, the keen terrors of winter retire,
Where the north's dancing streamers relinquish their fire;
Where the sun's genial beams swell the bud on the tree,
And Enna chaunts forth her wild warblings with glee.

The rein-deer unharness'd in freedom shall play,
And safely o'er Oden's steep precipice stray;
The wolf to the forests' recesses shall fly,
And howl to the moon, as she glides thro' the sky.

Then haste, my fair Lhea! ah! haste to the grove!
And pass the sweet season in rapture and love;
In youth let our bosoms with extacy glow,
For the winter of life ne'er a transport can know.

ANECDOTE.

AN anecdote has been related of a celebrated parliamentary speaker in Ireland, who has a seat upon the Bench of Bishops—which, though it displays his attachment to politics—impresses no favourable idea of his attention to religion. His lordship is a warm and animated speaker—and lately in a sermon which he preached to a very attentive and respectable congregation—more than once when he meant to address his audience in the usual strain of sermonizing—brethren—he by some unaccountable absence substituted the words—and my LORDS—I hope your LORDSHIPS are convinced, &c.—The effect this lapsus linguæ had upon the hearers may easily be conceived—one looked upon another—but a few unknown gentlemen happened to be in a pew—they were suspected to be noblemen—his lordship came off with eclat, and he was thought to have given a lesson of politeness as well as of edification, by complimenting the strangers!

MOORE-HALL,

THE Estate of the late William Moore, esquire, situate upon the river Schuylkill, in the township of Charles-Town, in the county of Chester, distant 23 miles from this city.

The Estate consists of upwards of 600 acres of most excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Mansion House is spacious, convenient and airy; it is situated upon a high and healthy spot, and commands a most delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Grist-Mill on the premises, near the Mansion House, on a never-failing stream, called Pickering, running through the estate, and watering a great body of meadow; this stream empties itself into the Schuylkill, in front of the house; it formerly supplied water for a saw mill, which might with much ease, and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Estate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any person inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premises before the day of sale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, esquire, in Arch street, or PETER MILLER, esquire, in Third street. Sept 17 eptf

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be exposed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thursday the 29th of November next, at the Court-House in Harford county, state of Mryland,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

Those who wish to view the land, on application to Mess. Ashton and Waters, the present tenants, will be shewn it. Possession will be given the 1st of January, if required. The title good and free of all incumbrances. The terms will be easy to the purchaser, and will be made known on the day of sale, by Wm. WEST.

Foreign Intelligence,

Received by Captain Davis, arrived at Boston after a short passage from London——The Birmingham. Hathorn, from Bristol, and late arrivals at New-York, from London.

MIDDLEBURGH, July 20.

THE states of this province (Zealand) have published an edict for the better security of the inhabitants, as well as for other good and substantial reasons, which forbids, under the severest penalties; any burgesses or soldiers from travelling armed in any part of the province, without the express permission of the states, or a patent from his highness the Prince of Orange, as captain general of the province. The edict also prohibits the transporting of any cannon, arms, or ammunition of any kind, without permission from the college of admiralty resident here, under pain of confiscation; and that the college may be the sooner able to carry this edict into effect, their noble powers have ordered several armed vessels to be equipped, as guards upon the ports and rivers.

PARIS, July 31.

England must have explained herself to our court, for only six ships are armed at Brest, and a great number of the workmen have been sent away. Our squadron of evolution have received orders in the mean time to keep at sea; we are therefore safe on that part; it is towards the land that the storm seems to be gathering. If it is true that the king of Prussia has assembled 40 battalions near Wesel, and that the emperor has demand a passage for the troops he sends into Flanders, we must take care to guard our frontiers.

The Queen has assented to, and signed the reforms in her houshold, which amount to a million; of which there are 50,000 livres in eatables, 20,000 livres in her mews, &c.

An order has been sent to Brest for equipping 3 more ships of the line; the squadron is to be ready on the 10th of August. A vessel is equipping here, with 9 months provisions for the East Indies.

HAGUE, July 19.

The States of Gueldres having no more money, have ordered to be distributed to peasants, the arms taken from the brave burghers of their cities —— The States of Zealand have proposed to the States General to break the union with Holland, and to hold no longer the assembly at the Hague. The States of Amersfort have demanded of the Generality, to arm five ships of 50 guns each, furnished with letters of marque from the Captain General, to be sent to the Zuider Zee.

UTRECHT, July 25.

Means have been found to disperse in the camp, small printed bills, containing the promise made by the State of Holland, to give six ducats to every soldier who shall return to the colours of their Noble and High Mightinesses.

Aug. 5. The States of this province assembled here, have resolved to conform themselves to the proposal of the province of Holland, respecting the mediation.

A resolution was entered into by the armed corps in the provincial assembly held at Leyden last week, for forming a camp of 600 men, drawn out of the free corps, between Woerden and Bodegraven; to be provided with field pieces. This body is not to remain in one spot, but to range wherever they will be necessary for appeasing sedition in the province of Holland.

BERLIN, July 29.

The court of Vienna has suddenly renewed a correspondence with our court, which appears very serious; Prince Roipigliesi, chamberlain to the emperor, arrived here within this fortnight; he has been at Poland, and was received by the king with great distinction. Mr. de Sonnetels, counsellor of state to the emperor, has also arrived here within these few days. The arrival and departure of couriers, particularly within this week, has been extraordinary. On the breaking up of a council of war, marching orders have been sent to several regiments. The field marshal duke of Brunswick is appointed to command the army destined for the duchy of Cleves; this army amounts to but 20,000 men, and it is remarked that it is proportioned to that which France is assembling at Givet.

CADIZ, July 29.

We learn at this instant, that the city of Mexico has just been totally destroyed by an earthquake, which lasted ten minutes, and that the aqueduct and reservoirs being dried up, the inhabitants who have escaped the disaster suffer the greatest scarcity of water.

VIENNA, July 24.

We are perfectly ignorant of the state of affairs in the Belgic Provinces. His majesty keeps himself confined to his cabinet, which is composed but of a few privy counsellors at Augarten, where all dispatches are brought to him. The troops on their march, it is said, have received a countermand; the intended augmentation will not take place, and we flatter ourselves this unhappy affair will be reconciled. The Flemings, it is hoped, will give up some important points, especially in the reform of the tribunals. His majesty's intentions are good, but the subjects of the hereditary countries think the means adopted are prejudicial to their ancient constitutions. The present rumour is, that the troops having been countermanded, are to encamp where they are for the present. Two Prussian generals have been presented to the emperor. This phœnomenon gives room for much conjecture.

July 28. On the 23d and 24th at night, a numerous train of artillery, began marching for the low countries, under convoy of 600 men drawn from the corps of cannoneers. The part of our garrison destined for the same place has likewise received fresh orders to march on the 3d of next month.

LONDON, July 28.

In a print of yesterday it is stated, that Mr. Pitt strenuously opposes every idea of a war. If this be a fact, it proves him to be, what all good men think him, the sincere friend of his country.

Just recovering from the distresses caused by the last war, to be involved in another would be a calamity too grievous to be endured. The reviving commerce and credit of the nation would be instantly sacrificed, and the people would inevitably sink under the public burthens necessary to be imposed.

Governor Donelland, who died at his lodgings in River's street a few days ago, was a gallant veteran officer, who distinguished himself in 2 Continental wars. He was at the battle of Fontenoy, and the only officer who escaped with life in the division which he belonged to; and though wounded in ten different parts of his body, he gallantly brought off the colours of the corps, which were almost shot to rags.

A gentleman on his travels writes thus from Naples to his friend in London:—' I never had a good opinion of the English mode of boxing till I came to Italy, but I now find it is a laudable and innocent fashion; for men must have some kind of vent for their indignation, some salve for their honour, and it is happy when the worst thing a man does in his wrath is the giving a slap on the face, or a punch in the stomach, to the offending party. Here angry men immediately have recourse to the knife, and stab in an instant. It is amazing how many assassinations there are in Italy, and how little they are noticed, and almost all of them, the effects of quarrels. Now none of those assassinations would take place, were the good English mode of boxing introduced amongst them. The late Monsr. de Voltaire vindicated the English nation in this particular, and has often declared that they shewed a species of honour not known in any other part of the world; for, says this eminent French writer, if two fellows meet in the streets of London, and in consequence of a quarrel one throws the other down, will not the conqueror suffer him to rise, and come to a second attack, scorning to take any base advantage of him? And if any unfair cruelty was attempted by a successful adversary, the spectators would fly to the relief of the distressed combatant, and place him on his legs again.'

Extract of a letter from Bengal.

' Sharokh Mirza, he son of the famous conqueror, Nadir Shah, who in the beginning of this century, extended his conquest to the centre of Hindostan, was succeeded by his eldest son, who now sits on the Musnud: and who, in conformity to the inhuman policy which prevails in the East, upon his accession to the throne, confined his youngest brother in the city of Mushhad al Muccudus. The young Prince has, however, found means to escape from his confinement; and resorting to Cabul, has applied for a reinforcement of troops, and a supply of money from Timur, who has promised to supply him with both, in a manner sufficiently ample for him to take the field against his brother.

' These countries exhausted by long wars and depopulated by a recent famine, are still, however, incapable of furnishing the troops necessary to carry on the ambitious schemes of their possessor; which sometimes prompt him to invade Hindostan; sometimes incline him to support the claims of the young Persian Prince; and frequently suggests the necessity of leading an army, to establish himself firmly in the countries he has newly conquered, and to reduce mal-contents in the province of Moultan. These extensive projects, according ill with Timur's scanty forces, are the secret causes of that indecision and inactivity, which has lately characterized the political conduct of the Abdallick Chief.

' Appa Bulwunt Row is a person of considerable distinction at the Court of Poona, whose two sons fell in the last attack made by Tippoo on the Mahratta army. The unhappy father, upon receiving intelligence of their melancholy catastrophe, seized a knife which lay near him, and plunged it into his side before he could be prevented. However the wound proves not to be desperate, and the proper remedies being instantaneously applied, his recovery is still hoped for.

' No adequate idea can be formed of the chaos of jarring interests, intestine divisions, and family broils which prevail in the province of Lahore; the inhabitants of which, driven from one place to another, can only find a temporary shelter in the last, till the petty chief who governs it becomes sufficiently powerful to extirpate them.'

Dr. Falconer says that tea is very pernicious to the Constitution. The Doctor is right, for it has proved highly so to the Constitution of England, and seems now to be making as great depredations on other countries as it has done on this. The pernicious effects of that Weed is now operating in a violent degree in the Netherlands and in Holland, and though they have endeavoured to mitigate its baneful influence, by mixing a little Orange Juice with it, it is doubtful whether that acid may be capable of correcting its corroding qualities. The Tea-Kettle which boiled over on the other side of the Atlantic Ocean, seems to have scalded the nations on this.

Aug. 10. The army of Brabant, is high in the report of military men. Well officered—well provided—well appointed throughout?—Throughout animated with that spirit—which—makes soldiers!

A few young Englishmen, much distinguished by fortune and fashion, but more by the promise of sentiment and action, are expected as volunteers in the army of Brabant; which is the army of manhood, sagacity and virtue.

By letters from Bussora we learn, that on the 6th of May, Shaick Twiney, Chief of the Montific Arabs, took possession of the government-house, having first seized the Mussaleim, and all the principal officers, and made himself master of the Turkish fleet lying off the town.

The intention of this Chief it seems, is to take upon himself the government of the country, and if possible, to procure from the Porte an appointment as Pacha of Bagdat. Fortunately for us, this enterprising man is warmly attached to the English; to whom, since his arrival, he has paid the most respectful attention.

The wine merchants of Dublin advertise to sell wines the growth of Portugal and Spain, at 16s. per dozen, whilst the consumer in London pays at the rate of 30s.

Letters from the Bay of Honduras, dated the 4th of June, mention, that several ships were to sail from that place in about a fortnight, all full laden, for London, with mahogany, which had been cut on an improved plan, by several artificers that had settled there from America.

Extract of a letter from Helvoetsluys, July 18.

' Notwithstanding what may be asserted to the contrary, this city has more reason to apprehend an attack from the Stadtholder's army, than the province of Holland, in the present conjuncture of affairs. The rival States of Amersfort and our patriotic regency disputing the sovereignty of the province, invites the ambition of the Orange party to subjugate the whole to the self-created regency of the former; to this may be added the decisive measures of the States General, which give every countenance to the partizans of the Stadtholder's faction. All these apprehensions, which seem well founded to us, do not in the least abate the ardour of our brave armed fellow citizens, who seem to gain new courage from the impending menaces.—We are determined to brave the worst, against an army, whose want and licentiousness must render us a prey to pillage and slaughter, if once they get us in their power.'

Aug. 12. A messenger extraordinary which arrived yesterday from Paris, brought the most favorable accounts of the friendly disposition of the court of Versailles to co-operate with the court of London, in every measure which can promote the speedy settlement of the affairs of Holland; and that France has earnestly desired, that Great-Britain may be joined with her in the mediation, for settling the disputes in Holland: and that several of the provinces have already accepted this auspicious proposition.

The states of Holland, in full assembly, at the Hague, published an edict the 30th ult. strictly forbidding, as surveyor of Holland, all persons whatever, from quitting the province, or going into any other state with their effects, under pretence of flying for safety; the states being themselves of sufficient ability, to protect their subjects: adding thereto, that in time of public disaster, it was the duty of every good citizen to continue at home, and add his endeavors to the defence of his country.

At the bottom of the Dutch politics, it is evident French intrigue prevails. Among the Dutch insurgents we find many French officers, and in particular two distinguished themselves in the late engagement. Independant, however, of those foreign allies on which the prince of Orange can depend, he appears to have many friends in the provinces. The trading interest are decidedly on his side, perhaps indeed from interest, because peace is absolutely necessary to their existence.

The following is handed to us as a copy of a letter from a dress agent in town to his employer in the country, but we cannot absolutely vouch for its authenticity. We only know that 'such things are.'

' Madam,

' Per bearer you will receive your rump altered according to desire, except the left hip, which I could not separate farther from the other without putting a piece between, which would have quite altered the shape. I called upon Mr. ——, concerning your teeth, which are not yet completed; but bids me assure you, that your present set will do for a considerable time, barring accidents. Your shoulder shall be altered as you desire, and I would have sent the Paris blush, but it is not yet arrived. I shall be proud to receive your commands, and am, Madam, &c.

The court of Versailles has given orders for a third camp to be formed immediately in the neighbourhood of Dunkirk, under the command of the marshall de Stainville. France has declared to all the world, the deranged state of her finances, yet she is putting herself to the expence of a war establishment, solely for the purpose of exercising her soldiers and improving her sailors: such at least she avows as her sole motive.

Some exertions have been made, and are now making, to encrease the African trade. The computation of the value of the goods imported into Europe from the coasts of Guinea, consisting of elephants teeth, gold, pepper, wax, drugs spices, &c. is little short of four millions sterling, while the goods exported to Africa in return do not amount to more than 300,000l. and they consist chiefly of coarse callico, cottons, linens, woolen stuffs, serges, knives, hatchets, nails, hammers, pewter plates and dishes, pots, kettles, fire arms and gun-powder, glass-beads, small looking-glasses, and most kind of toys —The trade, upon the whole, when loss and gain is computed, is reckoned to produce full 120l. per cent.

A father beating a son who had arrived at years of maturity, ' Go! thou art no more my son'—' Am I not?' said the young man, ' then your right of beating me ends, and my right of denfending myself begins.'

Extract of a letter from the Hague, Aug. 2.

' The States of Holland have lately taken a step, which cannot but be the means of widening the breach with the other branches of the Confederacy, which have not yet espoused any cause openly, but incline to act with moderation; this is no other than to stop all couriers or messengers passing thro' Holland, who are not bound immediately for this place, or have pass-ports from the magistracy of Holland.'

Aug. 17. A writer in the Amsterdam Gazette says, that the pretended States of Amersfort, who call themselves the only legislative States of Utrecht, have resolved to convoke all the Provinces, except Holland, to a general assembly of confederation, which will be held at Nimeguen the 15th of this month, under the auspices of William V. This project, adds the same writer, is worthy of the schismatic members of the States of Utrecht, and strongly marks their madness, and shews at the same time what poor resources the party have. It is thought, with some degree of probability, that the States of Overyssel and Groningen will not send deputies to this assembly. If it takes place the Union is broken, and the States of Holland, the most powerful of the confederation, will be left to take what part they shall think most proper to rescue themselves from the impending oppression. Such is the language of the patriotic journalists!

The Council of Amsterdam have not only resolved to suspend the Prince of Orange from his office of Stadtholder and Admiral General of the Province, but to apply all the emoluments belonging to his offices to the maintenance of the corps of armed burgesses. This resolution they have sent to the States of Holland and West Friesland, demanding that it should be ratified by them; and yet they talk of accommodation!

By the Dutch mails which arrived yesterday, we learn, that the first battalion of the 2d regiment of Waldeck has deserted the service of the States of Holland, to follow the banners of the Prince of Orange: the article further adds, that they took away the money chest, colours, &c.

Accounts are received from Dunkirk by the last post, that there are at this time upwards of 20,000 men, who are retiring into cantonments in that neighbourhood.

A letter from Amsterdam, to a Gentleman in Edinburgh, dated July 3, says, ' On Thursday last, there was a smart action at Sœstdyk, in the neighbourhood of Utrecht, in which the Prince's party prevailed, with the loss of one man killed and 11 wounded. The enemy were 600 strong, of which 33 were taken prisoners, several left dead on the field of battle, and several waggons loaded with the killed and wounded carried off. In their retreat they robbed and demolished every house where the owners were friends to the Orange party.'

The governor of the Cape of Good Hope is clearly in the interest of the states of Holland, otherwise he would not (according to accounts brought by the last East-India ship) treat the English with such indignity as to order them to depart in 48 hours after landing.

We take the earliest opportunity of confirming the intelligence we presented to the public lately. France has officially notified her intention of supporting the patriotic party of Holland, at every hazard. Orders are therefore now issued in France, for the immediate assembling of an army of 40,000 men, which are to be drafted from the different garrisons, and to meet on the frontiers of French Flanders. Application has been made to the bishop of Liege, for leave to march through his territories, and leave has been granted.

In addition to the above, we have to announce, that France absolutely and positively declared, that their troops shall march immediately, if the king of Prussia's troops do not halt in Cleves. It is imagined the Prussian army is already arrived there; and if the court of France does not return a satisfactory answer to his Prussian majesty's memorial, the orders from the king of Prussia are, that his army immediately march to the support of the stadtholder.

It is stated upon good information, that the stadtholder has at present a well appointed army of thirty thousand men, and the best officered of any in Europe.

August 20. In consequence of the approaching coalition of cabinets for the arrangement of the Dutch affairs, the preparations at Brest have been stopped. One English merchant only had four thousand pounds of stores bespoke and delivered, which it is supposed will be returned upon his hands.

The ladies are again falling into the shapes which Nature gave them; a proof that the fashionable taste of Fancy is but transitory, but that the fashion of Nature is permanent and always beautiful. Broad hoops, bell hoops, high heads, low heads, have all had their day, but the genuine figure is now restored, and while it is retained, women will continue objects of admiration.

Among the various ornaments and flowers which decorate the fair sex at Brighton and other watering places, Love and Idleness seem to be the flowers most sought after.

It is said that a great number of very captivating young widows wear long faces at the idea of a certain young prince's giving his hand to the virgin princess of Prussia.

It was the general conversation about St. James's yesterday, that the states of Holland had at last consented to accept the mediation of England, France and Prussia; but the place of meeting for the plenipotentiaries is not yet fixed.

The present appearance of public affairs seems rather to indicate that tranquility may yet be restored in Holland, without further effusion of blood. The warlike preparations at this and other arsenals are considerably slackened, and orders are daily expected for the intended fleet of observation, now at Spithead, to come into harbour. The contracts for 30,000 seamens's beds, &c. however, are to be fulfilled, nor are any of the seamen lately procured to be yet paid off.

The dispatches sent off yesterday to Paris, contain Mr. Eden's full powers as ambassador and minister plenipotentiary to the Catholic king, for whose court he is to set off speedily.

The French court, it is positively asserted, have given their ultimatum to England, Prussia, &c. in a manner highly satisfactory to all parties. They have also informed the Dutch patriotic party, that they cannot consistently interfere in their disputes, as their precipitation in suspending the stadtholder from his hereditary offices admitted neither of palliation nor justification; that they wholly disapproved the violence of their proceedings; and that their friendly mediation had in view the general tranquility of the republic, rather than the exciting of intestine commotion, and encouraging the ravages of a civil war. To this effect the marquis de Verac, the French ambassador at the Hague, by order of his court, has communicated to their high mightinesses.

The Emperor has made known his friendly dispositions to the stadtholder. This enterprising monarch sees the designs of France on the republic, and feels his true interest in contracting them. His voice therefore decides the matter. France dares not act against the united powers of the Empire, England and Prussia. The stadtholder will be reinstated in his authority, and the French faction in the republic be for ever extinguished.

August 21. Yesterday's mail from Ostend, seems to confirm the opinion, that the states of Holland, alarmed by a separation of the confederacy, the number of people that have left the province, and the quantity of specie sent out of the country to other banks for security; to which may be added, the decay of trade and the prospect of their commerce being diverted into another channel, if the troubles should continue; seem to be returning to reason, and are sat down to consider of the proposed terms for an accommodation, which may probably have the desired effect. In Austrian Flanders, however, the prospect is far different: the Brabanters talk of opposing the emperor to the utmost, who, however, is not to be diverted from his purpose; and by the troops now nearly in motion towards that quarter, will carry by force, what he has before put in the semblance of recommendation.

The province of Holland has had the modesty to propose to the court of France, that it should guarantee its immediate establishment of a distinct, unconnected government, and the secure possession of the Dutch settlements in the East and West Indies. This would instantly involve Europe in war, particularly the rival powers of France and England. But the French cabinet will hardly attend to so extravagant a proposal.

The empress of Russia has not this year commemorated her accession to the throne by honorary promotions of her courtiers, but by an act which does herself honor. She has released all dobters who have been imprisoned for ten years past; and has pardoned all criminals whose crimes were prior to that date.

The French king has given orders to publish the intended economic plan of reform in his houshold, as also in that of his royal consort.

On the 15th of this month the parliament of Paris were by his majesty banished to Troyes*. The officers appointed to execute the king's orders received their instructions in the night, and with several parties of the French guards went early in the morning to the house of each member, to signify to him his majesty's commands, which were, that he should immediately get into his carriage, and depart for Troyes, without writing, or even speaking to any body out of his own house. By this sudden and secret manner of acting, the whole business was executed without any alarm to the people.

The parliament of Paris have brought against Monsieur Calonne 130 articles of impeachment.

Monsieur Calonne is said to be in London, but the French spies of Knightsbridge know nothing of the matter. If the report of Paris be true, that he means fully to justify himself, at the expence of two great personages, who drew immensely on him for curious purposes both of politics and pleasure, his defence will be read with avidity. An imperial person is also to come in for his share, if De Calonne can lie concealed to produce the pamphlet.

By a letter from the north of Ireland, it appears that the late thunder, lightning, and hail, have done much mischief there. The Giants Causeway, that stupendous and wonderful work of nature, has been split in one part of the rock upwards of twenty yards; and at Glenarm, the seat of earl Antrim, several deer were killed in the park, and one cow had half her skull entirely and cleanly separated from the other part by lightning. There was a considerable commotion in the sea at Larne, the waves rose mountains high, and the waters shook as if there had been an earthquake. A ship, with glass bottles, bound from Bellycastle to Dublin, was forced from her moorings, and dashed on shore above seventy yards from the water—to the amazement of the terrified beholders; only one man is lost, but the ship is broke to pieces. At Carrickfergus the hail did much damage, and killed a number of lambs and even sheep. The thunder and lightning, by every account, seem to have been general all over Europe; and England appears to have suffered less than any other kingdom.

August 25 On Thursday a messenger extraordinary arrived at the secretary of state's office, from sir James Harris at the Hague, whose dispatches contain the following particulars: The night on which the messenger set off, a large body of armed men, of the French party, were before the gates, and insisted upon entrance into the Hague, on which a council was summoned (and was sitting when the messenger set off,) to determine what was best to be done.

It was generally thought that there would be an engagement between the people of the Hague and the besiegers, in consequence of which sir James Harris has sent home all his private papers; nor is it very unlikely but he may follow them, until the disturbances be quieted.

The letters by last night's mail mention that the states of Holland and West Friesland, which were adjourned for several days, were hastily assembled by summons on the 18th instant, but that the purport of their meeting had not transpired. It was conjectured to be occasioned by the circumstance of a number of French engineers being stopped and prevented from entering the provinces by orders of states general.

Extract of a letter from Dunkirk, August 21.

"A circumstance has just occurred, too interesting to escape notice. The troops that were coming to French Flanders are stopped in their present position. The foragers are ordered to suspend their operations, and all is at a stand. This is said to be owing to some representations of the emperor's ambassador at Paris."

Extract of a letter from Paris, August 20.

"The politicians all agree, that France, as a country, has not been in so bad a situation as at present, this last century. Her own subjects mutinying--her finances deranged in every quarter—all her schemes discovered—and her plans of fomenting divisions, even in the bosom of her allies, traced back, and recoiling with double force upon herself.

UTRECHT,

August 15. Yesterday morning a detachment of 600 armed burgesses of Amsterdam marched out of this city, after having kept garrison without our walls for the space of a month. This considerable detachment will be immediately replaced by a like number of auxiliaries of Rotterdam and other places. Our garrison is daily augmented by the accession of deserters from the camp at Zeist, who every morning arrive with their arms and baggage. They give the most deplorable accounts of the situation of the camp of Zeist, where money is extremely scarce, as well as many articles of provisions.

HAGUE,

August 15. Sir James Harris has had a conference with the president of the states general. This minister from the king of England has presented a memorial, the tenor of which is something surprising. The English minister declares, that his royal master is ready ty become a mediator for terminating the differences of the republic with the stadtholder, if the republic is desirous of his interference; and further, that his Britannic majesty is strongly disposed to act for the advantage of the state. The king of Great Britain cannot be ignorant that this mediation has been offered by the king of France, who is now the only ally of the republic.

AMERICA.

BOSTON, October 8.

Extract of a letter from New-York, Sept. 28.

'The Chevalier de Longchamps, is no more—he was found dead behind St. Paul's on Wednesday morning, supposed to have been killed in a duel.—The fracas, of which his death was the end, I am told, began at the Coffee-house, where the Chevalier (as he is called) was asked by captain Verdier (late of Polaski's legion) how he dared appear in the company of gentlemen—this produced a blow from the Chevalier—on which the Captain kicked him out of the house—de Longchamps, it is said, soon after challenged him to the field, at 4 o'clock the next morning.—He was found dead soon after this hour.'

We are informed by a gentleman lately arrived from Paris, that by an arret of the council of the King of France, passed the 24th of last May, the PORT LOUIS, in the isle of France, had been declared a free port, and opened to the American trade.

The Marquis De La Fayette, we are told, intended a visit to America this year—but the expectation of a rupture in Europe, in which his sword will again be wanted in defence of the rights of mankind, in the cause of the Dutch patriots, prevented it. Among other considerations which induce us to wish for a speedy termination to the commotions which now agitate Holland, the desire of seeing in America, a nobleman, the mention of whose illustrious name immediately calls into the mind, without a recapitulation, a series of various and important services rendered by him to our country—is not the least.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 2.

It is with real pleasure we announce, that the report of the fœderal convention meets with the greatest approbation in this metropolis. All ranks are highly animated with the pleasing hope, that this glorious structure, supported by thirteen pillars, will speedily be completed.—The patriots who have assisted in the above work, have deserved well of their country——their names shall brighten the annals of America, and their memory be forever revered, not as the Lords and Peers, but as the Fathers of America.

MIDDLETOWN, October 8.

At a town-meeting holden in New Haven, by adjournment, upon the first day of October, A. D. 1787.

Voted, That this town do request their representatives at the next general assembly, to use their influence to obtain a convention, as speedily as possible, for the purpose of taking into consideration the constitution recommended by the convention of the States.

A true copy of record, examined by SAMUEL BISHOP, Clerk.

KEENE, September 25.

We hear from Chester, in the state of Vermont, that the rain which fell there last Wednesday evening, in about eight hours, made the greatest flood that has been known for 20 years. Williams's river was so extreme high, that it has cleared the meadows of fence, carried off thousands of weight of flax, a quantity of corn and potatoes, drowned several horned cattle, covered the fields with floodwood, and the grass ground appears like plowed fields: The damage at Chester, is estimated at 500l. At Black-River the inhabitants have sustained considerable damage, but the estimate is not known.

On Wednesday last a severe north-east storm, attended with a large quantity of rain, was experienced in this and the neighbouring towns; which has destroyed a number of fruit trees, and blown down a number of oak and elm trees, near two feet in circumference. A pair of oxen belonging to Daniel Newcomb, esq; of this town, were killed at Gilsom, by the fall of a tree, and a number of cattle in the adjacent towns, met with the same disaster. In some towns travelling was impracticable, on account of the quantity of trees which were on the road.

CARLISLE, (Pennsylvania) Oct. 3.

On Wednesday the 26th ultimo, was held the first commencement for degrees, in Dickinson college.

The trustees, having obtained leave to use the Presbyterian church, on this occasion, the exercises, with which a crouded assembly of ladies and gentlemen were very agreeably entertained, were exhibited in that large and elegant building.

At 10 o'clock in the morning, the trustees, professors and the several classes of students in college, proceeded in order from the college to the church.

When all had taken the places assigned them, the principal introduced the business of the day by prayer.

The following orations were then pronounced.

A salutatory oration, in Latin, on the advantages of learning, particularly of a public education, by Mr. John Bryson.

An oration on the importance and advantages of concord, especially at the present crisis of the United States of America, by Mr. David M'Keehen.

An oration on taste, by Mr. Isaiah Blair.

An oration on the advantages of an accurate acquaintance with the Latin and Greek classics, by Mr. Jonathan Walker.

After an intermission of two hours, the following exercises took place in the afternoon.

An oration on the pleasure and advantages of the study of history, by Mr. David Watts.

An oration on the nature of civil liberty, and evils of slavery and despotic power, by Mr. Steel Semple.

An oration on the various and wonderful powers and faculties of the human mind, by Mr. James Gettings.

The degree of Bachelor of Arts was then conferred by the principal on the following young gentlemen, viz. John Boyse, John Bryson, Robert Duncan, Isaiah Blair, Jonathan Walker, David Watts, David M'Keehen, James Gettings and Steel Semple.

This was immediately followed by the address of the principal to the graduates, in which they were affectionately exhorted to prosecute their studies with zeal and diligence—and to conduct themselves in future life in such a manner as might render them useful citizens, blessings to their country, and an honor to the college in which they had been educated.

A valedictory oration in praise of science, and of the worthy patrons of literature, concluding with suitable addresses to the trustees, professors and graduates, was pronounced by Mr. Robert Duncan.

The business of the day was concluded with prayer by the principal.

The young gentlemen performed all these exercises with a propriety and spirit which did them great honor, reflected much credit on their teachers, and gave ground to hope that the sons of Dickenson college will at least equal, in useful learning and shining talents, those of any other seminary.

The high price of so useful a vegetable as potatos is to be lamented—the price in the market of this town is two shillings and eight pence by the bushel for the best kind, which is nearlythree times what is given for that article in England, where land is let at very high rents.

Philadelphia, Oct. 15.

Extract of a letter from Rousau, Dominica, dated Sept. 19 1787.

"You have no doubt been informed ere this of our great sufferings here, occasioned by the hurricanes in the course of a few days in last month, which laid in ruins almost every building in this colony."

Further accounts from Dominica say, that every droger and small craft are entirely lost; twelve ships and brigs in the harbour of Rousau were also destroyed; that two-thirds of the coffee crops are ruined, and the sugar canes, &c. very much damaged.

The following gentlemen are elected for

NORTHAMPTON.

Assembly—Peter Trexler, junior, Thomas Mawharter, Peter Burkhalter, Peter Ealer.

Sheriffs—George Grooff, Jonas Hartzel.

BURLINGTON, (NEW-JERSEY.)

Counsellor—Joseph Smith.

Assembly—Richard S. Smith, Joseph Biddle, Robert Strettell Jones.

On Friday forenoon, about 11 o'clock, a one horse cart, heavily laden with stone coal, passed slowly up Green-street, abreast of the late barrack lot, in the Northern-Liberties of this city, the driver behind and towards the other side, not seeing a child sitting in the cartway, one of the wheels of the cart passed over the child's body, and instantly killed it. The infant, a girl, was not two years old.

A dreadful murder was committed some time since in the south of France, on the body of the venerable Marquis d'Allanville, by a man servant who had lived with him upwards of 26 years. Avarice prompted the wretch to the commission of the horrid deed, and the manner in which he did it is rather extraordinary. It was the custom of this old nobleman to retire to bed every evening at nine o'clock, and on the morning of the day in which the murder was committed he had sold an estate, and had the money in his bedchamber. The wretch went to the bed side, and asked his master if he had said his prayers? To which he replied, Yes, and with great affection added, and I did not forget you, Ferdinand, in my prayers. This had such an effect on the fellow, that he laid aside his intention, and had recourse to brandy, as a stimulus to harden him; on being intoxicated, he again went to the bedside, and with a razor cut off the Marquis's head; but such was his agitation when he recovered his senses, that he voluntarily confessed the horrid deed, and gave himself up to justice.

At a meeting of the Inhabitants of the borough of Carlisle, in the county of Cumberland, convened at the Court-House,

Major General John Armstrong was unanimously chosen Chairman.

THE business of the meeting was opened by colonel Magaw, and the constitution of the United States, formed by the late convention, was read, and the following resolutions unanimously entered into:

Resolved, That the said constitution is most warmly approved of by this meeting, and that this meeting entertain the highest sense of the public virtue and patriotism of the majority of the house of assembly, in calling immediately a convention of this state, in pursuance of the recommendation of the Fœderal Convention.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the withdrawing or absenting of a member of assembly, in order to defeat any resolution or act of the legislature, is an offence most destructive to good government, and the happiness and true interest of the state. And that any member who is guilty of such desertion and breach of trust, is unworthy of the confidence of the people, and unfit to represent them.

A committee was unanimously chosen to form a ticket for a counsellor and representatives of this county for the ensuing year.

By the unanimous order of the meeting,
JOHN ARMSTRONG, Chairman.

We can assure the public that the meeting was the most large and respectable that has been in this place since the declaration of Independence, and that the greatest unanimity and concord prevailed amongst the people. This has inspired the true lovers of their country with the hope that here party-spirit is extinct.

WRITTEN AT AN INN,

On a particular occasion.

TO thee, fair Freedom, I retire,
From flattery, feasting, dice and din;
Nor art thou found in domes much higher,
Than the low cot, or humble Inn.

'Tis here with boundless power I reign,
And every health which I begin
Converts dull port to bright champaign;
For Freedom crowns it at an Inn.

I fly from pomp, I fly from plate,
I fly from falshood's specious grin;
Freedom I love, and form I hate,
And chuse my lodgings at an Inn.

Here, waiter! take my sordid ore,
Which lacquies else might hope to win;
It buys what courts have not in store,
It buys me Freedom at an Inn.

And now once more I shape my way
Thro' rain or shine, thro' thick and thin;
Secure to meet, at close of day,
With kind reception at an Inn.

Whoe'er has travell'd life's dull round,
Where'er his various tour has been,
May sigh to think how oft he found
His warmest welcome at an Inn.

ANECDOTE.

A Gentleman going into Newgate, London, met with a man whom he knew, very heavily ironed——'Good God!' says the stranger, 'what offence have you committed?' 'Nothing,' replied the other, 'but the single one of striking a man and a woman.' 'Who were they,' asked the stranger, 'that had such interest to have you so strongly fettered?' 'There they are,' said the prisoner, taking a halfpenny from his pocket, 'as base a couple as ever you saw, though they look so well.'

Thirty Dollars Reward.

CAPT. DAVID BLACKMAN was murdered on board the schooner Polly, laying at anchor off Reedy-Island, the latter end of September last, supposed to be done by the person who was on board with him, John Tracy by name, an Irishman, about 19 years of age, 5 feet 3 inches high, light complexion, and light straight hair; he has lost the end of one of his great toes by the frost; has an uncommon fore tooth in his lower jaw, and is pock-marked. Had on a pair of coarse linen trowsers, a coarse linen frock, check shirt, and new shoes. The vessel was last from Philadelphia, and had been in the lumber trade from Egg-harbour, where she belonged to the said Blackman's father. The said Tracy had formerly reported, that he had lived in Philadelphia and Wilmington. He had taken cash, goods, and a silver watch, with a button to cover the key hole, &c. The Captain was found on board, much bruised, and the boat taken away, which by every circumstance appears to have been done by said Tracy. All persons are required to secure the murderer, that he may be brought to justice, for which the above reward will be paid by

JAPHET CLARK,
DAVID BLACKMAN.

Bordentown Academy.

THE ſubſcriber takes this method to inform the public, that he ſtill continues his Academy open at Bordentown, and that having ſupplied himſelf with a good tutor, means to increaſe his ſchool to about thirty pupils, having formerly confined himſelf to a ſmaller number, being confident that he and his aſſiſtant can fully do their duty by them. The branches that are taught in his academy are reading, writing, arithmetic, the Latin, Greek and French languages, practical mathematics, geography, with the uſe of the globes, and the arts and ſciences in general. He has in ſaid Academy a good library and philoſophical apparatus, for the uſe of his pupils; ſo that gentlemen may have their children fitted either for any particular claſe in college, or their education finiſhed with him. He pays a particular attention to rhetoric and oratory, and flatters himſelf that he has turned out ſome good ſpeakers, ſo neceſſary in our republic. He provides board, waſhing, lodging and every neceſſary accommodation, either in his own houſe, or in a genteel family, who accommodates part of his pupils. The exceeding healthineſs and pleaſantneſs of the ſituation, together with the ready communication with both the cities of Philadelphia and New-York, render it the moſt eligible ſpot on the continent for a ſeminary of learning. As there will be a vacation during the month of October, ſuch gentlemen as wiſh to ſend their ſons had beſt apply to him at Bordentown, either by letter or otherwiſe, during the time of vacation, that they may enter when the ſchool commences on the firſt of November, as he cannot admit any more when his number is compleated. Thoſe gentlemen who confide their children to his care may depend upon every attention being paid by

Their moſt reſpectful humble Servant,

For Griſt Mills & other Water Works

On an extenſive Plan,

One of the beſt ſituations in America is offered

FOR SALE,

Together With

Batſto Iron-Works,

At the forks of Little Egg-Harbour river, one of the moſt healthy ſpots in New Jerſey, 38 miles by land from Philadelphia, and within a few hours ſail of New York.

THE river, communicating with the ſea by the beſt inlet on the Jerſey coaſt, is navigable for veſſels of 200 tons within a few miles of the works; thoſe of 100 tons may approach within one mile; flats and ſcows, carrying 10 or 12 tons, load and unload at the works. The uſual freight to New York or Philadelphia is 10 ſhillings per ton. The furnace ſtream affords plenty of water, in the dryeſt ſeaſon, for 3 or 4 pair of mill ſtones, beſides ſupplying the iron works.—An excellent dam, which has been increaſing in ſtrength many years by the cinder from the furnace, is well ſecured from the danger of freſhes, and the works are ſcarcely ever injured or delayed by either ice or back-water, though the tide ſwells to the foot of the dam: mills may therefore be erected at a moderate expence. This being a part of the country in which many people and many teams are neceſſarily employed in collecting and preparing for market the iron and lumber with which it abounds, and at the ſame time illy adapted to the raiſing of grain for their ſupport, there is, and muſt continue to be, a demand for large quantities of midlings, cornell, ſhorts and bran, at advanced prices; and the convenience of conveying flour at a light expence, either to New York or Philadelphia, or to more diſtant markets, will not be overlooked nor conſidered as of ſmall importance, eſpecially as there are few mill ſeats of any conſiderable capacity equally adapted to the New York market, which is not unfrequently ſupplied with ſuperfine flour from Philadelphia. A choice of the various kinds of wheat may be drawn to this ſeat from Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jerſey, and New York with greater eaſe and convenience than to almoſt any other mills now in being.

The FURNACE, which by the extenſive lands annexed to it, is abundantly ſupplied with wood and ore, is now in blaſt, and is noted for producing the beſt hollow ware in America, the metal being peculiarly well adapted to the making of caſtings of all kinds, as well as excellent bar iron.

A FORGE, with four fires and two hammers, belongs to the eſtate, and ſtands about half a mile from the furnace, on another fine ſtream which affords plenty of water.

A SLITTING and ROLLING MILL, having been diſuſed for the laſt two or three years, may want ſome repairs to prepare it for uſe; but the forebays and gates are in perfect order, and being in the proper ſpot for griſt mills, may be appropriated to that uſe.

Two SAW MILLS in good order, and a ſmall Griſt Mill.

The MANSION HOUSE is elegantly ſituated about 100 yards from the furnace, on an height which commands a view of the whole works, and of the two villages formed by the ſurrounding buildings belonging to the eſtate, ſuch as barns, ſtables, coal houſes, workſhops, ſtorehouſes and dwellings for workmen. Adjoining the manſion houſe is a large and fruitful garden, affording plenty of vegetables, and well ſtored with choſen fruit trees; alſo a young bearing orchard, containing near 2000 apple trees, moſtly grafted.

Theſe excellent accommodations for extenſive and profitable manufactories, are offered to ſale at a very low rate, and on terms of payment calculated for the eaſe of the purchaſer, who may pay the greater part in the produce of the Iron Works, at a price to be agreed upon; and they are capable of producing more in one year, than will pay the whole price demanded.

For particulars, apply to WILLIAM RICHARDS, at the ſaid Works, JOHN COX, at Bloomſbury, near Trenton, or CHARLES PETTIT, in Philadelphia.

MOORE-HALL,

THE Eſtate of the late William Moore, eſquire, ſituate upon the river Schuylkill, in the townſhip of Charles-Town, in the county of Cheſter, diſtant 23 miles from this city.

The Eſtate conſiſts of upwards of 600 acres of moſt excellent land, 300 of which are arable, the remainder is woodland and meadow.

The Manſion Houſe is ſpacious, convenient and airy; it is ſituated upon a high and healthy ſpot, and commands a moſt delightful view—The Barn is large; the Stables and Offices are commodious. There is a very valuable Griſt-Mill on the premiſes, near the Manſion Houſe, on a never-failing ſtream, called Pickering, running through the eſtate, and watering a great body of meadow; this ſtream empties itſelf into the Schuylkill, in front of the houſe; it formerly ſupplied water for a ſaw-mill, which might with much eaſe, and at a little expence, be replaced, and carried on to great advantage.

This Eſtate may, with great convenience, be divided into three compact Farms, with a competent portion of arable land, woodland and meadow to each farm.

Any perſon inclining to treat for the whole or a part of Premiſes before the day of ſale, may know the terms by applying to LEWIS WEISS, eſquire, in Arch ſtreet, or PETER MILLER, eſquire, in Third ſtreet.

Foreign Intelligence.

HAGUE, Aug. 5.

THE Baron de Thulemeyer had a conference with the President of the States General, and Grand Pensionary of Holland. The report is, that the Prussian Envoy had sent a particular memorial to each of the Ministers of State.

The States of Holland have dismissed several officers from the regiments in their pay, who were not affected to the measures of their High Mightinesses, and nominated others in their room. The province of Zealand has declined any foreign mediation, alledging, that according to the 16th article of the Union of Utrecht, the Stadtholders only are the constitutional mediators between the provinces. The States add, that in case this be refused, the Emperor, England, and Prussia, shall be called in.

KANIEW, May 7.

Yesterday morning the fleet of gallies having on board the empress of Russia, with her suite, anchored in the river, opposite this place at the distance of 1 mile from the Polish shore, and was saluted by the discharge of 100 pieces of cannon from a neighbouring hill, which was returned by the Imperial galley, and the other gallies in succession. His Polish majesty having accepted of an invitation from the empress to dine and pass the day on board the fleet, her Imperial majesty was pleased to invest him with the Order of St. Andrew; and at eight o'clock the same evening, as the empress intended to proceed on her voyage early the next morning, the king took leave of her Imperial majesty, and returned hither.

PARIS, June 10.

Many of the notables are still in this city, where the princes, dukes and presidents entertain them in a splendid manner. On the 29th of last month M. de Nicolai gave a grand entertainment to the department at which the comte d'Artois presided, and to which the magistrate also invited the prince, saying that Henry the IVth himself had honored one of his predecessors with his company to dinner, and that Gaston, brother to Louis the XIIIth, had partaken of an entertainment made by a president of the chambre des comtes. However, the king, notwithstanding these precedents, would not permit his brother to accept of the invitation of M. de Nicolai.

July 13. The archbishop of Toulouse continues firm in his noble and vigorous resolutions; he is deaf to solicitations he goes on, notwithstanding all interested opposition, straight forward for the public good. Such a firm character is what the present circumstances require.

UTRECHT, July 12.

Hitherto they have been able to preserve the outparts of this city in statu quo, thinking that matters would either be made up or decided in the open field; but as we now have too much reason to fear an attack upon this city, it is said to be in agitation to destroy the houses and gardens without the gates; among the rest the beautiful mall, the favorite walk of citizens and strangers, which was spared during the war in the time of Louis XIV. is also to be demolished. These are some of the destructive consequences of civil commotions.

The Vaart, or Ferry, being a post of the utmost importance to the city of Utrecht, every precaution is taking to secure it from an attack: Among the rest, a vessel is placed upon the Leck, opposite Freeswyk, carrying fifteen guns.

LONDON, July 20.

Extract of a letter from the Hague, July 13.

'The Prince Stadtholder's arms make a new progress every day. It is true that the taking of Wyck was not, in fact, a grand expedition, since there was scarce any body to defend it, and that the city of Utrecht, busy about its own safety, could not assist it. Nevertheless, we must not be blind to the importance of that place, which is one of the keys of the province, relatively to the sluices. It will cost much blood to retake it, and the thing is indispensable, in order to be masters of the navagation of that branch of the Rhine.

'Another success, not less considerable, is the taking of Harderwick, on the Zuyder Zee, in Gueldres, by the Stadtholderian troops.'

Extract of a letter from Amsterdam, July 10.

'Hasselt has been retaken by the armed burghers of Over Yssel, after a capitulation, which was granted merely to prevent the shedding of the blood of the citizens without necessity.'

The underwriters of New Lloyd's, in respect to the miraculous escape of the Olive Branch cutter, captain Brian, from Africa, on which a small average loss was paid, contributed for a silver bowl, with their names engraved, which is left for public view there this day. A gold medal is making for the French captain who assisted captain Brian when in distress, who belonged to the Le Fortune packet-boat, which sails between New York and l'Orient.

August 9. From the accounts received yesterday from Holland, it is now confirmed that a civil war is actually began in province of Utrecht. All terms of accommodation, all friendly attempts of mediation, whether sincere or not on the part of France, and in short all hopes of terminating the disputes without more bloodshed, are now vanished. Whether patriotism which they pretend, or delusion which is imparted to them, has driven the people to this desperate remedy, it is plain that there is now no retracting. The sword is drawn, and drawn, as it would seem, in a slow, but determined manner. Nothing remains to all appearance now but for both parties to assemble their forces and their allies, and contend inch by inch for the superiority.

August 11.

The Duke of York is talked of for the head of the army. Prince William Henry, it is probabable, will also hold the same situation with respect to the navy. By these means we may hope to see professional merit rising, in opposition to Parliamentary influence.

The banishment of the French Parliament, although nothing new in the political history of that country, is nevertheless a measure ill suited to the present times. The French King has been ambitious to give liberty to the Americans, and wished even to relieve the Dutch from the pretended oppression of the Stadtholderian party; and it is more than probable, that ere long his own subjects will emancipate themselves from a slavery, which in the present times distinguishes and mark them out above all other nations.

The banishment of the French Parliament with all their officers and appendages, was in this form: Lettres de Cachet were delivered by an officer of the Gardes Franchoises, accompanied by a single Sergeant.

Extract of a letter from the Hague, July 24.

'Since the Court of France transmitted to the States General the memorial lately mentioned, hostilities seem suspended on both parts; but the Cabinet war is still carried on, and may possibly end by becoming more serious still than the other; and indeed, from the present discussion agitated in the Assembly of the States General, depends absolutely the fate of United Provinces, and it is this very week that it is to be decided. This grand affair is the rejection of the deputies of the new States of Utrecht, from the Assembly of their High Mightinesses. It was the Province of Zealand that made the first motion for it, which was immediately embraced by Friesland and Gueldres. Holland and Over Yssel persist in acknowledging these deputies. Holland has gone still farther; she passed a resolution by which she declares, that she takes under her protection the said deputies, and that if the majority, who arrogate to themselves the right of regulating every thing in the Assembly of the States General, take it into their heads to push matters farther, and attempt to expel the deputies of the new States of Utrecht, she will definitively drive from the Hague those of Amersfort. The issue of the present contest will terminate the difference some way or other, or will entirely break the bond of the union that still exists, although very weak.

'The conduct of the Stadtholder and his party excites an indignation which it is impossible not to feel at the sight of all the horrors which that party takes the liberty to commit. It is in vain to say that all this Stadtholderian ferment, is the fruit of the nation's love for the House of Orange; it is a palpable falsity, demonstrated by all the discoveries made, respecting the means of seduction employed by the persons who act in the name of the Prince, to make the people rise.

'Three officers of the marine, having behaved at the Helder (near the road of the Texel) in a most injurious manner against the States of Holland, and at the same time very seditious, have been taken up and conducted to Hoorn, where the College of Deputy Counsellors for the Northern Department actually sits. One of them even proceeded to personal insults against one of the deputies. The States of Holland have broke those three officers, and delivered them up to the civil power to be dealt with according to law. They had not only been at a peasant's wedding, all bedizened with orange cockades, &c. but when they returned on board, they had the audacity to hoist the flag of the States.—Well might they then say, (Orange bowen. Orange above the Sovereign)'—Courier de l'Europe.'

PARIS TOPICS.

PARIS, July 26.

AT the meeting of the Parliament yesterday, it was agreed not to press any further for the present the taxation by stamps; and it was by all parties thought expedient, not to register any edicts for taxes till an expediment should me made of the sum which may annually be saved by the reform which his Majesty had proposed during the Assembly of the Notables. A short time, therefore, will announce to the public the different objects intended to be reformed.

In the mean time, the Ministry seems to be in a very unsettled state. New changes are every day talked of.

On Wednesday next, the 1st of August, the Queen goes to her house at Trianon, where she will stay six weeks, during which time there will be balls twice a week.

The porcelain manufactory at Seve is going to be removed to St. Germain's, where a part of the Castle is destined for that noble undertaking. The buildings at Seve will be converted into stables for the Queen, as an appendage to her Majesty's palace at St. Cloud.

Mr. Eden's expedition to this Court, has for its object some explanations in respect to the United Provinces; and in truth Mr. Eden is to be stiled the head and hand of the Duke of Dorset!

DUTCH AFFAIRS.

THE French party are now so powerful at Amsterdam, Rotterdam, and in many other parts of Holland, that they send letters of exile to whomsoever they judge well affected to the old constitution of the United States, or to the Protestant interest and England. A Minister of a Protestant congregation, who had preached against the alliance with France, and submitted the dangerous situation of their liberties at this crisis, from the over-ruling power of the French Court, to the consideration of his hearers, was banished immediately from his church, and the Province of Holland; and another Preacher who had ventured to remind his congregation of the promises of the Prophets concerning the Jews; and exhorted them not to deal so proudly and reproachfully towards that nation, as was the manner of the French partizans, with great difficulty escaped the same punishment. The policy of the United States has indeed varied considerably with regard to religion, of late years, and the variation is wholly to the advantage of the French interest. To this remarkable change in their politics, the sudden shock to their constitution, which is severely felt at present, may be attributed. Their old Protestant laws, generally reckoned salutary and religious, have been buried in oblivion and disuse, till the French device of toleration (in other dominions) has acquired to France a sovereign controul in Holland over all their counsels. Similar commotions and disturbances were encouraged and fostered by the Spaniards, by the pacification of Ghent, 1576, and the union of Utrecht, in 1579, which was soon disturbed by the intrigues of the Priests in foreign pay. The congregations under their direction were earnestly incited, and almost generally inclined to return to the Spanish government; factions arose, as in the present case; a powerful party of mal-contents was formed and supported by foreign gold, who were ready to betray the Provinces again into the hands of their oppressors, as many of them actually did, which facilitated the reduction of some of them under the Duke of Parma. Brabant and Flanders capitulated: several cities were betrayed by their Catholic Governors; and the war was carried by their means into the midst of the Seven Provinces, to the great danger of the whole. In many places, where the Roman faction was strongest, they chased away the Protestants as in Boifs le Duc——the Protestants, in like manner, drove out the Papists from Antwerp. That disposition which appeared among the Catholics to join their brethren in religion, and return to the Spanish yoke, occasioned the new union of settlement which was made in 1583, whereby it was declared, that in all the Provinces, which continued firm to the union, the Protestant religion alone should be openly exercised. And in the end, the great body of Papists having rendered themselves odious to the republic, withdrew into the Spanish Provinces, and the Protestants in the territories of Spain sheltered themselves in the Provinces of the union. Their High Mightinesses have now, however, yielded to the allurements of France, what their ancestors more wise and honest, refused to their old Spanish task masters, for at the truce established in 1609, the Archduke Albert, and the King of Spain, could obtain no alteration of the settlement of religion already made. The fatal effects of this new system of alliances in Holland, in opposition to England and the Protestant interest, are at present universally felt in the United Provinces, and without the ablest assistance of their friends, the Protestant cause, and the liberties of the republic, will soon give way to anarchy and despotism.

The navigations of the Duke of Bridgewater, is now become a matter of consideration, whether they are advantageous either to the public or his grace. Eventual circumstances prove the whole a mistaken system. Were the noble duke's views, however, less meritorious? Certainly not; he was deceived by interested Quixotic engineers. Men who carried barges in the air, and broad wheeled waggons in the vallies, granted that these professional men have by clandestine impositions made their fortunes. Upon detection, are the public to continue their bubble? The community are oftener bound by the neglect and ignorance of parliament, than they need be thankful for their determinations. There is a great difference between the disinterested science of 550 members, than the peculative decision of a house of 40. Was his Grace of Bridgewater to recommence improving internal navigation, would he forget the real rivers of Irwell and Mersey? Certainly he would not. The noble Duke would with his present experience gain by improved ballast-work, a section without a lock of 15 feet of water in those rivers, independent of any tide, and then sink the level of all necessary interesting canals accordingly.

It was the opinion of the late Lord Chatham, that the United Provinces were to this country a valuable out-work, and as such ought to be protected and defended by us as much as the out work of a besieged town. If the States were once to become dependant on France, an adieu might be bid to the commerce, and probably to the independence of Great Britain.

DUBLIN, August 3.

In consequence of a wish expressed by a high law character, we hear that a gentlemen intends next session to introduce a bill for the regulation of ecclesiastical courts in this kingdom—The object of which is, that no decision shall be made in them, which is contrary to the verdict of a jury given in any court of law.

From the accounts published by the captains of several Greenland ships already arrived at their respective ports, it does not seem probable that so great a number of vessels have been lost as were mentioned in the English prints to have perished some time since; neither does it appear that this important fishery has turned out unfavourable upon the general scale. Eighteen vessels belonging to Scotland have caught sixty-nine whales, and upwards of four thousand seals, and by what, as yet, we learn from different ports in England, they have not been less successful. While England and Scotland derive annually such benefits from this pursuit, it is shameful that Ireland has made no greater exertions!

We have at present the misfortune of knowing but little of what is called summer weather. So wet and sickly a June and July has seldom been known. Falkland's island, the antipodes of our country, is scarcely more wet. It makes a sort of benefit to the uplands, but the hay mown at the beginning is in a state of rottenness.

It may be useful information to those whose nerves cannot stand the shock of thunder, that no danger is to be apprehended in any case where the lightning and the thunder are not seen, and heard at the same instant; but where the flash is seen and time is given to reckon any seconds, the distance may be estimated at a mile a second, such being the progress of sound through æther.

Captain Henderson, of the Prosperous Mary, just arrived at Belfast, from Alicant, with wines, barrilla, wax, and other articles, relates, that two hours after leaving that port, he fell in with three Algerine cruisers, who, to his great joy and surprise, tacked about to the south east without boarding him or asking any questions. This seems a peculiar instance of providential care, at a time when an epidemic distemper rages in that unfortunate city and kingdom.

We hear that amongst the passengers lately arrived from the east, is a very reverend looking person, who wears the Persian habit, and is said to be a patriarch of the Armenian churches established on the Coromandel coast. This gentleman's business to England is not yet publicly known, but it is whispered about the town, that he has some representations to make to our cout, relative to the oppressed state of the clergy and people of his communion, whose privileges have been much abridged by the government. Time will show whether nabobs are the only game hunted after by the English sportsmen in that quarter of the world.

AMERICA.

BOSTON, October 6.

The supreme executive of this commonwealth, by Thursday evening's mail, received from Congress the constitution proposed by the convention, to be communicated to the legislature as early as possible the next session—and have recommended that a convention be called for the purpose of adopting the same.

Says Shakespear,

——"There is a tide in the affairs of men,
"Which taken at the full, leads on to fortune:
"But if neglected the remainder of their lives
"Is spent in shallows and in misery."

This observation applies with equal force to nations as to individuals; and as the tide of our national EXISTENCE as freemen, appears at near the full, it must be the wish of every good man that it may be immediately improved—that the several bodies through which the glorious fabric, the American constitution, must pass, would not by unnecessary delays lose the critical moment, and precipitate the empire into those "shoals and miseries" which must be the inevitable consequences of missing the tide.

At the adjourned town meeting on Wednesday last, the sum of three thousand pounds was voted, to defray the expence of building a new state-house, as also a plat of land, on which to erect the same.

It is with pleasure we inform the public, that many of our most respectable citizens are now laudably ambitious of appearing clad in leather breeches, thereby encouraging one of the most useful manufactures of our country. It is hoped, that a fashion, so frugal and patriotic, will soon become general, and the ridiculous taste for the glaring frippery of Britain give place to a sensible and manly preference of the SOLID manufactures of America.

On the 20th of August last, the schooner Adams, captain Thompson, of Marblehead, fell in with a ship 50 leagues S. by W. from the isle of Sable, of about 350 tons, laden with cedar and cane poles, from which captain Thompson took her shrouds, running rigging, anchors, &c. no persons being on on board.

NEW-HAVEN, October 4.

At the annual meeting of the association of clergy in this county, last week, the subject of the constitution proposed by the convention was discussed in conversation, and, we are assured that every gentleman present expressed his approbation of it.

HARTFORD, October 8.

Mr. PRINTER,

Publish, or burn the following, as best suits you.

I HAVE lately travelled from Pennsylvania, via New-Jersey and New-York, to this place; the doings of the convention being everywhere the subject of conversation, I was pleased to find them everywhere approved—detained here, by accident, I rode out this morning, to enjoy the extensive and delightful prospect at Wethersfield, near Robbins's tavern, which on my way here I imperfectly saw, it being in the evening. On my return, near the two-mile stone, I fell in with a man, of good appearance, very well mounted, and very inquisitive; he asked me the news, whence I came, and how far I was riding, &c. to all which I readily answered; and in my turn asked the news: we have none here, said he, but the doings of the convention—I find, said I, they are generally approved here—"Yes, said he, but there are very sensible and influential men here, who do not like them; for, if this system of national government is adopted, these states will never be again connected with Great-Britain; which is the only road to happiness and safety."—I made no reply to this patriotic speech, but rode off abruptly. I inclose you a description of the man and his horse, by which you will be able to present him to the public.

A TRAVELLER.

Hartford, October 4, 1787.

POUGHKEEPSIE, (N. Y.) Oct. 3.

To the PRINTER of the Poughkeepsie Advertiser.

A Customer of your's would beg leave to remark that every fœderal soul must feel at this moment, a persuasive impulse to congratulate his countrymen on that fair and wise fabric of government which is now presented for the consideration of America. It discovers so much republican wisdom in the firm and equal balance of the powers of legislation—so much energy in the executive, but so well guarded against excess—so much intelligence in the organization of the judicial department, and in removing every local impediment to the harmony of the whole; that he does not hesitate to yield it his ready and most unreserved admiration. It is armed to be sure with all the customary powers of sovereignty, but those powers are no more than necessary to the uniformity of the plan, and to give the system its proper balance and beautiful proportion. They exist in full latitude in all our state constitutions.—They are indeed co-existent with every effective government on earth, and therefore our true and only ground of security in this as well as in every other representative republics, consists in the election, the rotation, and the responsibility of those men to whom the administration of that government is committed.

Every discerning friend to his country has long wished for a firmer cement to the national union—for a correct and vigorous administration to recall the violated laws of justice—for respect abroad, and tranquility at home—for protection to our commerce and concert to our resources; in short, for some delegated power that might be able to defend our liberties from without, and to guard against the miseries of civil dissention. Those blessings are now presented to our hands. We ought to examine their nature and the foundations on which they are supported. But to examine with candour we presume is only to feel the instantaneous impressions of ardent gratitude and solid conviction. From the anxiety that lately vibrated through the breasts of every honest American, and from the warmth and congratulation that now attend the new system in its progress to every quarter, I will almost venture to say that rubicon is passed, and that the public reputation of America will be impressed for ages on the solid fabric.

Nor am I animated by intemperate zeal. My opinion is founded on a few plain political maxims. For if it be the interest of the American states to be united;—If the only effective and durable bond of union among states, as well as among individuals be a coercive government;—if the republican form of government be the safest and the most compatable with the liberty, the honor and happiness of mankind; and if the perfection of that form consists in the accurate distribution of the legislature, executive and judiciary powers, and in their harmonious union in one coercive point;—if these positions be true (and I think they carry their own evidence along with them) the expediency of adopting the new constitution comes as strongly enforced as any thing which can be offered to the human mind.

Philadelphia, Oct. 16.

An inhabitant of the state of New-Hampshire, by way of ridiculing the rage for paper money which prevails among his countrymen, observes, that a scheme is on foot for introducing an emission of rope-money, to be dealt out by the inch, foot, fathom, &c. which will answer a more valuable purpose than paper; as a shilling will be sufficient to give a man a good whipping, if he attempts to depreciate it; and a larger quantity be sufficient to hang him, if he is detected in any treasonable practices

His highness's attendants are not to steal any locks or keys, tables, forms, cupboards, or other furniture, out of noblemen's or gentlemen's houses where he goes to visit.

Maſter cooks ſhall not employ ſuch ſcullions as go about naked, or lie all night on the ground before the kitchen fire.

No dogs to be kept in the court, but only a few ſpaniels for the ladies.

Dinner to be eat at ten, and ſupper at four.

The officers of his privy chamber ſhall be loving together—no grudging nor mumbling, nor talking of the king's paſtime.

The king's barber is enjoined to be cleanly, not to frequent the company of miſguided women, for fear of danger to the king's royal perſon.

Coal only to be allowed to the king's, queen's and Lady Mary's chambers.

The brewer not to put any brimſtone in the ale.

Amongſt the fiſhes for the table is mentioned the porpoiſe; if too big for a horſe load, an extra allowance to the purveyor.

Twenty-four loaves a day allowed for his highneſs's greyhounds.

Ordered, that all noblemen and gentlemen at the end of the ſeſſions of the parliament depart to their ſeveral counties, on pain of his royal diſpleaſure.

The following extracts from the letters of a gentleman who viſited the Weſtern Country muſt, we think, be pleaſing to our readers—we have therefore obtained a tranſlation of them from the French, in which language they were originally written and publiſhed.

'THE Ohio is the grand artery of that part of America beyond the mountains—it is the centre where all the waters meet, which on the one ſide run from the Allegancy mountains, and on the other come from the highland in the vicinity of the lakes Erie and Michigan.

'It has been calculated that the region watered by thoſe rivers, &c. compriſed between Pittſburgh and the Miſſiſſippi, contains at leaſt 260 000 ſquare miles, equal to 166 920,000 acres: it is, without a doubt, the moſt fertile country—the diverſified and beſt watered ſoil, and that which offers to agriculture and commerce the moſt abundant and eaſy reſources of all thoſe that the Europeans have heretofore diſcovered and peopled.

'It was on the 10th of April, at 8 o'clock in the morning, that we quitted the key of Pittſburgh, and gave ourſelves up to the current of the Ohio—this navigation requires neither effort nor labour, but merely the art of ſteering well, knowing and avoiding the ſhoals, &c. and keeping in the middle of the channel—without either ſails or oars we proceed along at the rate of from three to five miles an hour, according to the diſpoſition of the winds, and the different windings of the river, which almoſt throughout preſerves a width of from two to three hundred fathoms—we were at the beginning of the increaſe; already its waters had riſen 9 feet at the key of Pittſburgh, and I never found leſs than 12 at any time that I ſounded.

'This ſweet and tranquil navigation appeared to me like an agreeable dream—every moment preſented to me new perſpectives, which were inceſſantly diverſified by the appearance of the iſlands, points, and the windings of the river, without intermiſſion, changed by this ſingular mixture of ſhores more or leſs woody; whence the eye eſcaped from time to time to obſerve the great natural meadows which preſented themſelves, inceſſantly embelliſhed by promontories of different heights, which for a moment ſeemed to hide, and then gradually unfolded to the eyes of the navigator the bays and inlets more or leſs extenſive, formed by the creeks and rivulets which fall into the Ohio; what majeſty in the mouths of the great rivers which we paſſed! their waters ſeemed to be as vaſt and as profound as thoſe of the river upon which we floated; I never before felt myſelf ſo much diſpoſed for meditation; my imagination involuntarily leaped into futurity; the abſence of which was not afflicting, becauſe it appeared to me nigh; I ſaw thoſe beautiful ſhores* ornamented with decent houſes, covered with harveſts and well cultivated fields: on the hills expoſed to the north, I ſaw orchards regularly laid out in ſquares; on the others vineyard plats, plantations of mulberry trees, acacias, &c. I ſaw there alſo, in the inferior lands, the cotton trees, and the ſugar maple, the ſap of which had become an object of commerce: I agree, however, that all thoſe banks did not appear to me equally proper for culture, but as they will probably remain covered by their native foreſts, it muſt add to the beauty—to the variety of this future ſpectacle. What an immenſe chain of plantations! What a long ſucceſſion of activity, induſtry, culture and commerce is offered to the Americans! I conſider then the ſettling of the lands which are watered by this river, as one of the fineſt conqueſts that could ever be preſent to man; it will be ſo much the more glorious, as it will be legally acquired of the ancient proprietors, and will not exact a ſingle drop of blood; it is deſtined to become the ſource of force, riches, and the future glory of the United States.

'Towards noon on the third day we anchored at the mouth of the Muſkingum, in two fathoms and a half of water. In order to give you a weak idea of what I call the anatomy of the Ohio, I will ſpeak to you of this river, and let you have a glimpſe of what will one day be the utility of all its branches:—It falls into the Ohio 172 miles from Pittſburgh, and is 120 fathoms wide—it is deep and navigable for large veſſels to 147 miles in the inner part of the lands—its current is moderate, and never overflows the banks, which are elevated without being ſteep—one of its branches approaches all at once the greateſt of the ſources of the Sciato, called the Seccaium, and the river Sanduſky—this laſt falls as you know into the great bay of the ſame name at the bottom of Lake Erie—it is towards one of the principal branches of the Muſkingum that the great ſavage village of Tuſcarawa is built, whence a carriage of two miles leads to the river Cayahoga, deep and rather rapid, the mouth of which in Lake Erie forms an excellent harbour for ſhips of 200 tons. This place ſeems to be deſigned for a ſpot for a town, and many perſons of my acquaintance have already thought of it. All the travellers and hunters have ſpoken to me with admiration of the fertility of the plains and hills watered by the Muſkingum, alſo of the excellent fountains ſalt pits coal mines, (particularly that of Lamenchicola) of free ſtones, &c. that they find throughout.'

* They are from 20 to 25 feet in height at low water, and do not degrade themſelves at all.

The ſloop Cato, John Watts, from New-York to Martha Brae, was on the night of the 4th of Auguſt, in a heavy gale, wrecked on the Grand Caicos reef.

From the MASSACHUSETTS CENTINEL.

The GRAND CONSTITUTION:

Or, the PALLADIUM of COLUMBIA:

A NEW FEDERAL SONG.

Tune—Our Freedom we've won, &c.

FROM ſcenes of affliction—Columbia oppreſt—
Of credit expiring—and commerce diſtreſt,
Of nothing to do—and of nothing to pay—
From ſuch diſmal ſcenes let us haſten away.

Our freedom we've won, and the prize let's maintain,
Our hearts are all right—
Unite, boys, unite,
And our Empire in glory ſhall ever remain.

The Muſes no longer the cypreſs ſhall wear—
For we turn our glad eyes to a proſpect more fair;
The ſoldier return'd to his ſmall cultur'd farm,
Enjoys the reward of his conquering arm.

Our freedom we've won, &c.

Our trade and our commerce ſhall reach far and wide,
And riches and honour flow in with each tide,
Kamtſchatka and China with wonder ſhall ſtare,
That the Federal Stripes ſhould wave gracefully there,

Our freedom we've won, &c.

With gratitude let us acknowledge the worth
Of what the Convention has call'd into birth,
And the continent wiſely confirm what is done
By Franklin the ſage, and by brave Waſhington.

Our freedom we've won, &c.

The wiſe Conſtitution let's truly revere,
It points out the courſe for our Empire to ſteer,
For oceans of bliſs do they hoiſt the broad ſail,
And peace is the current, and plenty the gale.

Our freedom we've won, &c.

With gratitude fill'd—let the great commonweal
Paſs round the full glaſs to republican zeal—
From ruin—their judgment and wiſdom well aim'd,
Our liberties, laws and our credit reclaim'd.

Our freedom we've won, &c.

Here plenty and order and freedom ſhall dwell,
And your Shayſes and Dayſes won't dare to rebel—
Independence and culture ſhall graciouſly ſmile,
And the Huſbandman reap the full fruit of his toil.

Our freedom we've won, &c.

That theſe are the bleſſings, Columbia knows—
The bleſſings the Fed'ral Convention beſtows.
O! then let the people confirm what is done
By Franklin the ſage, and by brave Waſhington.

Our freedom we've won, and the prize will maintain;
By Jove we'll unite,
Approve and unite—
And huzza for Convention again and again.

ENGLISH ANECDOTE.

IN the year 1311, being the fourth of King Edward II the barons of the kingdom roſe againſt Pierce Gaveſton, the king's favourite, and among other new laws they obtained that parliaments, i. e. the houſe of commons, ſhould be free from the controul of the crown and its miniſters, and that they ſhould be choſen annually. Gaveſton was baniſhed for ever, on account of having given the king advice contrary to the ſentiments of his parliament; and to prevent ſuch innovation in future, it was the ſame year ordained by a public ſtatute, that one biſhop, two earls and two barons, ſhould be choſen in every parliament, who were to receive complaints againſt the king's miniſters, and others who ſhould tranſgreſs the laws of the conſtitution, or give ſecret advice to the king inconſiſtent with the dignity and rights of parliament, and the general welfare of the nation. The principal noblemen who came forward on this occaſion in behalf of their country were the earls of Pembroke, Glouceſter, Arundel, Hereford, Warwick, Lancaſter and Surrey. The earl of Surrey the ſame year (Gaveſton having come to England) caught the traitor, and conveyed him to Warwick caſtle, where he was beheaded.

In the Caſe of John Meyer,

A BANKRUPT.

WHEREAS the petitioning creditor of John Meyer, bankrupt, hath prayed his Excellency the Preſident of this ſtate to enlarge the time for the ſurrender of the ſaid bankrupt until the ninth day of November next, which hath been granted: Notice thereof is hereby given to the creditors of the ſaid John Meyer, and that the Commiſſioners will meet on that day at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the State-Houſe, in the city of Philadelphia, when and where the creditors of the ſaid bankrupt may attend and prove their debts.

By order of the Commiſſioners,
JOHN JENNINGS, Clerk.

Office, Watkins-Alley, Oct. 15 1787. 16,29 8

This Plantation has not been tenanted for 3 years is a most pleasing and desirable situation, and capable of great improvement at a small expence; there are 259 acres of timber land, a greater part of which is very valuable. The improvements upon it are, a good dwelling house with three large rooms on each floor, kitchen, quarter, corn house, stables, tobacco house, and two very fine apple orchards, one of which contains 220 trees, together with a number of other valuable fruit trees.

Foreign Intelligence.

PARIS, July 10.

M. De Calonne, some time ago, having ordered M. de Vrymeranges to take out of the hands of Mr. Bire, treasurer of the war department, and some others, to the amount of eleven millions, 500 000 livres; which was distributed to some bankers, to sustain the credit of the funds of the French East India Company and others, Mr. de Vrymeranges, willing to justify himself, has exposed the whole affair, and a commission has been appointed of four Counsellors of State, and a Master of Zequests, to examine into this affair, and to try if any of money can be recovered.

UTRECHT, August 20.

We yesterday received an account that some Prussian troops were arrived at Cleves, and that a great number were marching towards the same place, which is to be the general quarters. We have this day received a confirmation of their march, and that the said troops, which do not exceed the number of 8000 or 10,000 men, are to remain in the different provinces of the Prussian Guelderland, without proceeding any further, and are only intended, as are those in camp at Givet, in France, to support the mediation of their respective sovereigns. But there is little probability of effecting a conciliation, unless one of the two assemblies which call themselves the state of Utrecht, will give way, and this they seem neither of them inclined to do at present.

August 21. It was generally thought that the attack of this city was decided in the council at Amersfort and we have been in expectation of its taking place every hour, particularly in the nights of the 1st, 10th, and 17th, from certain preparations which were observed in the stadtholderian army. However, nothing has yet occurred, and from the supply of troops and artillery since received in the city, we are in no fear of a surprise.

HAGUE, August 7.

Last Saturday the corps of armed citizens of the province of Holland, presented a declaration to their noble and great mightinesses, by which they require the hereditary prince stadtholder to be suspended from all his charges, and to be banished from the province of Holland, and not to suffer the princess of Orange and her children to enter the said province as long as the troubles subsist, insisting that justice is sufficient to prevent tumults; and if that authority should be found insufficient, they will take care of it themselves, &c. This declaration has been rendered commissorial.

LONDON, June 16.

Our able negociator at Paris, and his immaculate masters in London, have made a pretty piece of business with their commercial treaty, and new fangled system of friendship with our old enemy.—They have sowed the seeds of war—stocks have fallen—the merchants are alarmed—and India veers towards a French government.—Every thing left of British glory is however to be sacrificed to preserve peace—and, if nothing else will do, Gibraltar is to be ceded.

The duke of Richmond is making every preparation for war—all the old muskets are scouring—the mortar and the pestle are brightened up, a new ramrod is bespoke for the old blunderbuss, a fosse and ditch are immediately to surround Privy Gardens—the playhouse is to be converted into a barrack for the artillery—and his grace loaded with plans, means to survey Tower Ditch, Blackwall, Deptford, Greenwich, and the isle of Dogs, where lighters filled with combustibles, and commanded by captain Luttrel, and other experienced officers are to be stationed, to annoy the French men of war, in their passage up to London-bridge. A fleet of those light transports called sculls, are to scour the Thames up to Stains, and a heavy fortification of pop guns and patteraros are to defend Privy Garden on the back side. His grace, (should the French attempt Westminster-Bridge) means to command in person, in the very coat he wore when he made that spirited concession to lord Rawdon in the house of peers.—Who's afraid?

Unless a proclamation issues to prohibit the exportation of oak and elm into France, our best woods will be felled, and the timber exported before the meeting of parliament. Why don't lord Howe open his sleepy eyes to this matter? Mr. Pitt and Mr. Dundas are too intent upon their purposed tour to Scotland, to see any thing but the prospect of pleasure at present, and the marquis of Buckingham is taken up so fully with his blue ribbon, and the duke of Richmond with his fortifications, that all the navy of England might escape unnoticed by them, into the French docks.

The first blow which the French strike will be in the East Indies. They have now in that part of the world a large fleet, fully adequate to the destruction of all British property; and the army of Hyder Ally, under the discipline of French teachers, is now as fine a body of troops as any in Asia.

Should a war take place, the marquis of Buckingham will take an active part in the cabinet. He is a soldier, and has been in the militia, and in camp, and knows something of marches and counter marches, and all that sort of thing. In short, he is the man of all men to face the French on the field, and the chancellor in the cabinet.

A letter from a gentleman at the Hague says, that a numerous body of Prussian troops is assembling on the frontiers of the United Provinces with a view of assisting the prince of Orange, should his enemies attempt any further hostile measures against his constitutional prerogatives; in which case, adds the letter, the Prussian generals have received peremptory orders to act offensively, in order to bring those deluded men to a proper sense of their error.

June 25 Mr. Palmer, comptroller general of the post office, is going to Paris, where, after settling his private business he means to communicate to the French ministry his ideas on the subject of their posts; and it is imagined that they will adopt the whole of his plan, and that mail coaches will be established through all the French dominions.

According to the foreign prints, the emperor on parting with the king of Poland tenderly embraced him, and said, loud enough to be heard by the attendants: "I am accused of ambitious views; but I assure you, upon my honor, that while I live I will never take so much as a tree belonging to Poland. This I tell you, and you may tell the world, that the emperor said so at Korsom."

The only colourable charge against his highness the prince of Orange is, that he designedly protracted the failing of the Dutch fleet, and thereby prevented their joining the French and Spanish fleets. Were this the fact, it proves the stadtholder to have the true interest of his country at heart; because, if through the aid of Holland, England had been crushed, the Dutch themselves would ultimately have been solely at the mercy of France and Spain.

Upwards of two thousand letters from Boston have been received by the merchants last week, which contain some very capital remittances, and orders for large quantities of various sorts of goods.

Just as the king's messenger was embarking at Helvoetsluys, lord George Gordon landed,—arrayed in his republican cockade and tremendous toledo vowing destruction against the French and Romish faction; and as he has done with law in one country, he is determined to support the gospel in another!

Whoever takes but a cursory view of the map and the present state of Holland, may form a probable guess of the manner in which the existing disputes of that country will terminate. The king of Prussia will probably be contented with a part of Guelderland—while the emperor will give freedom to the commercial advantages of Antwerp, by obtaining the country on both sides of the Scheld, and the consequent free navigation of that river. The prince of Orange, with the remaining part of the Dutch Netherlands, and the spice islands, &c, may add another elector to the German empire, and the states be ordered to the domestic government of their respective districts. Mutual jealousy will operate so as to make England and France remain as they are; though the latter will have a little secret understanding with the emperor, which, at all events, they will, for the present, keep to themselves.

At a late meeting of the Royal Society of Medicine in Louvre, at Paris, the secretary declared, that in the year 1785, the society announced a prize of 600 livres, founded by the king, for the following question.

"In what species, and at what time in chronick diseases, a fever may be salutary or dangerous, and with what precautions it should be excited or moderated?"

June 26. France is determined to frustrate the best plan ever devised by any minister for relieving the nation's distresses.—War or no war, the court of Versailles will annually put us to some extraordinary expence to prevent our decreasing our debt a single shilling.

Extract of a letter from Bengal to a gentleman in Edinburgh.

'Several of the country princes have sent presents to lord Cornwallis, which he has nobly refused, politely informing them, that he came to redress the grievances of the oppressed, and not to multiply them by extortion and rapine. This is a new sort of language in India.'

In a former paper we mentioned the large naval equipments going forward at Cadiz. In addition to which, we now inform the public, that similar preparations are making at Ferrol, and all other capital sea-ports in Spain.

The Portuguese have fitted out a small squadron, part of which is ordered to convoy a fleet of merchantmen and transports to the Brazils.

The report in Paris, that a Congress, consisting of the English, French and Prussian ambassadors, will be held, in order to meditate the affairs of Holland.

We hear from Leghorn, that on the 1st instant, news arrived there, that the king of Sardinia has thought proper to invade and take four forts, and the town of Savona, belonging to the states of Genoa, under pretence that the herdsmen belonging to the states, committed ravages on the Piedmont territories. The states have in consequence sent a courier to Paris, and another to Vienna, to implore the protection and mediation of the two courts; and another to the Swiss cantons, to obtain from the Helveticks a body of six thousand men, to defend the republic from any future attacks from Sardinia.

The Utrecht Gazette mentions, that the stadtholder has been requested by his council at Amersfort, to go to the Hague, at the head of his troops, and make that place his head quarters.

Extract of a letter from the Hague, June 15.

'The prince stadtholder seems hitherto to fix his residence at Amersfort; he has even made an excursion to Zeist, three miles from Utrecht. The movement of the troops that were sent in pursuit of the deserters gave alarm to the little stadtholderian army, which made a precipitate retreat.'

June 28. The Dutch war will probably afford a nouville style of slaughter and devastation: other powers may pursue the old mode of opening trenches, and blowing their foreign enemies to perdition, by the mouths of their cannon; but the Mynheers will only open their dyke sluices, and drown legions of their own countrymen, like so many blind puppies!

Among the present easy arrangements of modern life, we observe judges in little wigs, serjeants at law in less, and simple barristers parading Westminster-hall in gown, tye, bands, boots and leather breeches.

Aug. 9. A Memorial presented to their Noble and Great Mightinesses the Lords States of Holland & West-Friesland, by his excellency the baron Thulemeyer, envoy extraordinary of his Prussian Majesty.

'Noble, Great and Mighty Lords,

'The underwritten envoy extraordinary of his Prussian majesty has sent to the king his master the resolution which your noble and great mightinesses have remitted him, in answer to his memorial of the 10th of July, concerning the outrage committed on the person of the august sister of that monarch.

'It was with the utmost astonishment his majesty learned that, instead of satisfying his just demand by the offer of a satisfaction suitable to the insult, you have supported an evasive answer by weak arguments. His majesty will admit that the pretended ignorance of the motives which conducted her royal highness to the Hague, and the apprehension of a popular commotion, can ever excuse conduct of the commission sitting at Woerden. Such a suspicion publicly announced is a new offence. The word of the Princess, her solemn declaration, that her journey to the Hague was with the most salutary views, such as to reconcile their minds, and to procure a means of reconciliation, ought to have been a full conviction to the deputies of your noble and great mightinesses. If the people, penetrated with gratitude for the illustrious house of the founders of their liberty and of the Belgic independence, should have been misled; if the appearance of the august consort of the stadtholder had produced any demonstration of joy, so as to disturb the public tranquility, the means of defending the residence of a sovereign free from all dangers (apparently exaggerated) was ever in the power of yourselves: besides, the care with which her royal highness prevented the proofs of an imprudent zeal, in concealing from the public her intended arrival, was a fresh cause for the gratitude of government.

'It is at the Hague, noble, great and mighty lords, it is at the place where every citizen ought to enjoy that full liberty established by the wisdom of your ancestors, that a resolution is taken to refuse the sister of a great monarch, and the consort of a prince who enjoys the greatest dignities of your state, admission into the province of Holland.

'The king will not employ himself in looking into the lawfulness of the right of resistance which the commission of Woerden attribute to itself upon this occasion. His majesty will rather fix his attention on the manner it has been put in execution. The equipage of her royal highness was surrounded by soldiers, and her train was more like that of a prisoner of state than of a great princess, respectable for her illustrious birth, her noble qualities, her virtue, and for her sentiments, which she always dedicated to the good of the republic. Scarce had her royal highness got to Schoonhoven, when guards were placed at every avenue of the house, and an officer even set in her apartment with a drawn sword. Such shameful proceedings have made a deep impression in the mind of the king my master, who looks on the injury as done to himself. It is by the express orders of that monarch that the underwritten again demands from your noble and great mightinesses an immediate and proper satisfaction for the insult; and his majesty moreover enjoins me to inform you, that he will always insist on this satisfaction, and that he will not be content with the discussion of actions, with vague excuses nor any further delay.

'The king does not forget the regard due to the republic of the United Provinces, and to the illustrious assembly of the states general, which represent the sovereign of the state; his majesty is pleased to applaud with gratitude and sensibility the visible disavowal their high mightinesses have manifested with regard to the measures adopted in Holland concerning the affair which has given occasion to the present memorial. The testimonies of friendship which the king and his august predecessors have always shewn to the republic of the United Provinces on many interesting and critical occasions authorize his majesty to expect a just return of regard and satisfaction for the insult in question, which the underwritten is charged again to notify to you. It is from your prudence, noble and great lords, and from the renewal of your further deliberations on this subject, that the King expects an immediate and satisfactory answer.

Hague, Aug. 6, 1787.

August 21. It is said, that in consequence of what has passed between the Courts of France and Berlin, his Prussian Majesty has ordered his army to proceed no farther; and has sent a memorial to the French Court, with a view to the perfect reinstatement of the Stadtholder in all his functions, with every solemnity and formality that can give brilliancy to his fresh inauguration.

In the Utrecht Gazette of the 13th of this month, an extract is inserted of a memorial from the Baron de Rheede, Envoy Extraordinary from their High Mightinesses at the Court of Berlin to the States General, informing them, that the Prussian Court had proposed to that of Versailles, some points on which a mediation might be begun with respect to the affairs of Holland. The points are said to be, that the military shall be recalled from the province of Utrecht; that the differences subsisting in the city of Utrecht shall be left to the decision of mediators; that the province of Holland shall not force the other provinces to annul their regulations of government; that the suspension of the Captain General shall be revoked, and the government of the Hague restored to the Prince; that the Princess shall be requested to return to Holland, and that the licentiousness of the press shall be restrained.

The King of Prussia's last memorial is worded in such a manner as to convince the patriots that he is in earnest; and that they have nothing now to depend on but the friendship of the French Court. Comply with the King of Prussia's memorial they certainly cannot, and he does not appear to be one of those whom fine speeches and delays will have any effect upon.

The utmost that France engaged to do for Holland, by their last treaty, was to furnish 12,000 troops, 11 ships of the line, and 6 frigates.

Extract of a letter from Tangiers, July 8.

'The English Consul General is returned within these eight days from the Moorish Court, and has agreed with his Moorish Majesty, that all that has passed shall be forgotten on both sides. The exorbitant duties on horned cattle transported from hence to Gibraltar, are lessened and reduced to the standard of former treaties. The English Consul has obtained permission to build a house, but has not been able to succeed in his purpose of establishing factories at Larache and Martin, the port of Tetuan. The good dispositions of the King of Morocco towards the English have been bought at the following prices:—

'First day's audience. Two very elegant gold watches, valued at 600l. sterling each. These his Majesty demanded, they are set with diamonds and emeralds, and are the same he presented Major Curtis with in 1783. Five pieces of superfine cloth, making together 130 ells: six pieces of fine cambric, a small carriage or chaise with a head; two boxes of liquors, containing each 20 bottles; one chest of tea, and two of sugar.

'Second audience. Two pieces of superfine cloth, making together 180 ells; two pots of porcelain filled with confectionary.

'Third audience. An elegant gold watch, set in diamonds. It is much doubted here whether the reconciliation between the Court of London and that of Morocco, will be lasting.'

Orders of Privy Council have been just issued for the better regulation of vessels trading to the United States of America.

A gentleman living on the banks of a river, near Harleston, in Norfolk, by means of his dogs, discovered three young otters; the dogs destroyed two, the other he preserved unhurt; and having at home a bitch with puppies, placed this amphibious creature amongst them, which was shewn an equal tenderness to, and now follows him about with his dogs, and goes into his room with him, and though within a few yards of his native element, shews no inclination to immerge.

Observations on the Leech Worm, by a gentleman who kept one several years for the purpose of a Weather Glass:——

A phial of water, containing a leech, I kept on the frame of my lower sash chamber window, so that when I looked in the morning, I could know what would be the weather of the following day.

If the weather proves serene and beautiful, the leech lies motionless at the bottom of the glass, and rolled together in a spiral form.

If it rains either before or after noon, it is found crept up to the top of its lodging, and there it remains till the weather is settled.

If we are to have wind, the poor prisoner gallops through its limpid habitation with amazing swiftness, and seldom rests till it begins to blow hard.

If a remarkable storm of thunder and rain is to succeed, for some days before it lodges almost continually without the water, and discovers uncommon uneasiness, in violent throws and convulsive-like motions.

In the frost, as in clear summer weather, it lies constantly at the bottom. And in snow as in rainy weather, it pitches its dwelling upon the very mouth of the phial.

What reason may be assigned for them, I must leave philosophers to determine; this one thing is evident to every body, that it must be affected in the same way with that of the mercury and spirits in the weather glass, and has, doubtless, a very surprising sensation, that the change of weather, even days before, makes a visible alteration upon its manner of living.

Perhaps it would not be amiss to note, lest any of the curious should try the experiment, that the leech was kept in a common eight ounce phial glass, and about three-fourths filled with water and covered on the mouth with a bit of a linen rag. In the summer the water is changed once a week, and in the winter once a fortnight. This is a weather glass which may be purchased at a very trifling expence, and which will last I do not know how many years.

August 28. The pacific appearance, which affairs on the Continent had begun to assume, has changed greatly since Friday last. Forty thousand soldiers are now said to be at Minden. Another report says, that a very large body of French troops is embarking at Cherbourg, and the other ports on the north of France. In addition to the intelligence relative to the disturbances at the Hague, it is now positively asserted, that the Emperor refuses to join in any pacific mediation, from which it is concluded, that while professions of friendship have been making to the Court of Vienna, to the Stadtholder, and the King of Prussia, the Emperor has determined to join France, in order to frustrate the peaceful intentions of the Courts of Berlin and London. To this his Imperial Majesty may not have been a little induced by his own views. He has long looked with a jealous eye on the power and prosperity of the House of Brandenburgh, and has been flattered by the Cabinet of Versailles into the persuasion, that the time is arrived for him to exert himself. We remember the extraordinary secrecy observed in the Cabinet of Vienna, when the march of the Imperial troops was first determined on—a secrecy altogether unnecessary, if there were not other views than those of merely quelling the disturbances in the Austrian Netherlands.

Other accounts relative to the Dutch affairs say, that a large body of French troops are already safely garrisoned in the Hague; that they were clandestinely conducted thither by night, in small numbers, from town to town, which are in the interest of the patriotic party, habited as peasants, and in smock-frocks, &c. that immediately on their arrival they were reconnoitered, in true military array, with commanders in their front; that large warehouses were opened, well stored with accoutrements and cloathing, and from these the troops were immediately furnished on their arrival.

The patriotic party had encamped behind Sir James Harris's house at the Hague, where his person and property being in the most alarming situation, and his life threatened, most of his state papers, with some other articles of value, have been conveyed to London, and are now safely deposited in the house of his sister, the Hon. Mrs Robinson, in Park street, Westminster. It is added the patriots have also taken possession of Delft—that Monsieur de Verac, the French Minister at the Hague, has declared that an army, treble the number of the King of Prussia's, shall be immediately marched to the support of Holland, if his Prussian Majesty presumes to make any further advances to the frontiers—and that the forces in Utrecht in the patriotic interest, are now known to be much more numerous and powerful than had been before suspected, and seemed to be gathering strength every moment.

Mr Pitt was preparing for a journey to Burton Pynsent, on a visit to his mother, his carriage at his door when this news arrived. His attendance in the Cabinet, being too essential to admit of such indulgence, he has of course been detained in town ever since.

Such are the reports at present in circulation, rumours of this sort could not fail of having some effect upon the stocks. Accordingly they have undergone, since Saturday morning, a fall of near two per cent. Many of these reports, indeed, may be nothing more than publications for this purpose. We hear, however, that every Lieutenant in the navy has received the strictest orders to hold himself in readiness, and upon no consideration whatever to be absent from home; and we do not think it improbable, but that they may speedily be wanted.

Yesterday we received an account that the auxiliary camp at Woerden had struck their tents, and were marching down by the Rhine. In the evening we received further accounts that they were pursuing their march, apparently towards the Hague, upon which ten men per company were ordered to be under arms, and a detachment sent to Hoorbrug, with strict orders not to let any armed men pass, and to repulse force by force.

Philadelphia, Oct. 17.

We are informed from the best authority, that the viceroy of Santa Fee has lately given a new proof of his humanity, in regard to the native Indians on the coast of Darien, with whom the Spaniards have been at war for many years past. Every thing was ready to ensure the entire conquest of the coast, and the unconditional submission of its inhabitants, according to the laws of war, when the viceroy, with that philanthropic spirit which is so conspicuous in all the actions of this truly great and good man, signified to many of his friends, by whom he was surrounded, that he should be extremely happy if, agreeable to his earnest wishes, he could terminate the quarrel without further bloodshed, notwithstanding the cruelties committed on the part of the Indians since the commencement of hostilities, by murdering without mercy, or any just cause of complaint, one hundred and ten Spanish soldiers, three officers, two women and a child, who escaped from shipwreck on the coast of Darien in the year 1782, and by burning all the houſes at San Geronimo de Buena Viſta, and putting the defenceleſs inhabitants to the ſword, without diſtinction of age or ſex. To effect the gracious purpoſes of peace, the viceroy gave orders for an ambaſſador to proceed to the head-quarters of the Indians without delay, in order to acquaint them with his humane determination, which was to treat them with every kind of lenity and undiſſembled friendſhip, if they were definitively reſolved to live in an amicable manner for the future. The Indians received the ambaſſador with every token of reſpect, and liſtened to him with great attention; and, after ſeveral meetings, they reſolved to diſpatch their general and chief men to confer with the viceroy upon terms of peace and amity. Some few days after the Indian miſſionaries had arrived at Carthagena, the matter was finally ſettled with the viceroy, in the preſence of his court, by which the peace of the province of Darien is firmly eſtabliſhed according to the true laws of juſtice and humanity. This event was celebrated at Carthagena by ſinging te deum with uncommon ſolemnity; and was concluded by many other public rejoicings.

We are further informed, that the viceroy, from the entrance of thoſe rude people into Carthagena, until the day of their leaving it, exerted himſelf continually to make them ſatisfied with their reception; and, at their departure, loaded them with the richeſt preſents.

Laſt week the BAPTIST Churches belonging to the middle ſtates, convened at New-York, in aſſociation by their repreſentatives. After finiſhing the particular buſineſs on which they met as a religious body, it was agreed to incorporate with their general circuler letter, the following recommendation to their people of the propoſed plan of the Fœderal Government—which has been handed to the printers by a correſpondent, and redounds much to their honor as a ſociety.

After congratulating their brethren on the great increaſe of their churches the year paſt—they proceed, "we alſo congratulate you on the kind interpoſition of Divine Providence viſible in that happy unanimity which obtained among the members of the late Fœderal Convention, to agree upon, and report to the ſtates in this union, a form of Fœderal Government, which promiſes, on its adoption, to reſcue our dear country from that national diſhonor, injuſtice, anarchy, confuſion and bloodſhed, which have already reſulted from the weakneſs and inefficiency of the preſent form, and which we have the greateſt reaſon to fear is but the beginning of ſorrows, unleſs the people lay hold on this favorable opportunity offered to eſtabliſh an EFFICIENT government, which, we hope may, under God, ſecure our invaluable rights, both civil and religious, and which it will be in the power of the great body of the people, if hereafter found neceſſary, to controul and amend."

To the Honorable the Legiſlature of the State of NEW-JERSEY.

The PETITION of the Juſtices and Freeholders of the County of BURLINGTON,

Reſpectfully Sheweth,

THAT they have read, and conſidered with attention, the Conſtitution for the United States of America, as propoſed by the late Federal Convention; that the ſame appears to them well calculated to amend the defects of the former Conſtitution, and to promote the laſting welfare and happineſs of the Union.

They therefore humbly requeſt, that your honorable body, in conformity to the opinion of the ſaid Convention, would recommend to the people of this ſtate immediately to chuſe delegates for a State Convention; in order to take into conſideration the ſaid Federal Conſtitution, and if approved of, to ratify the ſame in behalf of the ſtate of New-Jerſey.

By order of the Board,
JOSHUA M. WALLACE, Chairman.
Burlington, Oct. 3. 1787. (COPY.)

AT a meeting of the inhabitants of the county of Burlington, intitled to vote for repreſentatives in the council and general aſſembly, held at Burlington, on Tueſday the 9th day of October, 1787.

Reſolved, That it is the ſenſe of this meeting, that our repreſentatives ſhould be inſtructed, and they are hereby inſtructed, to move in the legiſlature, or to ſupport the motion, "That the legiſlature of this ſtate recommend to the people, immediately to chuſe delegates for a State Convention, in order to take into conſideration the Conſtitution propoſed by the late Federal Convention, and, if approved of, to ratify the ſame, in behalf of the ſtate of New-Jerſey."

By direction of the Meeting,
JOSHUA M. WALLACE,
Judge of the election for Repreſentatives, held ſaid day. (COPY.)

Extract of a letter from Rouſſeau (Dominica) dated Auguſt 29. 1787.

'This morning about 4 o'clock came on a ſevere gale from the north-weſt, attended with thunder, lightning and heavy rain, and blew with uncommon fury till about half paſt five; when it abated for a ſhort time, but about 6 came round to the ſouth-weſt, and raged with additional violence till paſt 7. The melancholy effects of this ſtorm are but too viſible in our ſtreets, and on the coaſt to need our deſcription. For the information of thoſe further removed from the ſcene of deſtruction, (and we almoſt dread to hear the accounts from the country) we ſhall obſerve, that ſcarce a ſtreet in town but what exhibits ſeveral marks of its fury: ſome houſes totally deſtroyed, others unroofed; and from the want of lumber, and of veſſels to ſend for it to the neighbouring iſlands, the perſons and property of many of the inhabitants muſt for ſome time remain expoſed to the weather, at this unfavourable ſeaſon, when the rains are heavy and frequent.

'The ſhip Caton, which eſcaped the laſt gale, lies ſtranded on the beach near the river; the brig Henry and Elixa, which ſuffered ſo ſeverely, and rode out the ſtorm of the 23d, was forced from her anchors and diſmaſted; we have however ſince learned, that ſhe fetched Prince Rupert's bay: the brig Queen Charlotte got out to ſea, and has ſince returned to port with the loſs of her foremaſt.

'The garriſon on Bruce's hill felt the ſtorm with inconceivable ſeverity; and perhaps none but thoſe who were in it can form an idea of the horrors of the ſcene. Nothing could withſtand the fury of the gale, and one block-houſe, ſtripped of its covering, with another almoſt down, and the magazine, conſtitutes the whole of the remaining buildings. We are happy to find that there is yet no account of any lives being loſt; though ſome of the officers and ſeveral of the men are ſeverely wounded. Of the former number are Capt. Maſterton and Lieut. Gore; the latter ſo violently as to be for a long time ſpeechleſs; and is ſtill in a very dangerous ſituation. The long range of officers' barracks gave way early; a part of the wreck of which ſtruck Capt Brereton's horſe and killed him, having broke his back and otherwiſe ſhockingly bruiſed him; as did the ſcattered fragments ſeveral other horſes on the hill.

'The left of the head-quarters was tore off and carried to ſome diſtance whilſt M Campbell was in it, who was with ſome difficulty extricated from the ruins; when, to the honour of the feelings of that gentleman, his firſt care was with the moſt tender ſolicitude to ſeek for and relieve a faithful grenadier, who had ſtood by and aſſiſted him through the whole of the ſcene of devaſtation and diſtreſs, which he fortunately effected. The hill now exhibits the moſt melancholy ſcene of deſolation: it is indeed one of thoſe objects well calculated to awaken the ſenſualiſt from the ſtupor of ſelf-gratification, to contemplate and ſhare in the misfortunes of his fellow mortals; and he muſt be poſſeſſed of a breaſt of a contexture ſomewhat approximating unto marble or adamant who could ſurvey ſuch a ſcene of havoc and devaſtation unmoved. At ſuch a ſight the boſom of ſenſibility will feaſt in the luxury of participation of woes not immediately its own; and the conduits of ſympathy will yield the tribute of a tear.'

Extract of a letter from Naſſau, Sept. 15.

'Long-Iſland has ſhared in the diſtreſs occaſioned by the late gale, but to what extent we are not informed. The injury done to the cotton plantations on Exuma is found to be trifling, compared with what it was at firſt eſtimated at.

'The ſloop Cato, John Watts, maſter, from New-York for Martha Brae in Jamaica, laden with Indian corn, flour and lumber, was on the night of the 4th of Auguſt, in a heavy gale, wrecked on the Grand Caicos reef. The veſſel and cargo are loſt—the crew after being 31 days on a deſert iſland were taken on board by one of our wreckers, and brought to this port the 12th inſtant.

'A large French ſhip, name unknown, homeward bound, was caſt away ſome time in laſt month on the Hogſties—the crew it is ſuppoſed, after getting aſhore on the keys, have been taken off by ſome veſſel and carried to St. Domingo.

'The ſchooner Scorpion, Darvell, of this port, was caſt away the 27th inſt. on Heneaga. The crew are ſaved, but the veſſel is entirely loſt.'

†‡† A public examination of candidates for degrees in the arts will be held in the Hall of the Univerſity on Thurſday next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon.

Public Notice is hereby given,

To the Freemen of the City and County of Philadelphia,

THAT in obedience to a reſolve of the General Aſſembly of the ſtate of Pennſylvania of the 29th day of September laſt, to chuſe ſuitable perſons to ſerve as deputies in a convention on the fœderal conſtitution.

A general election is to be held for the city and county aforeſaid, on TUESDAY the ſixth day of November next for the purpoſe aforeſaid, and at the ſeveral places in the ſaid city and county as are fixed by law for holding the elections of repreſentatives to the general aſſembly, and that ſaid election is to be conducted by the officers who conducted the laſt general election, and agreeable to the rules and regulations thereof, and at which places the electors of the city and county are to chuſe

PIRACY.

RANAWAY with from Simpſon's Bay, St. Martins, by three White Men and one Black Boy, on the evening of the 4th September, a ſmall Virginia built SCHOONER, about 38 feet keel, with black ſides, white bottom, quarters and ſtern green, two cabbin windows and two quarter lights, the rudder traverſing clear of the upper part of the ſtern, new ſtanding rigging and new ſails, the main gaff ſcaffed, in conſequence of the new mainſail being too ſquare, new comings and waiſt partly new, has much the appearance of Bermuda built, and had on board nineteen Puncheons of Rum, taken from Friars' Bay, French Quarters, St. Martins, under Dutch colours, the papers in the name of one captain John Stockey, were endorſed to John White, and the Schooner was called The Friars' Bay Packet. The Captain that ranaway with her was one Robert Eneſew (or ſomething like it) born in ſome part of England, but reſided for 8 or 10 years laſt paſt in this iſland; about 5 feet 4 or 5 inches high, black hair, black eyes, brown complexion and ſmooth ſkin. Savory Taylor, another white man, about 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high, fair hair, freckled in the face and on the hands, about 21 years of age, with grey eyes, born in Virginia. Thomas Champlin, about the ſize of the Captain, not ſo corpulent, but of a thinner body, black hair hair, and born in the iſland of St. Martins. The Negro Boy, (the property of Simon Ahman) by the name of Billy Scott, about 16 years of age, has but one eye, likely faced. By a ſchooner from Spaniſh-Town, captain John Butler, we have the following information, viz. that a few days before he left that iſland, there had been at St. Johns, as he was informed by ſeveral of the inhabitants, a ſchooner, which came to anchor at Water Mellon Key, which was well known to be the Schooner ranaway with from St. Martins, and that they ſold one hogſhead of rum at two ſhillings per gallon, and bought corn and ſome other articles, and went away again the ſame day. The account they gave of themſelves was, that they were from St. Martins, drove out by ſtreſs of weather; that they had left their Captain on ſhore; but it was obſerved that they kept down before the wind after quitting Water Mellon Key, and it was ſuppoſed were deſtined for St. Thomas: he alſo obſerves, that the natives (after their departure) were ſuſpicious, from their mode of acting, that they were not on any good deſign.

A very reaſonable Reward will be given for ſecuring the Veſſel and Cargo, or any part of the property, as alſo for apprehending the Villain or Villains, ſo that they may be brought to juſtice, and every neceſſary expence will be paid by

AARON AHMAN.

AUTUMN.

THE ſun now checks his glowing fires,
And from the northern climes retires,
O'er ſouthern realms again to ſpread
The influ'nce which on ours he ſhed:
Thus God, who guides the rolling year,
Extends to ev'ry clime his care.
Learn then, O man, with goodneſs unconfin'd
To imitate the great all-ruling Mind.

See! bounteous nature kindly ſmiles
On induſtry, and crowns its toils,
Sheds the warm beams and gentle rain,
Quickens the ſeed, matures the grain,
With various bleſſings ſtrows the ground,
And ſpreads her treaſures all around.
Not Iſrael's camp was more divinely fed,
When round it fell in dews the angel's bread.

The ſwain now bids the lab'ring ſteer
Draw home the burthen of the year;
His barn with hay and ſheaves, with corn
His crib he ſtores; ripe fruits adorn
The orchards, whoſe high branches bend
T'allure the taſte and court the hand.
With lib'ral care the univerſal Lord
Beſtows on induſtry a ſure reward.

The plumb is ting'd with charming blue;
The peach aſſumes a bluſhing hue;
Berries, in endleſs dyes and ſhapes,
Appear; and careleſs hang the grapes;
The pear-tree her rich fruitage ſwells,
And loads her boughs with golden bells.
O man, admire indulgent Providence,
Which, while it feeds thee, pleaſes every ſenſe.

With maſt of various kinds the wood
Gives foreſt beaſts ſpontaneous food;
They gather what kind nature pours,
And hide it in their winter ſtores;
Th' induſtrious bee and prudent ant
Provide ſupplies for future want:
Stupid the wretch whoſe thoughts are all confin'd
To preſent want; to future changes blind.

With froſt the tender vines are nipt,
The groves are of their foliage ſtript,
Bleak, chilling winds begin to blow,
And falling leaves earth's boſom ſtrow;
Nature, in ſober liv'ry clad,
Bemoans her charms and beauties fled.
The autumn of our life, as of the year,
When leſs in flow'rs much more in fruits appear.

Peace, hope and joy, the ſmiling growth
Of virtue's plants, firſt ſet in youth,
And nurs'd through each ſucceeding ſtage,
Will cheer the autumn of our age,
Diſpel our fears, and raiſe the ſoul
When winter's ſtorms begin to howl,
Suſtain'd by theſe, in nature's laſt decay,
We'll 'welcome death, and calmly paſs away.'

YOU may ſay what you pleaſe, ſaid Lyſimachus, but I am convinced there is no poſitive heat in the ſun's rays—The argument was dropped, and Lyſimachus fell aſleep on the garden bench—His opponent concentrated the rays in a burning-glaſs, and ſinged the Philoſopher's beard; he awoke in great pain—Indeed my friend, ſaid he, you have uſed a very ſenſible method to convince me I was miſtaken.

HAGUE, August 14.

THE following Memorial was presented to the States General by Sir James Harris, Envoy Extraordinary from his Britannic Majesty:

'High and Mighty Lords,

'THE King animated with the truest and most sincere sentiments of friendship for your High Mightinesses, cannot without extreme pain see the continuation of the unfortunate troubles which subsist in the republic of the United Provinces; and which by their continuation threaten the most grievous consequences.

'The memorials which the undersigned Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary has presented to your High Mightinesses since he had the honor to reside here, have shewn that the King his master, as a good friend and neighbour of the republic, has never ceased desiring to see peace re established: and his Majesty will be always disposed to co operate on his part, in such manner as your High Mightinesses may judge proper.

'His Majesty having observed, that the States of the Provinces of Zealand and Friesland have declared their disposition to ask the mediation of some neighbouring powers (in case that your High Mightinesses judge such intervention necessary) and that that of Zealand has called to mind, on this occasion, the repeated assurances which the King has given of his friendship for the United Provinces: The undersigned has express orders to assure your High Mightinesses that his Majesty has constantly strongly at heart the re-establishment of the tranquility of the republic, the preservation of the true constitution, and the maintenance of the just rights and privileges of all its members. His Majesty feels the greatest satisfaction in having reason to think the internal means furnished by the constitution itself have power sufficient to accomplish so salutary an object. But at the same time, if your High Mightinesses are decided, that it is necessary to recur to a foreign mediation, and to invite his Majesty: then in natural consequence of his affection, and of his good will for the republic, the King will be eager to prove to your High Mightinesses, his sincere desire to employ all the care that may depend on his Majesty to bring the negociation to a happy, solid, and permanent issue.

JAMES HARRIS

Aug. 16. The council of the city of Amsterdam has resolved to suspend his serene highness the prince of Orange from his office of stadtholder, admiral general, &c. and to retain all his revenues and emoluments, to pay the corps of armed citizens, who, they say, will form a line from Haagsche Schouw, near the city of Leyden, as far as Woerden, apparently to fix a ne plus ultra to the Prussian troops.

August 19. This morning the council committee assembled, and resolved to cause the militia to encamp round the Hague, and to leave the detachment at Hoorbrug, with orders to let the auxiliaries pass, but not towards the Hague.

A considerable part of the garrison, both horse and foot, are encamped in the mall, and several detachments posted on the road. All these precautions clearly show the general ferment that prevails. The Magistracy have been assembled and the Burgher Captains have requested to have their different corps under arms, and they were accordingly all ordered to be ready at a moment's warning, and furnished with a good number of rounds of ball cartridges. Various are the reports spread upon these circumstances, and the populace seem quite ripe for the commission of excesses.

We learn that General Vander Dussen, Governor of Bois le Duc, sent a letter to the Council of State, informing them, that for some days past many French soldiers, in troops of ten or twelve, furnished with passports from M. d'Esterhazi, General of the French artillery, and furloughs, to go into a foreign country for a year, have passed thro' that place in their way to Gorinchem. Upon this four provinces have resolved not to receive the above men: at the same time four provinces resolved to put a stop to the enlisting of men for the province of Holland, and to give notice to that province to cease enlisting, as being a concern which only regards the generality.

GIVET, August 10.

Messrs. d'Esterhazi and de Lavals are here making preparations for a camp. They have sent their plans to Versailles, which have been approved, but are not yet executed. We expect every day more of the artillery. Many have been sent incog. from hence to Holland, after receiving four florins each for their journey.

PARIS, Aug. 6.

The Parliament of Paris sat on Tuesday, and entered on their Journals a formal Protest against the edict for the Stamp Tax, specifying, 'That it had been registered the day before by the express command of the Parliament; that it neither ought nor should have any force; and that the first person who presumed to carry the edict into execution, should be adjudged a traitor, and condemned to the gallows.' The other Parliaments of France have formed, as it is said, the same resolution.

BERLIN, August 1.

Every thing here looks like a determination to support the Stadtholder and his cause against every opposition whatever. The six regiments of infantry, and three of cavalry, with a train of artillery, passed Gratsburg the 28th ult. and by this time must have arrived at the place of their destination in the Duchy of Cleves. An ordinance has been published in favour of deserters who shall join any of the King's regiments in three months. The officers belonging to the troops employed in the garrisons, &c. in the Marche of Brandenburg and Ducal Prussia, are ordered to join their respective corps forthwith. All this is done by order of the Council, but it discovers traits of the real intentions of the Cabinet, who have the supreme directions of affairs. Prince Frederick William, his Majesty's eldest son, goes a tour shortly, unless the circumstances of affairs should prevent it; and the first of his visits will be to London, a yacht being expected at Embden for his Highness's accommodation.

VIENNA, July 22.

The troops already on their march, amount to 53 000 men; they are ordered to keep their arms constantly loaded.

The emperor is constantly doing business with prince Kaunitz, and the count de Cobenzel; however, in the midst of this he appears with a constant thoughtful serenity——He takes no other pleasure then walking in the gardens of l'Augarden, where he is often accompanied by the little Circassian he bought on his late journey, and amuses himself by placing flowers on her head.

ZIPS, July 16.

They write from Kaschaw, that on the 12th instant, two mountains, situated near Uhiley in the neighbourhood of Seplin, on a sudden sunk, leaving the ground level. Two professors went to examine the effect of this phenomenon.

LEYDEN, August 21.

On the 18th, in the evening, there happened at Zeyst another accident by an explosion of powder, which blew up several houses.

LONDON, June 26.

It is now 222 years since potatoes were first known in Europe: They were first imported into Ireland in the reign of queen Elizabeth in the year 1565. The importer was John Hawkins, who brought them from Sant Fe in Spanish America. They were planted for the first time in Ireland, it is said, by no less a man than sir Walter Raleigh, who had an estate in that kingdom: but the natural history of the potatoe was so little understood at that time, that sir Walter resolved to renounce the expectation he had formed of bringing this exotick to perfection in Ireland. When in due time after he had planted the first potatoes the stalks grew up, and he perceived upon the stem a green apple, he thought that was the fruit, which he had no idea of being concealed under the earth. He caused some of these apples to be boiled; but finding them nauseous to the taste, he concluded that he had lost his labour; and for some time, thought no more of potatoes. However, having some time after given directions that the ground should be dug up, or ploughed, to his very great surprise he found a plentiful crop of fruit, which proved most grateful to the taste. They soon got into general use, and became the principal food of the Irish peasantry. From Ireland they spread into England, where it has generally, though erroneously, been believed that potatoes were natives of Ireland.

June 29. His Prussian majesty is at this moment the most wealthy potentate in Europe—both in respect of private possessions—as well as the comparative state of the public revenues!

By letters received yesterday from Cadiz, we learn, that two ships have just arrived there, with bullion to a considerable amount, from the West-Indies.

July 7. A very serious procedure has taken place at the German Spa, in consequence of an endeavor, by the visitors of that place, to open a new assembly-room, or rather gaming-house, under the name of a New Vauxhall. The plan was set on foot last season, chiefly, we believe, by a party of English visitors; but without the approbation of the prince bishop of Liege, who draws a revenue of 10,000l. per annum, from licensing the old rooms. On attempting to open the house this season, his highness remonstrated, but without effect. To enforce his objections, he sent a party of 50 soldiers into the town, to which number he has since added sixty more, with the accompanyment of two twelve pounders, that are placed before the new rooms. Such is the present situation of this place of fashionable resort.

Letters from Ireland mention that linens are in brisk demand, though the prices continue tolerably moderate; and that there is every reason to expect great advantages in that line from the French connexion.

Aug. 6. By the Dutch mail which arrived on Saturday, we have received the following advices from HOLLAND.

The accounts of the action near Utrecht, on the 26th July, are variously related in the foreign papers; but the following is the most circumstantial account, and seems at present to be the most accurate.

Extract of a letter from Utrecht, dated July 29.

'The army of the prince of Orange, encamped a league from this town, having within these few days made a motion to the left, and having been reinforced by a strong detachment from the post of the village of Bunnick, they appeared to menace Vreesyck and Jutphaas; which are occupied by the troops of Holland, and thereby to cut off the communication, which is open by the Leck, with the province of Holland.

'In order to prevent this being effected, the rhingrave of Salm, who commands the garrison of this town, resolved to disturb them, on the side of the village of Soest; which forms the communication with part of the stadtholderian corps, cantoned on the side of Amersfort. And accordingly, on the 26th, in the evening, he made a sortie from hence, with a strong detachment from the garrison, in two columns, one of which he led in person, towards Bunnick and Zeist, with an intention of making an attack, in order to prevent the execution of their designs. This corps was composed of three hundred men, cavalry and infantry, with two field pieces. They took post at Bilt, from whence the cavalry marched towards the advanced posts of the stadtholder's troops: But these having retired to their main body, it became too dangerous, owing to the obscurity of the night, to pursue them. This detachment therefore returned, at day break, after exchanging only a few shot.

'The other column was not so fortunate. It was commanded by lieutenant colonel de Kleinenberg, and composed of three hundred and fifty men, cuirassiers, hussars, chasseurs and fusiliers of the legion of Salm: One company of the regiment of Pollardi's infantry, forty eight men of the Amsterdam regiment, and a detachment of chasseurs, burgesses.

'This small body left the camp at Zeist at about a league distance on the right, and advanced to the village of Soest. They secured two advanced posts of four men each; but the principal detachment they found at Soestdyck, a castle at some distance from Soest, belonged to the prince of Orange—This detachment belonging to the regiment of Hesse Darmstadt, of the repartition of Friesland. The attack not being very hasty, they profited by the advantage of their situation, and took possession of part of the castle itself; whilst the rest kept firing under cover of the walls and hedges—The firing became very hot on both sides.

'Those who were present at the action, think, that the regiment of Hesse Darmstadt made a very noble defence. The troops of Holland and Utrecht, on their side, also behaved with the greatest valour. The ensign Van Geysen, who owing to the defection in the regiment of Pollardi, had been raised from a serjeant, was mortally wounded; and on being desired to retire, this brave man continued the fight until a second ball carried off his head. We had also the ill luck to lose the peasant, who out of affection for the cause of his country, offered himself as our guide. Thus deprived of our chief help, and the darkness of the night not permitting us to distinguish proper objects; likewise the impossibility of forcing the enemy's posts with our small number—all together, made it necessary to begin a retreat; and we were also under the necessity of trusting to a new guide. This guide proved treacherous, and led us towards the camp at Zeist. At day break we perceived our error, and returned back near Hilversum, from whence different detachments came successively hither.

'We do not know with precision the loss on either side. Exclusive of ensign Van Geysen, we had five men killed and 12 wounded; of which some are mortal. The cavalry lost five horses, which were killed; but in return they have brought in six from the enemy, also two grenadiers and one corporal, prisoners.

'The action lasted one hour and a half: when it commenced, the numbers were equal; but the enemy received a reinforcement from the neighbouring cantonments. The viscount de Dolomieu, formerly lieutenant of the body guards of his most Christian majesty, acted as a volunteer in the legion of Salm, on this occasion.

'Although this attack has not fulfilled its design, it nevertheless proves what may be expected from our garrison, if the prince of Orange persists in reducing us by force of arms. For if we cannot trust in the regular military, the armed burgesses thirst to avenge their injuries; and the militia have unanimously resolved, and publicly declared, 'That they will never consent to any capitulation; that when all is destroyed by the enemy, and nothing remains but ruins of the fortifications; they will fire the town in the four quarters, rather than submit to the tyrants who attempt their liberties.'

It cannot admit a moment's doubt, that the action near Utrecht, (a full account of which is given in this day's paper) will not only quicken the march of the Prussian troops, but tend to impel the courts of London, Berlin and Versailles, to adopt decisive measures. Our sovereign seems not only to have been aware of this necessity, by ordering his electoral forces to be in readiness, which he has done; but by sending general Fawcitt to Hesse Cassel, where he now is treating for a corps of Hessian troops, to be employed in the interest and support of the stadtholder.

The following is copied verbatim from an old Shrewsbury paper. It is worthy of the Dublin Journal.

"Lost, where it was dropt yesterday afternoon, between nine and ten o'clock, betwixt Atcham and this town, an empty poke with a cheese in it. The poke was marked I. D. but the letters are worn out. Any person or persons having found the same, shall be handsomely rewarded for returning them to the owner.

"N. B. The man who lost it never missed it till it was gone."

August 7.

Extract of a letter from Abbeville, (France) dated Jul. 21.

'On Monday last a dreadful fire broke out at a village called Oysemont, within four leagues of this town, by which the place was almost entirely destroyed; as out of 360 houses, there are but 60 remaining, and those of the poorest kind. The conflagration was so general, and the flames so prodigiously rapid (from the very high winds at the time) that the poor inhabitants have lost all their effects. It began at 12 o'clock at noon, and continued till 2. The church is entirely destroyed, and the sacred plate, &c. would have been lost, had it not been for the very extraordinary exertion of Monf. Dunning (Vicaire of a little village called Cousiestere) who at the hazard of his life, saved the plate, with the parish register. The place carried on a considerable trade in grain, which is entirely destroyed; and such is the distress of the poor people, that had it not been for the generosity of the neighbouring villages, and some particular people in Abbeville, who sent them bread, they must have absolutely starved. The heat of the flames was so intense, that the church bell was melted.—The fire is supposed to have been occasioned by an old woman in liquor smoaking, who dropped her pipe among some straw.'

August 16. The politics of this country bear a very different aspect within these eight days—Our Cabinet had before sent their ultimatum to France—that we should support the establishment of the Stadtholder as in 1747; Prussia has declared that she will not treat on the subject of Holland, unless England is an arbitrator. To this France has refused to agree, and threatens that the moment the King of Prussia enters Holland, she will march a much larger force to the support of the patriots there. In the mean time our Court is determined to abide by the last ultimatum, which declares that the Stadtholder shall be supported with the whole force of this country. It was only on the last resolution of France, that Mr. Pitt joined the rest of the Cabinet in this determination.

Aug. 17. Various private accounts inform us, that the city of Utrecht was invested by the stadtholder's army on the evening of the 3d instant, whereby that city is closely blockaded. The foreign prints are silent upon this head—the strongest confirmation of this important event is, that the Utrecht mail, which was to have arrived as usual with the other Dutch mails, has not arrived——from this we may judge, that the place is totally inclosed with the stadtholder's troops and that all egress and ingress is obstructed in consequence.

August 18. By the treaty offensive and defensive, which was concluded between France and the States General, the contracting parties are bound to furnish to each other, when demanded of them, troops and ships of war, when either shall be engaged in a war. This treaty was ratified at the conclusion of the year 1785, upon which Sir Jas. Harris presented a memorial to their High Mightinesses, offering the friendship of his master and the British nation to the Dutch. After describing the advantages that must accrue to each of the countries from their local situation, the British Envoy exhorts the States not to involve themselves in any engagement with any other power that could obstruct their mutual interests. This treaty is now made the pretence with the French Court for assembling an army at Givet in favour of the refractory States of the United, or rather disunited Provinces. Although the province of Holland acts against the sense of the majority of the States General, that it the power in the confederacy with whom only foreign powers can transact any business.

Nothing can be further from the truth than the report of the Dutch Governor at the Cape of Good Hope having ordered all the English to retire in 48 hours: On the contrary, all the ships lately arrived, which have touched there on their passage home, have been treated with the usual civility and respect, and provided with necessaries of every kind that they required or stood in need of.

DUBLIN, August 3.

In consequence of the late rise on raw silk, occasioned by the almost universal blast of the mulberry trees, last season in Italy, some of our merchants have re-opened an importation of that rich material of manufacture from Spain; and two days ago a vessel arrived in our harbour from Cadiz, with a considerable quantity on board.

The scheme spoken of some years ago of establishing a Royal Navy in Ireland, for the protection of our trade in time of war, is again mentioned with much confidence, as a measure that will be proposed to our parliament from the British cabinet, next spring, on the following conditions:

That if Ireland will covenant to defray the expence of building, manning, and maintaining two ships of the line and six frigates, for the general service of the empire, his most gracious Majesty will give his Royal word, that these ships, or an equal number and force shall be always stationed in the Irish ports or cruising in the Irish seas, unless in some case of great emergency.

That dock-yards shall be built in Ireland, for the building and repair of these ships.

That a fourth division of the Royal navy shall be established in honor of Ireland, under the name of the Green Division.

That for the purpose of making a saving of the national expenditure, the better to defray the expence of the Irish navy, a reduction of 3000 of the land army of Ireland, will be consented to.

Tuesday se'nnight a lady and two gentlemen walking in Mabbot street during the thunder storm, a flash of lightning struck the lady on the cheek, which was scorched as if seared with a hot iron the breadth of an inch. The violence of the shock was so great as to disengage her from one of the gentlemen whose arm she held. She is now recovered from strong hysteric fits, occasioned by the fright, but will probably bear the mark of this accident as long as she lives.

BOSTON, October 9.

Sunday arrived the brig Boston Packet, captain Edward Davis, in 42 days from London.

Same day a ship from Demarara, said to be British property, anchored in our port.

Captain Scott, in the Neptune, from this port, left the Downs with captain Davis, but soon after parted in a gale of wind.

The Tristram, Captain Warner, from Rhode-Island, arrived in London the latter end of July.

ALEXANDRIA, Oct. 11.

At a meeting of the Freeholders of the town of Alexandria, on Friday, the 28th of September, 1787.

Robert Townshend Hooe was unanimously chosen President.

THE proposed fœderal constitution was read, and unanimously approved of—and it was resolved, that William Hunter, jun. Robert T. Hooe, William Hartshorne, James Keith, William Brown, William Herbert, Charles Simms, David Arell, and John Fitzgerald, Esquires, be appointed a committee to meet the freeholders of Fairfax county, at Price's Old Fields, on Tuesday, the second day of October next, for the purpose of instructing the delegates of this county, to use their utmost power and abilities to obtain in the next General Assembly a recommendation from that honourable body, to the freeholders of the state at large, for the holding a convention as speedily as possible, for the purpose of adopting the aforesaid constitution.

Attest, OLIVER PRICE, Clerk.

At a meeting of a number of the Freeholders of Fairfax county, at Price's Old Fields, on Tuesday the 2d day of October, 1787.

THE proposed fœderal constitution was read and unanimously approved of—and thereupon it was unanimously resolved, That instructions be given to the delegates of the county, in the following words:

To GEORGE MASON and DAVID STUART, Esquires,

WE, the freeholders of the county of Fairfax, conceiving that the peace, security and prosperity of the state of Virginia and the United States of America in general, do depend on the speedy adoption of the system of government recommended by the late General Convention of the United States, and that this end will be advanced by an immediate recommendation from the legislature of this state, to subject the same to a convention of delegates chosen by the freeholders thereof, for their assent and ratification, do therefore direct you, our representatives, to declare the opinion of your constituents, in the next General Assembly of this state, to be for the immediate convocation of a convention of delegates from the several counties and boroughs of this state for the said purpose.

The aforesaid instructions being prepared and signed by all the freeholders present—it was resolved, That Charles Broadwater, George Gilpin, Charles Little, John Harper, Lund Washington, James Wren, John Moss, William Payne, Thomas Pollard, Elisha C. Dick, William Thompson, Roger West, William Deneal, Peter Wagener, Daniel M'Carty, George Minor and Thomas West, Esquires, the reverend David Griffith, Jeremiah Moore and William Waters, in the county, and William Hunter, jun. Robert T. Hooe, William Hartshorne, James Keith, William Brown, William Herbert, Charles Simms, David Arell, and John Fitzgerald, Esquires, in the town of Alexandria, be a committee to wait on such of the freeholders in their respective neighbourhoods, as happened not to be present at this meeting, with copies of the aforesaid instructions, in order that they may sign them.

On Monday the first instant, the students of the Winchester Academy, under the tuition of Mr. Maxwell Armstrong, were examined in the presence of the trustees and several other gentlemen of abilities.——The scholars in their different classes had made such progress since their last examination, and understood so well the books they had been taught, as in the judgment of those gentlemen did honor to themselves and their tutor, whom the trustees venture to recommend as a gentleman of real merit.—In the afternoon the pupils delivered orations, and in the evening acted a play, to the great and universal satisfaction of a numerous and respectable audience.

FREDERICKSBURG, Oct. 11.

A correspondent observes, that there cannot be a greater proof of the virtue of our countrymen in the late Fœderal Convention, than the constitution which they have exhibited to the states, as the result of their deliberations. The expediency of the plan of government which they have proposed arises from the provisions which they have so judiciously made for preventing insurrections against the laws, and for procuring obedience to the fœderal constitution. We have seen with how much contempt the resolutions of our Congress have been treated, when they have laid before the states, in the most expressive terms, the necessity of adopting certain measures which they have proposed. We have seen their propositions laughed at, and their plans totally disregarded. Even the treaties which they solemnly entered into, have been infringed by the positive and deliberate acts of a state legislature. The consequence of which was, that our credit in Europe began so rapidly to decline, that our ministers were viewed with the utmost contempt by the foreign courts. To remedy all these evils has been the object of the Fœderal Convention. They appear to have proposed a plan which will have a certain tendency to effect it, if it be adopted by all the states.

Extract of a letter, dated l'Orient, July the 5th, 1787.

"There is great preparations making here, and all the king's ports in France, for a war; and it is certain that 12 ships of the line are ordered from Brest to cruize in the channel, and the commandant here has received orders to have every thing in readiness. We are now in a very great hurry, as the owner of the craft (a Liverpool merchant) is apprehensive there may be an embargo laid on all English vessels; indeed there is every reason to believe in will soon take place. An English sloop arrived here last evening from Brest, the captain of which informs, that he was not permitted to go on shore without a guard with him, to every place he went: And farther, that he would not have been allowed to land his cargo, had it not been provisions, and the troops were in want of them."

NEW-YORK, October 12.

Extract of a letter from England, dated August 28, by the Adamant, Captain Morwick.

'The affairs of Holland will, I understand, be terminated without a war; and the States, at last, are likely to submit to the stadtholder. France, now it comes to the point, I suppose flies off. Indeed they seem to have enough to do at home, as the king is quarrelling with his parliament, who are all banished from Paris, for refusing to register his edict for a Stamp Duty, or rather spiritedly remonstrating against it:—and I should not be much surprised, now the spirit of liberty is gone forth, if the Stamp Act makes as much noise in France as it has done elsewhere.'

We are happy to inform the public, that Sam. W. Johnson, L. L. D. has accepted of the Presidency of Columbia College, to which he was some time ago unanimously elected.

ALBANY, Oct 4.

On Saturday last three villains, viz. Michael Coffin, David Powers and Gershom Fuller, were apprehended at Schenectady, for attempting to pass counterfeit ten pound bills. They were examined before Andries Van Patten, Dirk Van Ingen, and Myndert M Wimple, Esquires, who ordered them to be committed to gaol in this city, to take their trials at our next Supreme Court. On their way hither, they found means to cut the cords with which they were bound, and Coffin made his escape. This fellow calls himself a Universalist preacher, and says he belongs to Pearsley, above Ballston, in this county—he is about five feet ten inches high, 33 or 34 years of age, has short hair; had on a light coloured camblet coat, brown overalls and new boots.

A reward of five dollars will be paid to whoever will deliver said Coffin to the keeper of the common gaol in this city, on application to either of the above magistrates.

BALTIMORE, October 12.

On Friday evening last the Old American Company of Comedians, under the direction of Messrs. Hallam and Henry, finished their theatrical exhibitions for this season with the comic opera of the Duenna, or the Double Elopement, and the comedy of the Guardian.—They have performed here for some time past with great success, and are now preparing to leave Baltimore for Annapolis, where it is expected they will stay a short time.—The scenery, decorations and various improvements added to the decent and well-regulated deportment of this company, cannot fail of making them acceptable to the lovers of science and the drama in every part of the continent.

Philadelphia, Oct. 18.

John Carson, Jacob Miley and Robert Clark, esquires, are chosen to represent the county of Dauphin in the general assembly of this state.

The General Assembly of New Hampshire state having completed their business, adjourned to the third Wednesday of January next, then to meet at Portsmouth. During their late session at Charlestown, the following acts among others were passed: An act to encourage the rolling, slitting and plating of iron: and to empower the Courts of General Sessions of the Peace to establish nail manufactories in the prison-yards, for the employment of criminals that may be confined in the several counties. An act doubling the excise on all spirituous liquors sold or used in that state, without any drawback or twenty per cent. Also an annual excise on all chariots, coaches, phætons, chaises, chairs and sulkies, which commenced the first instant. An act to incorporate a township by the name of Sullivan.

Accounts from Old Spain, via England, say, that advice has been received of the destruction of that ancient American city Mexico the pride and glory of the new world, by an earthquake which lasted near 8 minutes. It is said that but very small remains of it are left—benevolence as well as interest will excite us to hope that this intelligence is not well founded, for we cannot but anticipate the day when there will be a friendly intercourse between the inhabitants of these states and Spanish America.

We hear the corn, buckwheat, &c have suffered considerably in some of the Eastern states, by the frost setting in early in September. But in great part of New-York state and New Jersey, it is said, there never were known more plentiful crops than this season has afforded. Vast quantities of hemp have been also raised on the settlements up Hudson's river.

Within these few days two large ships have arrived here, one from Amsterdam, the other from Rotterdam, with Dutch redemptioners and a considerable number of passengers.

From present appearances, says a correspondent, paper money is once more verging, and that very speedily, to its lowest ebb in the estimation of the people of this and the adjacent state. Whether founded in reason or not, prejudice is against it, and the almost universal voice is—let it sink as soon as possible, never to appear again.

A considerable number of Roman Catholic families we hear are about to remove from this city to Carthagena, a province and town in South America, belonging to the crown of Spain.

The power of ecclesiastical or spiritual courts has long been abridged in England—happily for another branch of the nation, the same restraints seem to be planning in Ireland, as a bill is soon to be proposed, that no decision shall be made in these courts contrary to the verdict of a jury given in any court of law.

'People in general here (says a letter from Portsmouth) are amazingly taken with the New Constitution, and it is allowed by good judges to be one of the best forms of free government ever promulgated. Two of our well-informed men are now preparing speeches the more effectually to recommend it. I have advised several of my friends however to examine this Magna Charta with their own eyes, and not trust too much to the flow of rhetoric that may be expected. Oratory can do wonderful things—one of the Athenian sages is reported to have made so moving a speech upon the miseries of human life, that more than half his audience rose from their benches, and went home with a determined resolution to hang themselves before night.'

Married lately at Salem, New-England, Mr. Michael M'Clinton, of Deerfield, a native of Ireland, aged 96, to Mrs. Eleanor Dunast, of Danvers, aged 67.

To the Memory of the brave, accomplished and patriotic Col. JOHN LAURENS, who, in the 27th year of his age, was killed in an engagement with a detachment of the British from Charleston, near the river CAMBAHEE, in South Carolina, August, 1782.

SINCE on her plains this generous chief expir'd,
Whom sages honor'd, and whom France admir'd;
Does Fame no statues to his memory raise,
Nor swells one column to record his praise
Where her palme to shades the adjacent deeps,
Affection sighs, and Carolina weeps!
Thou, who shalt stray where death this chief confines
Approach, and read the patriot in these lines:
Not from the dust the muse transcribes his name,
And more than marble shall declare his fame,
Where scenes more-glorious his great soul engage,
Confest thrice worthy in that closing page
When conquering Time to dark oblivion calls,
The marble totters, and the column falls.
LAURENS! thy tomb while kindred hands adorn,
Let northern muses, too, inscribe thy urn—
Of all, whose names on Death's black list appear,
No chief, that perish'd, claim'd more grief sincere,
Not one, Columbia, that thy bosom bore,
More tears commanded, or deserv'd them more!—
Grief at his tomb shall heave the unwearied sigh,
And Honor lift the mantle to her eye:
Fame thro' the world his patriot name shall spread
By heroes envied, and by monarchs read:
Just, generous, brave—to each true heart allied,
The Briton's terror, and his country's pride;
For him the tears of war-worn soldiers ran,
The friend of freedom, and the friend of man.
THEN what is death, compar'd with such a tomb,
Where honor fades not, and fair virtues bloom,
Ah, what is death, when fame like this endears,
The brave man's favourite, and his country's tears.

ANECDOTE.

THE animosity which Doctor Johnson discovered on all occasions against Mr. Wilkes is generally known, and he declared that no inducement should prevail upon him to remain in his company. Nevertheless, through an ingenious and innocent artifice of Mr. Boswell's, they did once meet at dinner with Dilly in the Poultry. It was soon after a general election. The Doctor was sullen and silent. Wilkes, never disconcerted, was aware that there was one subject upon which the Doctor and himself were entirely of the same mind, their common hatred of the Scotch. Doctor, said the Chamberlain, I think the contested elections for Scotland should be settled on the other side of the Tweed; for of two who come to London to give their evidence, never more than one finds his way home again.—Sir, said the Doctor, it matters very little where their elections are settled, for one Scotchman is just as good as another. The Doctor however began to listen to the Chamberlain's facetiousness, of which quality no man can excel him, and gradually relaxed his severity of manner till he became excellent company.

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be exposed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thursday the 29th of November next, at the Court-House in Harford county, state of Maryland,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Juppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the Winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

Those who wish to view the land, on application to Mess. Ashton and Waters, the present tenants, will be shewn it. Possession will be given the 1st of January, if required. The title good and free of all incumbrances. The terms will be easy to the purchaser, and will be made known on the day of sale, by Wm. WEST.

From the MARYLAND JOURNAL.

To the INHABITANTS of Baltimore Town.

AN attempt to surprise you into any public measure, ought to meet your indignation and contempt. When violence or cunning is substituted for argument and reason, suspicion should take the alarm, and prudence should dictate the propriety of deliberation. Questions of consequence in private life, ought not to be hastily decided, and with greater reason, determinations, that involve the future felicity of a whole people, ought not to be taken before the most mature and deliberate consideration, and a free and full examination of the subject, and all its consequences.—These reflections occurred on being informed that some gentlemen of this town, employ themselves in carrying about and soliciting subscribers to a petition, addressed to the general assembly, requesting them to call a convention to ratify the new system of government, proposed for the United States by the late convention at Philadelphia. If this petition contained no more, it would not have been worthy of notice; but it publishes to the world your entire approbation of the New Federal Government, and your desire that it should be adopted and confirmed by this state, as it stands, without any amendment or alteration. The ostensible cause for offering you the petition to sign is, that you may express your sentiments to the legislature, that they ought to call a convention to ratify the new form of government for the United States; but the real design of the promoters of the petition is to draw you into a declaration in favor of the whole system, and to bind you hereafter to support it, which you must do, or alledge deception and surprise, if, on further reflection, you should discover that you rashly gave an opinion against your real interests. If the real intention of the promoters and carriers of this petition was only to obtain your opinion in favor of calling a convention, it might have been expressed in a few lines; and no one would oppose such a petition, although improper and unnecessary, because your delegates will certainly move for, and exert themselves to procure, the calling a convention; and no member of the general assembly will deny that, in so doing, your delegates speak your sentiments.

In my opinion, it is not necessary or proper for you, at this time, to express your approbation, or disapprobation, of the new constitution for the United States, for the following reasons:—First, because the decision for or against the plan, is of the greatest consequence, as it involves no less than the happiness or misery of you and all your posterity forever; and therefore, I think, requires your dispationate and most deliberate consideration.——Secondly, because you want information, and have not had time yourselves to examine the proposed system, & to consider the consequences that may flow from rejecting or adopting it.—Thirdly, because time is not given for your countrymen in this, and the other states, to consider the subject, and to lay their sentiments and reasons for or against the measure before you.——Fourthly, because you ought to hear both sides, as the man who determines on hearing one party only, will almost always be mistaken in his judgment: He may be in the right, but it will be by chance, and not by reason.—Fifthly, because you are not pressed in point of time to determine on the subject; you have at least three months for deliberation; to decide, therefore, in a few days, will be rashness and folly.—Sixthly, when men urge you to determine in haste, on so momentous a subject, it is not unreasonable to enquire their motives; and it is not uncharitable to suspect that they are improper; and no possible mischief or inconvenience can happen from delay.

CAUTION.

October 11, 1787.

From the SALEM MERCURY.

GENTLEMEN,

ACCIDENTALLY meeting with your paper of July 3 I noticed an extract from a Publication of Dr. White of Manchester, in England, prescribing a remedy for the jaundice.

Prompted by a disposition to contribute to the benefit of mankind, I take the liberty of communicating the following with a view of your giving it a place in your next, if you think it merits such notice.

About four years since I observed in the Universal Museum for January 1763, the following communication by the late Lord Blackeney, who cured great numbers in Ireland, Minorca, and in the kingdom of Great-Britain, of the yellow jaundice:—'Take the white an of egg and two glasses of spring water, beat them well together, and drink the quantity off at a draught. It cools the lungs, which, in this distemper, are always inflamed; expels that asthmatick disorder which also always in some degree afflicts the party diseased; it speedily procures perspiration; invigorates the animal spirits; causes digestion and creates an appetite.'

I had, previous to the time of my observing the foregoing, been repeatedly and severely visited with a bilious disorder, and at that time perceived its approach. I made trial of the remedy, drinking the white of an egg and two glasses of water three mornings, successively, upon an empty stomach. I found it had the effect which I had promised myself, and have never since had any return of the disorder; and also found it beneficial in promoting an easy digestion. If any others should hereby be led to make trial of the remedy, and receive advantage from it, my trouble in the preceding communication, and, perhaps, yours in publishing, will be amply repaid.

Yours, &c.

BENEVOLUS.

WHITEHALL, August 11.

THE King has been pleased, by letters patent, under the great seal of Great Britain, to erect the province of Nova Scotia into a Bishop's See, and to name and appoint the Rev. Charles Inglis, Doctor in Divinity, to be Bishop of the said See.

LONDON, July 18.

England at present carries on a trade to three different quarters, in which the difference in import and export turns against her. The imports from Russia amount to 1,084 559l. 17s. 4d. the exports only 206,813l. Balance against Britain 877,726l. 13s.

From the East-Indies, Great-Britain imports 1,523,273l. 18s. 8d. exports 909 033l. 7s. 2d. Balance against England 614,240l. 11s. 6d.

The imports from the W. Indies, are 2 943,955l. 7s. 1d. the exports 1,279,572l. 6s. 0d. Balance against England 1,664,383l. 1s. 1d.

But to all parts she exports to the value of 13,913 236l. while her imports are only 11,760,655l. which leaves a balance in her favor of 2,152,580l. which may give some idea of the trade and wealth of this country.

August 8. We have every reason to believe, that six hours after Mr. Eden's return to Paris, expresses were sent off for the immediate march of the troops, amounting to 45,000 men, who were originally intended for the camp at Givet; a courier extraordinary set off at the same time for Brest. This we have by a gentleman who left Paris on Saturday, and who reports, that the general idea of war was publicly held forth.

A report has been industriously circulated these two days past, that matters in Holland were in a train of accommodation; we are truly sorry to say, that from any information we have been able to collect, there is little reason for crediting this intelligence. His Prussian Majesty has ordered 30,000 men to the frontiers of Holland; the Stadtholder has invested Utrecht; and we have but too much reason to suspect whatever may ultimately happen, that the French are in motion also. These being facts, we surely cannot be suspected of interested motives, in cautioning the public against hastily adopting pacific ideas. It should never be lost sight of, that if France abandons the patriotic party in Holland, she will thereby sustain the heaviest blow she has experienced for a century past, and at once annihilate her hopes of ever being formidable at sea to this country. That she will then act all at once after her insolent answer to our memorial last week, is not probable, scarcely possible.

If the disturbances in Holland continue, it is probable that the Parliament will meet before Christmas, to vote a sum of money to the Stadtholder. It would certainly be more expedient to apply a million in this manner, than to sit still and see a series of measures pursued—in the end inevitably productive of a war—that might cost 50 millions to this country.

Nothing appears more strange and inexplicable, than the delay with which the present troubles of Holland approach to that crisis, which must either terminate them altogether, or allow war to be openly declared between the supporters of the two contending parties in the republic.

The Duke of York reviewed all the Hanoverian forces before he left the Continent, of which he has brought over a very particular state and return.—As the Prince was also at all the Prussian reviews, he no doubt is intimately acquainted with the state and condition of the troops of that Monarch; a circumstance which may be exceedingly necessary for the information of government.

Several officers, who lately arrived arrived from the West Indies and America, that are on the half pay list, have received notice from the Lords of the Admiralty not to quit the kingdom without fresh leave, on pain of being struck off the list, and not being employed again in his Majesty's service.

Extract of a letter from Aberdeen, July 31.

"A merchant in this place, who had employed a lawyer in the North to recover a debt of a guinea, last week received a letter from him, to the following purpose:—Sir, I have got payment of the guinea due to you by ———. The inclosed account of expences attending the same amounts to 1l. 7s. 8d. You will therefore please to remit me the balance of 6s. 8d. by the first opportunity."—This is recovering a debt with a vengeance!

Extract of a letter from Soissons, June 28.

"As a young attorney of Chateau Thiery and his wife were returning from Nogent d'Artau a few days ago in a cabriolet, they had the imprudence to remain in it as they crossed a river in a ferry boat. The horse took fright, pulled back, and threw the cabriolet and himself into the river. The unhappy couple were found a few minutes after drowned, and clasped in each others arms.—The woman was three months gone with child.—It is something incredible, that among so many bystanders, not one knew how to make use of the proper means for recovering drowned persons.—The very curate who had married them about two years ago, performed the sad office of burying them both in one grave."

We are happy to inform our readers, that the whole surplus of the public revenues, after completing the million for paying off the public debt, amounted on the 5th of July last, to 990,000l. during the foregoing year.

The Prince Bishop of Liege has at length consented to give up the person of the minor Viscount Gormanstown, of the kingdom of Ireland, and a trusty person has been sent to Spa to bring him home.

August 15.

Extract of a letter from Naples, July 12.

"The armed Felucca, which was cruizing against the Barbary vessels at the expence of the owners of the Feluccas, destined to fish for coral, commanded by Captain Michael Accardo, of this city, has taken a merchant galley, richly laden with leather, silk, &c. and several sums of money belonging to some rich Algerine merchants who were going to Bonna on their own private business. Such a rich capture may be looked upon as a good reprisal upon the Regency of Algiers, as the merchants taken are of the first families, and some of them relations to the Dey. The prize has been sent to Messina with the most rigorous orders for the security of the slaves, who are left at the disposal of government, and are to perform the usual quarantine.—These slaves declare that they left Tunis at the solicitation of some Algerine merchants, who, tho' they had some considerable sums of money owed them there, thought proper to go to Bonna, in Africa, to put themselves in safety, as it was the general opinion at Tunis, that the Algerine army was only two days march from the capital, and notwithstanding the mediation of the French Consul, they foresaw an open rupture between the Regencies."

August 18. An extraordinary number of orders for insurances were yesterday received by the French mail:——This has added to the alarm which has prevailed at Lloyd's for some days past, and induced many to decline underwriting for fear of war.

A report strongly prevailed also upon the Exchange yesterday, that an order has been received at Cork to prevent the exportation of salt provision, which some French merchants have contracted for, to victual the squadron at this time equipping in Brest harbour.

The warlike preparations making by the French are much greater than most people are aware of.—It is certain that during the height of last war in which we had 100,000 men born and mustered in our fleets, the demand in Ireland for salt provisions was never greater than it is at present; and what is very remarkable, these provisions are not wanted for British consumption; but all that can be purchased is consigned to the port of Brest. This does not look like peace.

Advices received by this day's Flanders mail, say, that the English have taken possession of Otaheite, and the city of Mexico is destroyed by an earthquake.

Powerful as France may be, and fruitful in resources for carrying on a war, she certainly is not so situated at this moment, as to be able to make the most of them. She at present is strangely divided. The King and his Parliament are upon very indifferent terms; the former stands upon his Prerogative; to which the Parliament oppose Franchises. The King enjoins obedience to his commands; the Parliament positively, tho' respectfully, withhold obedience, because they say it is not due in those cases, in which his Majesty is at present pleased to call for it. Where this difference will end, God only knows; but the present seems likely to be an æra in the French government and constitution, from which some great event may hereafter be traced. During the difference between Louis XV. and his Parliament of Paris, that Monarch insisted that his Crown was independent of any earthly power. Je tiens ma Couronne de Dieu, said that Prince in the excess of his vanity; but his memory had never been informed that Hugh Capet, the first of Capetian race, from which the present Royal family of France is descended, in a direct line from father to son, became King of France by election, and not by hereditary right; for at the time he was made King, he was an alien in France, and in no degree related to the Royal family which he supplanted in the Throne.

August 22. The ratification of a treaty of commerce between the Neapolitan Court and that of Petersburgh has been exchanged; upon which occasion the Duke of Serra Capriola, received a present from her Imperial Majesty, of a magnificent gold snuff-box, enriched with a portrait of the Empress in enamel. That Ambassador in return, presented to the Ministers of the Russian Court similar presents from the King his master.

Baron de Thulemeyer has formally acknowledged, that he has been led into an error in representing to the States of Holland, that the Princess of Orange had an officer placed over her as a guard, with a drawn sword in his hand; and the magistrates of Schoonhoven have wrote a letter to the States of Holland, informing them, that so far from being reprehensible, they had received, by particular orders, the thanks of the Princess of Orange for their behaviour towards her.

The opinion of the best informed in his spirited army is, that their master, the King of Prussia, will insist on the Prince of Orange being reinstated in all his rights; and on the constitution of the States of Holland being put on the same footing as they were when the office of Stadtholder was first made hereditary. And as some atonement for the insult offered to his sister, that the Princess of Orange shall be previously entreated by the States to pursue the route of her former intended journey.

Proposals for a negociation have been received from Paris within these few days, and it is generally believed at the west end of the town, that an express has been forwarded to the Prussian Court, recommending a delay of the march of the troops towards the frontiers of Holland.

AMERICA.

BOSTON, October 9.

An individual, who never has been, nor has any ambition at present to be honoured by marks of public distinction, has sent us the following:

'Should the citizens of America ratify the proceedings of the convention, the happy event will form an epocha more peculiar in its nature, more felicitating in its consequence, and more interesting to the philosophic mind, than ever the political history of man has displayed. Where is the country in which the principles of civil liberty and jurisprudence are so well understood as in this! and where has ever such an assembly of men been deputed for such a purpose?——To see an assemblage of characters most of them illustrious for their integrity, patriotism and abilities, representing many sovereign states: framing a system of government for the whole, in the midst of a profound peace; unembarrassed by any unfavourable circumstances abroad, uninfluenced by any selfish motives at home; but making the most generous concessions to each other for the common welfare, and directing their deliberations with the most perfect unanimity.—To see a constitution of government thus formed, and fraught with wisdom; œconomy and foresight, adapted to the political habits of their constituents, to the state of society and civilization, to the peculiar circumstances of their country, and to those enlightened sentiments of freedom and toleration, so dear to all good men——And, finally, to see this constitution ratified and adopted by several millions of people, inhabiting an extensive country, not from any coertion, but from mere principles of propriety, wisdom and policy——These are objects too great and too glorious to be viewed with common admiration and delight: the idea alone is animating to every bosom susceptible of the emotions of patriotism and philantrophy: the attempt alone reflects dignity upon human nature, and the execution secures freedom and public happiness to remote posterity.

'This great event will disclose the meaning of those many astonishing providences which gave timely aid to American arms in the just struggle for independence. From this it will appear, that these were not intended to usher in, upon this recent theatre of cultivated humanity, the horrors of domestic jarring; but to establish, upon the firmest basis, union, freedom, and tranquility. The prerogative of the great guardian of nations, to educe good from evil, will become illustrious. Our reproach abroad, and disarrangement at home, will but shew us, in contrast, the magnitude of our change. The light of prosperity will but shine the brighter, as just bursting from the dissipated clouds of injustice, avarice and ambition.

'Let us then be of one heart, and of one mind. Let us seize the golden opportunity to secure a stable government, and to become a respectable nation. Let us be open, decided and resolute in a good cause. Let us render our situation worthy the ashes of our slaughtered brethren, and our own sufferings. Let us remember our emblem, the twisted serpent, and its emphatical motto, Unite, or Die!—This was once written in blood; but it is as emphatical now as then. A house divided against itself cannot stand. Our national existence depends as much as ever upon our union; and its consolidation most assuredly involves our prosperity, felicity and safety.'

The following remarks are handed to us by a correspondent as being very serious difficulties in the way of the new confederation, notwithstanding the pains which have been taken to prove, that it could not contain any thing wrong.——

'A confederation, for purposes merely national, would undoubtedly be exceeding beneficial to these states. Every one should, however, be indulged in a free, but decent, examination of every proposed form.

'In general, public business would go on smoothly when the mode of doing it is conformable to the habits of the people, and when employment is found for their activity. Let us upon these principles review the newly proposed fœderal constitution.

'The several states are to be represented by a small number of persons, who, during the long period for which they are to be chosen, will be invested with almost every branch of legislative authority, and will generally reside without the states represented by them.

'Their authority will extend not only to the foreign commerce but to the internal œconomy of the states. They are to keep up armies within the states at all times, and to have the sole power of calling the militia into service, excepting the case of foreign invasion. The states therefore lose the right of compelling the obedience of their own subjects.

'No state will be able to pay its debts otherwise than by a dry tax; imposts and excises being applied wholly to continental purposes. The several states are not allowed to certify their own debts, even without making their bills a tender.

'Titles of land in many cases are to be tried by a continental court. This gives the national government unequal authority in different states, and creates different interests. Some states will lose their whole jurisdiction over real estates; and the large state of Vermont will be excluded from the union.

'These are great difficulties and ought to be well weighed before the system is adopted, which will forever put it out of our power to remedy them, otherwise than by force of arms. Our people are every day coalescing under a wise and moderate, but firm government. Let us not hastily divide them.

'Thanks are due to the gentlemen who have come so near the truth in a matter of such importance to us all. But it will probably be found necessary to have this system carefully revised and corrected, before it will be perfect, and be likely to promote the happiness of any state in the union; as it does not at present conform to their established habits.'

The people of Virginia, some time since, in instructions to their representatives, speaking of Congress, declare, "That the melioration of a constitution, founded upon such false and incompatible 'principles, seems in every view almost impossible; but expedients proposed, which require the 'unanimous concurrence of thirteen separate legislatures, differing in interests, distinct in habits, 'and opposite in prejudices, have so repeatedly 'failed, that they no longer furnish a ray of hope. 'We pray, therefore, for the day when we shall 'see a national convention sit, composed of the 'best and ablest men in the union, a majority of 'whom shall be invested with the power of altering 'it. It is now so bad, as to defy the malace of fortune and ingenuity to make it worse."

To suppose, (says a writer in a late London paper) that the great misfortune that now convulses Holland, and threatens it with all the calamity of civil and foreign war, will come to nothing; and that the mediation of foreign powers will happily effect a speedy reconciliation, and quietly restore things to their former state of tranquility and confidence between the stadtholder and the Dutch nation, upon the principles of their constitution, is indeed supposing a miracle, far, very far beyond the faith of this writer, who is taught by long experience, and by the recent example of America, to view the situation and fate of the Dutch republic in the most serious and alarming light; and to conclude, from premises so clear, that as foreign intervention is inevitable, so the great powers of Prussia, France, Great-Britain, and consequently their allies, must take an active part, and soon or late involve all Europe in another war.

This calamitous event already discovers itself by the disposition of Prussia and France: the former interposes in favor of the constitutional power of the prince stadtholder; and the latter in behalf of the constitutional authority of the people, in consequence of the recent alliance of the French and Dutch nations.

It is with a noble and patriotic pride that America boasts of her Barlows, her Dwights, her Trumbulls, and her Humphreys, the poetick luminaries of Connecticut. She also boasts of her Washingtons, her Adams's, and her Dickensons in politics—her Franklins, her Winthrops, and her Rittenhouses, in philosophy—her Jeffersons, in natural history—and her Ramsays, in political history—all American original literary characters. Let the learned of our country, like them, no longer shine in borrowed beams, but in their own native lustre, independent and uncontrouled by that servile imitation which led the abbe Raynal to suppose the human mind depressed in America; and we may convince Europe that the abbe was mistaken, and that America can be as independent in the achievements of genius in all kinds of literature, as she is in politics.—Let us encourage literary genius wherever we find it.—Let us think for ourselves, and make our own books in all the sciences——Nothing will serve more to accomplish an object so desirable, and so honorable to our country, that patronizing American publications in general, and especially those independent essays in literature which really have merit.

ALEXANDRIA, Oct. 11.

On the morning of the 5th inst. departed this life, in this place, the Honorable THOMAS STONE, Esquire, a member of the senate of Maryland; a man in whose character were combined the domestic virtues of private life, and the more eminent talents of the statesman and legislator——His singular assiduity and integrity in discharge of his duty, both as a professional man, and in the several distinguishing and important offices of public trust wherein he hath been placed by his country, had long since gained him the universal confidence, gratitude and applause of his fellow-citizens. His loss will be felt by his country—to his family and friends it is irreparable.

HALIFAX, September 22.

With respect to the war so long talked of and expected to take place in Europe, in consequence of the commotions which continue to distract the affairs of the seven Provinces—from all the intelligence that can be gathered from different quarters, the ministers of France and Great Britain by no means wish to embroil their respective nations in an expensive and bloody contest, which would probably afford no essential advantage to either country.—At the same time the English deem it prudent, in the present unsettled state of affairs, to be prepared for whatever might happen.

Many people on this side of the water appear to wish much to hear of such an event, from an idea they entertain of the pecuniary benefit that would accrue to themselves; but let such consider, that it is by the arts of peace that this country must ultimately flourish; not by the hurricane of war; which, though in the ordinary course of things, might not fail to throw large sums of money into the hands of many individuals; yet we have already seen that little real benefit followed the introduction of such a momentary flow of cash. The soil was not cultivated; agriculture of every kind was neglected, and thought unworthy of notice, while the inhabitants were capable of enriching themselves by other less laborious methods: Nor was commerce attended to, other than the importation of articles for our immediate consumption from Great Britain; nor any other means of payment thought of but cash, that being the easiest acquired here, and most acceptable at home. In short, affluence (as it frequently does) introduced with itself indolence and luxury; and while the people were growing wealthy, the country was suffering for want of improvement. Since the peace commenced, our affairs have taken another turn—no longer finding themselves able to amass fortunes by standing idly behind their counters, the more enterprising and industrious part of the community are searching out new sources of wealth, hitherto untried and unthought of in the province.—— Our whale-fishery is beginning to put on a respectable appearance; our cod and other fisheries are improving; vessels of considerable size and value are building in our out-ports; and the hitherto barren wilderness is, in parts, fast bringing under cultivation, by the persevering hands of its new settled inhabitants. All these, and many more advantages, owe their rise to that harsh prescriber Necessity; which will, in time, however pungent the remedy may seem, effectually work a cure for all temporal evils——which peace has been thought by some to have loaded us with.

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.

The Boston Independent Chronicle of the 11th inst. received by yesterday's mail, has the following articles:——

"Important European Intelligence.

"By letters from France, of the 18th and 24th of August, received by a vessel which arrived at Salem on Tuesday last, we are acquainted of the manner in which the political affairs of Europe are embroiled.

Extract of a letter from France, Aug. 18.

"The disputes in Holland are encreasing, and have a most malignant aspect, and will undoubtedly occasion a rupture between France and England. Letters from London of the 10th instant fully confirm it.——The people of Brabant are also in a state of high contention with the Emperor, who on his return from Cherson assembled the governors-general and deputies of the provinces, and during his conferences with them his troops were put in motion towards Brabant. The deputies of the states are suspended from their authority by the Emperor, while the inhabitants have abandoned every occupation, and employ themselves wholly in military exercises; even the monks and religious order have changed the gown for the sword; besides that, the hereditary states of Hungary are in arms against the Emperor; therefore we have nothing to apprehend from that quarter, he being fully occupied with his own affairs.

"England and France are fitting out their fleets, while the king of France is at war with his parliament, occasioned by a land tax, stamp duty, and other alterations in the revenues. The edicts have been published, and the parliament of Paris has refused to enregister them. Repeated remonstrances were made by the king. The parliament protested, and forbid the edicts being carried into execution. They expected to be individually exiled, but what was more extraordinary, they were banished in a body to Troyes in Champaign. The judges, lawyers and clerks, with their wives and children, were obliged fly with them. All this has produced a violent commotion in this country. The other parliaments in the kingdom will, without doubt, experience the same oppression. This has thrown Paris into great consternation."

"Another letter of the 24th of August says, "The post of this day has brought a confirmation of the above account from Paris, and also of a greater tumult in that city. The Court of Aids were required to enregister the edicts, and having refused, are banished to Pontise. The Count d'Artois, the king's brother, appeared with the guards and the corps of gendarmerie, but were defeated and repulsed. The queen appeared at the opera, with Madame d'Artois, after it was begun; and it being usual to begin again on her appearance, the people clamoured and forbid it; she was obliged to retire, and was followed and insulted by the mob to her palace. The people are all in confusion, and the parliament seem determined not to comply with the demand of the king."

October 18, STEPHEN GIRARD.

Messrs. PRINTERS,

By inserting the following Complaint, you will much oblige one who is, when properly attended to, your immutable friend, A neglected Spinning-wheel.

HOW doleful 'tis to stand neglected here,
No friendly hand to help—no friend, I fear!
In melancholy state I stand alone,
My limbs all mangled, I am quite undone;
One leg lies yonder, from my body torn,
My head is broke, and I'm become a scorn.

Obsequious servants, lend a list'ning ear,
Anticipate your fates, and drop a tear.
As you are now, I once was in esteem,
But service done's forgotten like a dream.
Americans late thought me their best friend,
But soon, too soon, alas! that thought did end:
And (gross ingratitude) now in my place
They substitute chitchat, new modes and une bon grace;
Forget that time revolves, and fate comes round,
And brings such haughty spirits to the ground.

Mistaken idiots! inconsistent things!
Your time has wheels, your trifling pleasures wings:
The very means you take to cause their stay,
Will give them fright: and send them fleeting 'way.
"Ingratitude (I've said) 'tis surely so,
To slight a friend, and nurse a deadly foe.
But 'tis no wonder man should act this part,
So strange and perverse is that creature's heart.
All other beings have some settled plan;
To-veer unsteady is the sphere of man.
Toss'd to and fro, as whim affects his brain,
And only sure mutable to remain.
Unmindful of the ken experience brings;
I say again you're inconsistent things.

But this perhaps too much like spleen appears,
And may not sound with pleasure in your ears.
Yet who, alas! can cool or mod'rate be,
That's treated with so much contempt as me?
'Twould raise some choler in a Stoick's breast:
I'm somewhat vex'd; I really do not jest.
But now I'll lay my malice all aside:
I'll also drop my vanity and pride,
To talk more reasonably on the case,
And try to preach repentance to this race.

The first step towards conversion is to know,
That mischief does await the way we go:
Then look around and see the consequence
Attending idleness; what vast expence
You're daily at to purchase indolence.
This soon will bring in poverty to stand
A close companion, fix'd at your right hand.
You'll then remember (when perhaps too late)
Neglect of me has brought you to this fate.

Be early warn'd, attend to my advice,
You ought at least to be as wise as nice.
'Twas folly first occasion'd my neglect,
Throw folly off, and treat me with respect.
Though 'tis but seldom servants wish employment,
I really do, to me 'tis great enjoyment;
Not that I find much pleasure in my labour,
But that it is of service to my neighbour.
And sure am I true pleasure ne'er can flow,
To one of goodness, from their neighbour's woe.

ANECDOTE.

SOON after the publication of the Rambler, in volumes, (a periodical paper by Doctor Johnson) one of his friends very officiously took the liberty to mention to him, on a certain occasion, that several gentlemen of sense, taste and erudition had found considerable fault with his heavy stile, his great number of pedantic words, and the long tedious periods of a mile with which that work abounds.——"Men of sense! (cried the Doctor in a violent rage)—I would have you to know, Sir, that I did not write the Rambler for your men of sense—I wrote it only for the use of fools, and as such do not despair of seeing one hundred thousand copies sold off in less than a twelvemonth!"

CAPT. DAVID BLACKMAN was murdered on board the schooner Polly, laying at anchor off Reedy-Island, the latter end of September last, supposed to be done by the person who was on board with him, John Tracy by name, an Irishman, about 19 years of age, 5 feet 3 inches high, light complexion, and light straight hair; he has lost the end of one of his great toes by the frost; has an uncommon fore tooth in his lower jaw, and is pock-marked. Had on a pair of coarse linen trowsers, a coarse linen frock, check shirt, and new shoes. The vessel was last from Philadelphia, and had been in the lumber trade from Egg-harbour, where she belonged to the said Blackman's father. The said Tracy had formerly reported, that he had lived in Philadelphia and Wilmington. He had taken cash, goods, and a silver watch, with a button to cover the key hole, &c. The Captain was found on board, much bruised, and the boat taken away, which by every circumstance appears to have been done by said Tracy. All persons are required to secure the murderer, that he may be brought to justice, for which the above reward will be paid by
JAPHET CLARK,
DAVID BLACKMAN.

WANTED, a reputable WOMAN, who can do House Work, and can be well recommended. Enquire of the Printers.

PIRACY.

RAN-AWAY with from Simpson's Bay, St. Martins, by three White Men and one Black Boy, on the evening of the 4th September, a small Virginia built SCHOONER, about 38 feet keel, with black sides, white bottom, quarters and stern green, two cabbin windows and two quarter lights, the rudder traversing clear of the upper part of the stern, new standing rigging and new sails, the main gaff scarfed, in consequence of the new mainsail being too square, new comings and waist partly new, has much the appearance of Bermuda built, and had on board nineteen Puncheons of Rum, taken from Friars' Bay, French Quarters, St. Martins, under Dutch colours, the papers in the name of one captain John Stockey, were endorsed to John White, and the Schooner was called The Friars' Bay Packet. The Captain that ranaway with her was one Robert Enesew (or something like it) born in some part of England, but resided for 8 or 10 years last past in this island; about 5 feet 4 or 5 inches high, black hair, black eyes, brown complexion and smooth skin. Savory Taylor, another white man, about 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high, fair hair, freckled in the face and on the hands, about 21 years of age, with grey eyes, born in Virginia. Thomas Champlin, about the size of the Captain, not so corpulent, but of a thinner body, black hair hair, and born in the island of St. Martins. The Negro Boy, (the property of Simon Ahman) by the name of Billy Scott, about 16 years of age, has but one eye, likely faced. By a schooner from Spanish-Town, captain John Butler, we have the following information, viz. that a few days before he left that island, there had been at St. Johns, as he was informed by several of the inhabitants, a schooner, which came to anchor at Water Mellon Key, which was well known to be the Schooner ranaway with from St. Martins, and that they sold one hogshead of rum at two shillings per gallon, and bought corn and some other articles, and went away again the same day. The account they gave of themselves was, that they were from St. Martins, drove out by stress of weather; that they had left their Captain on shore; but it was observed that they kept down before the wind after quitting Water Mellon Key, and it was supposed were destined for St. Thomas: he also observes, that the natives (after their departure) were suspicious, from their mode of acting, that they were not on any good design.

A very reasonable Reward will be given for securing the Vessel and Cargo, or any part of the property, as also for apprehending the Villain or Villains, so that they may be brought to justice, and every necessary expence will be paid by

AARON AHMAN.

St. Martins, September 21, 1787. 3teo

For Grist Mills & other Water Works

On an extensive Plan,

One of the best situations in America is offered

FOR SALE,

Together With

Batsto Iron-Works,

At the forks of Little Egg-Harbour river, one of the most healthy spots in New Jersey, 38 miles by land from Philadelphia, and within a few hours sail of New York.

THE river, communicating with the sea by the best inlet on the Jersey coast, is navigable for vessels of 200 tons within a few miles of the works; those of 100 tons may approach within one mile; flats and scows, carrying 10 or 12 tons, load and unload at the works. The usual freight to New York or Philadelphia is 10 shillings per ton. The furnace stream affords plenty of water, in the dryest season, for 3 or 4 pair of mill stones, besides supplying the iron works.——An excellent dam, which has been increasing in strength many years by the cinder from the furnace, is well secured from the danger of freshes, and the works are scarcely ever injured or delayed by either ice or backwater, though the tide swells to the foot of the dam: mills may therefore be erected at a moderate expence. This being a part of the country in which many people and many teams are necessarily employed in collecting and preparing for market the iron and lumber with which it abounds, and at the same time illy adapted to the raising of grain for their support, there is, and must continue to be, a demand for large quantities of midlings, cornell, shorts and bran, at advanced prices; and the conveniencp of conveying flour at a light expence, either to New York or Philadelphia, or to more distant markets, will not be overlooked nor considered as of small importance, especially as there are few mill seats of any considerable capacity equally adapted to the New York market, which is not unfrequently supplied with superfine flour from Philadelphia. A choice of the various kinds of wheat may be drawn to this seat from Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, and New York with greater ease and convenience than to almost any other mills now in being.

The FURNACE, which by the extensive lands annexed to it, is abundantly supplied with wood and ore, is now in blast, and is noted for producing the best hollow ware in America, the metal being peculiarly well adapted to the making of castings of all kinds, as well as excellent bar iron.

A FORGE, with four fires and two hammers, belongs to the estate, and stands about half a mile from the furnace, on another fine stream which affords plenty of water.

A SLITTING and ROLLING MILL, having been disused for the last two or three years, may want some repairs to prepare it for use; but the forebays and gates are in perfect order, and being in the proper spot for grist mills, may be appropriated to that use.

Two SAW MILLS in good order, and a small Grist Mill.

The MANSION HOUSE is elegantly situated about 100 yards from the furnace, on an height which commands a view of the whole works, and of the two villages formed by the surrounding buildings belonging to the estate, such as barns, stables, coal houses, workshops, storehouses and dwellings for work men. Adjoining the mansion house is a large and fruitful garden, affording plenty of vegetables, and well stored with chosen fruit trees; also a young bearing orchard, containing near 2000 apple trees, mostly grafted.

These excellent accommodations for extensive and profitable manufactories, are offered to sale at a very low rate, and on terms of payment calculated for the ease of the purchaser, who may pay the greater part in the produce of the Iron Works, at a price to be agreed upon; and they are capable of producing more in one year, than will pay the whole price demanded.

For particulars, apply to WILLIAM RICHARDS, at the said Works, JOHN COX, at Bloomsbury, near Trenton, or CHARLES PETTIT, in Philadelphia.

Sixpence Reward.

RAN away from the subscriber, on Wednesday the 19th instant, an Apprentice Lad, named David Buchanan, about 20 years of age, dark complexion and short hair; had on when he went away, a yellow stripped coattee, and trowsers of the same, other apparel not known. Whoever takes up said apprentice, and delivers him to his master, shall be intitled to the above reward. THOMAS CARSTAIRS.

Bordentown Academy.

THE subscriber takes this method to inform the public, that he still continues his Academy open at Bordentown, and that having supplied himself with a good tutor, means to increase his school to about thirty pupils, having formerly confined himself to a smaller number, being confident that he and his assistant can fully do their duty by them. The branches that are taught in his academy are reading, writing, arithmetic, the Latin, Greek and French languages, practical mathematics, geography, with the use of the globes, and the arts and sciences in general. He has in said Academy a good library and philosophical apparatus, for the use of his pupils; so that gentlemen may have their children fitted either for any particular clase in college, or their education finished with him. He pays a particular attention to rhetoric and oratory, and flatters himself that he has turned out some good speakers, so necessary in our republic. He provides board, washing, lodging and every necessary accommodation, either in his own house, or in a genteel family who accommodates part of his pupils. The exceeding healthiness and pleasantness of the situation, together with the ready communication with both the cities of Philadelphia and New-York, render it the most eligible spot on the continent for a seminary of learning. As there will be a vacation during the month of October, such gentlemen as wish to send their sons had best apply to him at Bordentown, either by letter or otherwise, during the time of vacation, that they may enter when the school commences on the first of November, as he cannot admit any more when his number is compleated. Those gentlemen who confide their children to his care may depend upon every attention being paid by

Their most respectful humble Servant,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, Aug. 10.

A Very singular experiment is now making at one of the private dock-yards in the river Thames, in the line of naval architecture. A vessel is constructing for a packet, whose whole bottom, the stern and head-post and keel-stern excepted, is wholly of copper, without planking of any kind whatever below the water's edge. The ribs are the same as in other vessels, except in respect to size and thickness, being only 5-8ths parts of the scantling usual to such vessels of the same tonnage. Above the swale the planking is the same as in other vessels, but rather of reduced thickness. The plates of copper are about the eighth of an inch in thickness, fastened to each other with rivets, and soldered strongly together in the manner of boiling utensils. If this essay should prove successful, as it must be particularly advantageous to vessels which require swiftness, some packets will be built for government in the same manner.—The hint is taken from the iron works in Shropshire, where a boat has been built in the same manner with iron plates, which is employed in the Birmingham canal, and carries 30 tons weight of goods.

The late major general Salter was originally a private in the guards, and was taken from the ranks by the late duke of Cumberland. His Highness caused him to be made a serjeant, and soon after was so pleased with his voice and manner of giving the word of command, that he gave him a commission in the same regiment. This promotion gave great offence to the other officers, who refused Mr. Salter their countenance. Thus circumstanced, he waited upon the Royal Duke, and stated the aukwardness of his situation. "Well, well, said the Duke, meet me to-morrow on the parade." The Duke came down earlier than usual, and going up to the colour-stand, his Highness saluted lord Ligonier, and the officers of the regiment who were all in conversation together; but directing his eye round, as if by accident, he noticed poor Salter alone: "What, said his Highness, has that officer done, that he is drummed out of your councils?"—And going up to him, took him by the arm and walked up and down the parade with him, in the presence of the different battalions and their officers. Lord Ligonier accosting at this time the Duke, entreated his Highness's company to dinner. "With all my heart said the Duke—and remember Salter comes with me."——His Lordship bowing said, "I hope so." After this Ordeal, Salter was well received by all his brethren of the blade; and by his merit raised himself to the rank he held at his death. About fourteen years since he retired from public service, somewhat displeased, and certainly ill-treated.

A private letter from Bruges, of the 30th inst. gives the following curious account of clerical monopoly:——"A canon of this city had for some time past laid out the money, which it was his duty to employ for the relief of the poor and necessitous, in adding to their distress, by stripping the markets at an early hour of such commodities of prime necessity as were most useful, and in general, from the reasonable price they sold at, most within the reach of the indigent part of the inhabitants.—This vile traffic the scandalous priest carried on unmolested for several weeks; but as he was known to be a great champion for the Imperial cause, the patriotic mob watched him so narrowly, that the iniquitous mystery was at last brought to light.——The wretch's intention was manifestly to starve the poor, since he derived no other advantage from his monopoly than hiding under ground those provisions, and leaving them to remain till they were spoiled, and unfit for use.

It was in such condition, that the unwelcome visitors found whole firkins of butter, cheese, bread, &c. covered two feet thick with mouldiness. The consequence is easily foreseen. Luckily for the priest of Mammon, he had found means to make his escape. Nevertheless as this occasioned a violent riot, the magistrates interposed, 16 of the ring-leaders were taken up, gallows erected, and the unfortunate people condemned to be hanged. The sentence would certainly have been executed without mitigation, but upon taking further information on the spot, and obtaining the clearest proof of the clergyman's villainy, the judges ordered the gallows to be burnt. Half of them were soon consumed in the market-place where they had been erected, and under the very eye of the Emperor's guard, the remainder was taken up by the populace, and a bonfire made of them before the house of the canon. Meanwhile the judges paraded round the streets in their coaches, each of them having by his side one or more of the ring-leaders, till all of them had been provided with a triumphal seat, and proclaimed innocent throughout the whole city.—The scene closed in merriment and intoxication, the priest's cellars were emptied of their valuable and savory contents, and by the people the house doomed to be levelled to the ground, and salt thrown upon the ruins by way of a curse."

It is remarkable that the surface of the earth about Bilstone, Darlaston, and those collieries, is perpetually burning. The inhabitants ride between those wild fires, which appear on each side of the road, with the most perfect indifference. These collieries are about 11 or 12 miles from Birmingham, and supply that town with the immense quantity of coals consumed by the various manufactories of the place.

The Princess of Prussia, who is to give her hand to the Duke of York, is said to be one of the most beautiful and accomplished Princesses in Europe.—In such an union the superior merit of each party will meet its due reward—that happiness, to which virtue only has a just claim, and virtue only can enjoy. She is a daughter of the present King by a former consort, from whom he has been divorced for many years. The late great Monarch saw, at its first dawn, the mutual passion of these congenial souls, and was highly pleased with it.

The Utrecht Gazettes and letters, which should have arrived by the Dutch mail on Monday last, came with yesterday's mail; it appears the reason they were not sent in proper time, was owing to the gates of that town being shut, and the garrison ready for defence, in consequence of expecting an immediate attack.

But the Utrecht Gazettes, which should have come by yesterday's mail, are not yet arrived, which gives room for fresh conjectures; as there cannot be any doubt but Utrecht is the place meant to be first seriously attacked by the Stadtholder.

Nothing can shew more clearly the manifold advantages of Mr Pitt's plan for paying off the national debt, than the following authentic statement of the Stock: There have been already bought up by the Commissioners——

Three per cent. consols	£. 483,050
Reduced annuities	329,400
Old South-Sea	291,900
New South Sea	180,650
South-Sea 1751	58,100

August 22. We were last night, with much confidence, informed, in addition to the account given in our paper of yesterday, of the king of France having exiled the parliament of Paris, in consequence of their remonstrances——That a letter from the QUEEN OF FRANCE, to MONS. CALONNE, had been intercepted, the contents of which were of such a nature, as to occasion an order from the king, that the queen should retire to her CHATEAU at TRIANON, there to remain under the direction of particular persons till further order from the court.

We feel it our duty to give the above report as we received it from respectable authority, though we do not pledge ourselves for its truth.

In justice also, we must add, that on inquiry last night at the Charge des Affaires from France, we were informed that on account of such an event had been received.

We have, however, authentic information that a very dangerous mob assembled in consequence of the parliament being exiled, and that violent consequences were apprehended.

Mons. Calonne, the impeached minister of France, is now in London.

The following answer was received a few days ago from an author, to a card of invitation:—"I am writing the life of a nobleman, who is expected to die every hour, and the devil now waits for it—therefore cannot do myself the pleasure of dining with you this day."

Several orders for coarse woolens have been received at Dublin, from America, Portugal and France.

The right honorable John Ponsonby, late speaker of the house of commons of Ireland, died on the 16th instant.

The place where the parliament of Paris are exiled is not Pontoisa, as presumed from former custom, but Troyes, a trading, but very unfashionable town, where the houses are mean, and for the most part built of wood.

August 23. Our letters, by the last mail, give no account of any further hostilities, having been committed in Holland by either party. They observe, that M. le baron de Thulemeyer, the Prussian envoy, holds frequent conferences with the ministers of state, and with M. de Verac, ambassador from the king of France. They speak no more of the march of the Prussian troops, and flatter themselves, that the king of Prussia has countermanded the orders he had issued.

The city of Amsterdam, in consequence of a provincial resolution of 1580, bearing a statute for preserving order in the assembly of the state, has demanded reparation in favor of the Pensionary Van Berkel, who had been insulted in full assembly, by the baron de Wassenear Stakrenberg, member of the Equestrian Order.

PETERSBURGH, June 30.

We hear from Cherson, that her majesty has given orders to build, as soon as possible, as many houses as that city will contain. We are assured that the empress having a particular regard for that place, will restore to all the cities and territories of that country, their ancient names. It should seem that the czarina has in view, the restoration of the Greek empire;——And as that country lies at a great distance, from which a number of inconveniences may consequently arise in its government, it is said her imperial majesty intends to erect it into an empire separate from her own, and to give the command to prince Constantine, her nephew.

BERLIN, August 4.

The English couriers arrived here some days since, are here still. They say the dispatches of one of them concern the marriage of the duke of York, with the princess Frederica. That prince has ordered a service of porcelain to be made, worth 10,000 crowns.

AMERICA.

AUGUSTA, (Georgia) Sept. 25.

Extract of a letter from John Sevier, Esquire, Governor of the state of Franklin, to his honor the Governor of this state, dated Mount-Pleasant, August 30, 1787.

"Respecting the conduct of the Creeks, I think it extraordinary indeed, that they should have the insolence to demand any white person as a retaliation, when it is notoriously known, they were the first aggressors, and that they have frequently, and indiscriminately, murdered our good and peaceable citizens for many months past.

"The two inclosed letters from colonels Robertson and Bledsoe, will inform you of the many murders and ravages committed in that country by the Creeks: also of the fate of captain Davenport, and some others in the Chickesaw nation.—From past experience, I believe, every overture made by that perfidious nation, the Creeks, is intended for a deception.—The state of Georgia may be convinced that we will encounter every difficulty, in order to raise a formidable force to act in conjuction with your army, in case of a campaign.

"We have lately been informed from Virginia, that a number of gentlemen in state are ready to join us as volunteers.

"Our assembly sat but a few days, and adjourned to the 17th of September.—They ordered 400 men to be raised for the defence of our frontiers; they will be stationed in the vicinity of Chickamaugah."

Extract of a letter from Colonel Robertson, to the Governor of the state of Franklin, dated Nashville (Cumberland) August 1, 1787.

"By accounts from the Chickesaws, we are informed, that at a grand council held in the Creek nation, it was unanimously determined, to do their utmost, this fall, to cut off this country, and we expect the Cherokees have joined them.

"On the 5th of July, a party of Creeks killed captain Davenport, agent for Georgia, and three more in the Chickesaw nation, wounded three, and took one prisoner; which the Chickesaws are not able to resent for want of ammunition.

"The people are drawing together in large stations, and do every thing necessary for their defence; but, I fear, without some timely assistance, we shall chiefly fall a sacrifice. Ammunition is very scarce, and Chickesaw now here, tells us, that they imagine to reduce our station by killing our cattle, &c. and starve us out.

"We expect they are now on their way to this country to the number of a thousand."

Extract of a letter from Colonel Bledsoe, to the Governor of the state of Franklin, dated Summer county, August 5, 1787.

"The savages are daily committing the most cruel outrages—Poor major Hall and his eldest son, fell a sacrifice to their fury two days ago, near Bledsoe's Lick. They have killed about 24 persons in the course of a few months in this settlement, besides a number more near it."

Extract of a letter from General Cocke, to his honor the Governor of this state, dated Mulberry-Grove (state of Franklin) June 25.

"When I take a view of the local and political situation of this country, I conceive the interest of your state, so far as respects Indian affairs, almost inseparable with the safety and happiness of this country:—I am certain every thing to serve your state or its interest, will be done by the people of Franklin—General Kennedy, I imagine, will be able to raise a thousand or fifteen hundred men as volunteers, and I think I can raise a like number; an army of two or three thousand men will be quite sufficient to march through any of their towns. I hope the Indians have not been so successful in your state as the Cherokees report; the accounts from that nation are, that the Creeks have killed 25 families without the loss of a man.—I have ordered the different colonels under my command, to hold their men in readiness, to march when necessity shall require it."

PETERSBURG, October 11.

The following attrocious murder was lately committed by a widow woman, on a young man who has since proved to be her only son, and who had been absent from her for many years:—It appears from the circumstances we have been able to collect, that after having served in the army until the troops were disbanded, he had, by his industry and œconomy, collected a sum of money, with which he was desirous of paying his mother a visit, and by his presence and assistance, to render the remainder of her days easy and comfortable. Upon his arrival in the neighbourhood where she lived, it was agreed between him and some of his former acquaintances, that he should personate a travelling stranger in search of quarters for the night, in order to discover whether his mother would recollect him, as well as to guard against the effects which so unexpected an interview might have upon her. Accordingly in the evening he applied to her, but to no purpose, until, as his last resource, he informed her, that he had a large sum of money with him, which he did not wish to risk by being on the road at a late hour, or lodging at a public house, and of which he desired she would take charge. At this unfortunate moment, the dæmon Avarice appears to have taken full possession of her mind, and to have suggested to her the practicability of making the golden prize her own, by means almost too horrid for recital. She therefore, as if over persuaded, consented to his request; and the evening being spent without any discovery on her part, he was lodged in a room to which she had access; and when in a sleep sound from fatigue and security, and unsuspicious of his approaching fate, she murdered him by cutting his throat from ear to ear. The next day his companions, according to their agreement on their first meeting, went to visit him, supposing he had by that time discovered himself to his mother; but upon enquiring for the young man, she denied that any such person had been there; upon which they declared there had been, and that he was her own son. From a change in her countenance and her still persisting that no person had been there, the young men entertained some suspicions, and insisted on searching the house, which being done, and some traces of blood discovered, they questioned her about the cause of it; and from the horror that appeared to seize her, and her evasive answers, they were so far confirmed in their suspicions of her having murdered her son, that they took her into custody, and she is now waiting her doom. She has since made a confession of the crime, the money recovered, and her son's body has been found where she buried it.

 A meeting of the inhabitants of the town of Petersburg and counties adjacent, is requested, on Saturday the 20th instant, at Mr. Hare's tavern, in order to have their opinion upon the constitution proposed by the Federal Convention to the several states of the American union.

WILMINGTON, October 17.

Yesterday the Wilmington Academy was examined by the trustees, in presence of a numerous and brilliant audience. The students acquitted themselves in their learning to their own honour, and that of the institution; and afterwards entertained the audience with several agreeable specimens of their progress in elocution.

The Sussex election we hear was to take place last Monday, a compromise having been made with the party which had violently prevented the election on the day appointed by law.

A very ingenious farmer has communicated to us the following useful receipt, which he assures us he has often experienced to be perfectly effectual.

To make Cyder of early or late fruit, that will keep any length of time, without the trouble of frequently drawing off.

TAKE the largest cask you have on your farm, from a barrel upwards, put a few sticks in the bottom, in the manner that housewives set a lye-cask, so as to raise a vacancy of two or three inches from the bottom of the cask, then lay over these sticks either a clean old blanket, or if that be not at hand, a quantity of the swinglings of flax, so as to make a coat of about a quarter of an inch thick when it is well pressed down; then put in so much clean washed sand, from a beach or road, as will cover about six or eight inches in depth of your vessel; pass all your cyder from the press through a table cloth suspended by the corners, which will take out the pumice, and pour the liquor gently upon the sand, through which it must be suffered to filter gradually, and as it runs off by a tap inserted in your vessel, in the vacancy made by the sticks at the bottom, it will be found by this easy method as clear as cyder can be expected, after the most laborious process of refining, and all the mucilaginous matter which causes the fermentation and scouring of cyder, will be so separated as to prevent that disagreeable consequence.

N. B. Other methods may easily be invented of passing the cyder through the sand, which is the only essential part of the above process.

Philadelphia, Oct. 20.

By the UNITED STATES in CONGRESS ASSEMBLED.

October, 11, 1787.

THE Committee to whom was referred a report of the Board of Treasury, and a motion of Mr. Kean, respecting the requisition for 1787, having reported, "That from the several papers referred to them, it appears that there is wanting, for the services of the year 1787, the payment of one year's interest on the foreign debt, and such part of the principal as becomes due in the year 1788, and the payment of one year's interest on the domestic debt, the sum of 3,009 798: 64-90 dollars:

"That of the aforesaid sum, 1.309,391. 64-90 is absolutely necessary in specie—that there are considerable sums in specie due from the States, over and above those which are necessary to discharge the existing demands on former requisitions, which sums are nearly equal to the payment of that part of the present requisition that is absolutely necessary in specie; and the objects for which the said sums were called for no longer existing, they may be now appropriated to the purposes of the present requisition; that, in their opinion, many difficulties have arisen from the restrictions made in former requisitions, in the issuing of the indents of interests; the making them receivable only for the year in which they were issued, and then only when accompanied by a certain proportion of specie; and declaring, that after a certain period, they should not be received from the States at the Fœderal Treasury; all which have served to check the exertions of the States, and to keep back the specie payments; nor have they had those beneficial effects expected from them, of stopping the issue of indents, where States had not passed Legislative Acts to call them in, or keeping up their value, and preventing depreciation; but on the contrary, have opened a new scene of speculation, in transferring the property of a citizen of a State, which has not passed a Legislative Act, to a citizen of a State which has. In addition to this, the Committee observe, that the acts of Congress, empowering the Board of Treasury to contract for the sale of the Western Territory, also empowers them to issue indents of interest to the purchasers; so that, to continue such restrictions, would operate only to the injury of a few, and be no public benefit." Whereupon

Resolved, That for the services of the year 1787, for the payment of one year's interest on the foreign debt, and such part of the principal as becomes due in the year 1788, and for the payment of one year's interest on the domestic debt, it will be necessary, that three millions and nine thousand seven hundred and ninety-eight sixty-four ninetieths dollars, be paid into the Treasury of the United States, on or before the first day of July next; to be appropriated to the following purposes, viz.

For the Civil Department			124,161. 85
Military Department			176 757. 17
Geographer's Department			9 964
Invalid Pensions			88 [illegible]
Contingencies			19.000
Foreign debt for the payment of interest on the French and Dutch Loans, and two instalments of principal on the French Loans, becoming due in 1788		871,622. 87
Spanish Loan, one year's interest due thereon	8,700
Debt due to Foreign Officers, one year's interest thereon	11,185. 55
			891,508. 52
Domestic Debt, one year's interest thereon			1,700,407
Making in the whole, Dollars			3,009,798. 64

Resolved, That the sums called for in the years 1784, 1785 and 1786, and stated by the Board of Treasury not now to be necessary, the objects for which they were called for no longer existing, which sums amount to one million two hundred thousand dollars, be now appropriated to the payment of that part of the present requisition, which cannot be discharged but with specie; any thing in former requisitions to the contrary notwithstanding: and shall be applied in conformity with the several appropriations in the preceding part of this report, giving preference according to the order in which they are stated in the estimate.

Resolved, That one hundred and nine thousand three hundred and ninety-one dollars, sixty-four ninetieths, in the hands of the commissioners of loans in Holland, in aid of the above sum, be appropriated for the discharging the interest due on the foreign debt due in Holland, and to no other purpose whatever.

As 1,700,407 dollars called for, are to be applied to the payment of the interest due on the domestic debt of the United States.

Resolved, that the several states be allowed to discharge the same by indents for interest on loan-office certificates, and upon other certificates of the liquidated debts of the United States, in such manner as they may think most expedient; and to ascertain the evidences of interest due on loan-office certificates, the holders thereof respectively shall be at liberty to carry them to the office from which they issued; and the holders of other certificates of liquidated debts of the United States, to carry the same to the loan-office of that state wherein they are inhabitants, or if foreigners, to any loan-office within the United States, and to have the interest thereon settled and certified to the last day of the year 1786; any thing in the requisitions for the years 1784, 1785, and 1786, to the contrary notwithstanding.

Resolved, That the quotas of the several states of the aforesaid sum of 1,700,407 dollars in indents be as follows:

New-Hampshire,	59,684
Massachusetts,	254 381
Rhode Island,	36,558
Connecticut,	149,976
New York,	145,555
New-Jersey,	94 372
Pennsylvania,	232,616
Delaware,	25 506
Maryland,	160 349
Virginia,	2[illegible]0,770
North Carolina,	123.450
South Carolina,	108 996
Georgia,	18,194 is 1,700,407

That the foregoing requisition, when paid, shall be passed to the credit of the states respectively, on the terms prescribed by the resolve of Congress of the 6th day of October, 1779.

Resolved, That the Board of Treasury furnish the several loan-officers with indents, to be issued for interest as aforesaid, and also with such checks and instructions as they from time to time shall judge necessary, to prevent counterfeit certificates of debts from obtaining a settlement of interest, and to detect counterfeit evidences of interest, and thereby to avoid receiving them in discharge of taxes; which indents of interest being parted with by the holders of the principal, shall be deemed evidence that he has received satisfaction for the same, and therefore shall be receivable from the bearer in lieu of money in any other state in the union, as well as in the state in which they were issued.

That the state paying such indents of interest into the fœderal treasury shall have credit therefor, which payment shall be considered as a discharge of the interest on the domestic debt, in the proportion that each state avails itself of the said indents of interest; but no state shall have a right to pay more than its quota, as specified in the existing requisitions of Congress, in the said indents of interest.

Resolved, That the Board of Treasury be, and they are hereby directed to transmit to each state an account of their respective arrears in specie and in indents, to state to them the impediments that the public service has suffered, and the accumulation of foreign & domestic embarrassments that have arisen from their delinquency—to press upon them the absolute necessity of their making payment of their arrears of specie, as it is the only fund on which Congress can rely, for the support of the fœderal government——and to remind those states who continue particularly delinquent, that they must be considered as responsible for all the evils which will inevitably flow from a disregard to the political obligations by which they are constitutionally bound.

Resolved, That such part of the requisitions of the years 1784, 1785, and 1786, as restricts the receipt at the public treasury of indents of interest without a certain proportion of specie——Those parts which declare that after a certain day those states which have not paid their quotas shall be held to pay the same in specie——and such part as prevents the receiving of the indents issued in one year in payment of taxes for another, be, and they are hereby repealed:——And it is hereby declared that the indents issued in 1784, 1785, and 1786, or under the present requisition, shall be indiscriminately received in payment of any state's quota of indents of interest.

Georgia is yet an infant settlement; but bids fair to be a populous and flourishing state, under the influence of its wise and liberal policy. The plan of a university lately adopted there is novel; but seems calculated to produce the most happy effects. The literary gentlemen throughout the state are combined, and incorporated for the purpose of superintending the literature of the state. They are to be governed by certain laws of their own making—and have the power of making such regulations as they think necessary respecting colleges, academies, and schools. An annual meeting of the whole society is to be held; in which laws shall be made, and degrees conferred upon such students in any of the academies, as shall be deemed qualified. A diploma entitles any citizen of the state to be a member of the university.

The designs of the institution is to render the system of education uniform throughout the state; and to effect this purpose, the university determine that only one kind of books, in any science, shall be used in all the academies, and schools in the state.

The funds of this institution are forty thousand acres of land; a thousand pounds in each county; with all the monies and lands granted for the support of schools before the revolution.

Such a plan of education, which excludes the principles of dissention, and combines the leading men of the state in the same society, constitutes the firmest basis of political and religious harmony.

In conformity to the principles of this institution, the leading gentlemen have examined Mr. Webster's Grammatical Institute, and determined to use it in the English department of schools, to the exclusion of all other books yet published upon that subject.

Messrs. PRINTERS,

THE following sentences were put to paper by a set of saucy fair ones, in the presence of their husbands, whom, forsooth, they accuse of having adopted since their marriage a phraseology different from that which they used when lovers. If you think this female production not altogether unworthy of a place in your paper, your inserting it will oblige several of your constant readers, and particularly

BENEDICT.

Lover. You do every thing well, Madam.

Husband. My dear, you don't seem to me to know how to do any thing.

Lover. How well you look to-day—indeed you are charming in any dress.

Husband. How frightful you are—I wish you would put on your clothes a little more becomingly.

Lover. That's a pretty cap—how elegant is your taste!

Husband. That hideous hat! My dear, you never will learn to dress yourself.

Lover. What pretty sentiments—how well you express yourself on every subject.

Husband. You know not how to talk on any subject as you ought to do—therefore pray hold your tongue.

Lover. Let me know your opinion, my dear Madam: it shall ever guide me.

Husband. What does it signify, my dear, what you say on the subject—I never consult women.

Lover. How neatly you carve that fowl—it is a pleasure to see you.

Husband. How awkward you are—the meat grows cold before you can cut it up; and, after all, it is done in such a manner that I cannot eat it.

Lover. I am so concerned to see you indisposed—can I offer nothing that will be of service to you, Madam?

Husband. It is all your own fault, my dear, that you have got this cold—you never take care of yourself.

THOUGHTS on SLEEP.

WE term sleep a death, and yet it is waking that kills us, and destroys those spirits that are the house of life. It is indeed a part of life that best expresses death, for every man truly lives so long as he acts his nature, or some way makes good the faculties of himself; Themistocles, therefore, who slew his soldier in his sleep, was a merciful executioner. It is a kind of punishment no laws hath invented. I wonder the fancy of Lucan or Seneca did not discover it. It is that death by which we may be literally said to die daily. A death which Adam died before his mortality: a death whereby we live a middle and moderating point between life and death: in fine, so like death, I dare not trust it without my prayers, and an half adieu to the world; and take a farewell in a colloquy with GOD.

THE night is come, like to the day,
Depart not thou, great GOD! away.
Let not my sins, black as the night,
Eclipse the lustre of thy light:
Keep still in my horizon, for to me
The sun makes not the day, but thee.
Thou, whose nature cannot sleep,
On my temples centry keep.
Guard me 'gainst those watchful foes
Whose eyes are open while mine close,
Let no dreams my head infest,
But such as Jacob's temples blest.
While I to sleep my soul advance,
Make me sleep a holy trance;
That I may, my rest being wrought,
Awake into some holy thought;
And with as active vigour run
My course as doth the nimble sun.
Sleep is a death; Oh! make me try
By sleeping what it is to die;
And as gently lay my head
In my grave as on my bed.
Howe'er I rest, great GOD! let me
Awake again, at least, with thee;
And thus assur'd behold I lie
Securely, or to wake or die;
These are my drowsy days; in vain
I do not wake to sleep again;
O come that hour when I shall never Sleep again, but wake forever.

ANECDOTE.

DOCTOR Lancelot Blackburne, Archbishop of York, in his younger years, it is said, had been Buccaneering, upon which was founded the following story. When he was Dean of Exeter, two of his former shipmates stept into church accidentally, while he was in the pulpit preaching. They were quite strangers to his new way of life, and could hardly believe their eyes or ears. One of them, as they were coming out of church, after the service was ended, in hearing of the Dean, swore a great oath, That he that preached to-day must be Lancey or the Devil. It must be the Devil then, replied the other, for I will be d——d if Lancey has not been hanged long before now. I should be sorry for that, said the Dean, joining them, for my profession is to save souls, and the loss of an old friend's would grieve me. All were in raptures at meeting one another so unexpectedly; and in the course of the conversation, which was carried on with sea-faring freedom, it was asked, how such a wicked d—g as Lancey had been, could ever think of turning priest? Oh, ho! said the Dean, the greater the sinner, the better the saint—I hope, bad as I have been, to be a good archbishop before I die. Which accordingly came to pass, though he had no likelihood of any such preferment at that time.

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be exposed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thursday the 29th of November next, at the Court-House in Harford county, state of Mryland,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

Those who wish to view the land, on application to Mess. Ashton and Waters, the present tenants, will be shewn it. Possession will be given the 1st of January, if required. The title good and free of all incumbrances. The terms will be easy to the purchaser, and will be made known on the day of sale, by Wm. WEST.

Foreign Intelligence.

VIENNA, July 21.

ON the 13th of this month, about 11 at night, a polar star of a brilliant red colour was discovered in our horizon, being brighter than that which appeared the 13th of last May. It was discernable the whole night in the horizon of the city, but was perceptible at Buda only unto midnight.

CADIZ, July 29.

There are many vessels now here from different parts of the United States of America, but as very few of them are particularly consigned, they find but a very slow and inadequate sale of their cargoes, and will of course be obliged to seek another market.

PARIS, July 30.

The Queen has assented to, and signed the reforms in her houshold, which amount to a million; of which there are 500,000 livres in eatables, 200,000 livres in her mews, &c.

The Parliament of Normandy has not yet registered the edict for the establishment of provincial assemblies. It demands before hand, a communication of the regulation made by the King for the formation of these assemblies. The different regulations for Poitou, Cluch, Lorraine, and Bar, Alsace, and Limousen, are made public. All these Provincial assemblies are to meet in August. His Majesty has nominated the several presidents.

The King's answer to the new remonstrance is very short; it consists in these few words: "I shall examine your remonstrances, and will inform you of the day when you are to receive my answer." The answer arrived last night, which, we are informed perseveres in commanding them to register the declaration of the Stamp Duty; at the same time, his Majesty leaves it to the Parliament to make proper observations on it, as to its modifications; for its quota and duration the King promises, that the amount of the produce, above eight millions, shall be applied to the discharge of such taxes as are most burthensome to the people. The King has announced the suppression of the two twentieths, which are to be replaced by a tenth, levied proportionably.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 15.

The great victory obtained by the captain pacha over the troops of Machmed pacha is confirmed; however, it has not been considerable enough to reduce that rebel to the danger of falling into the power of his enemies; on the contrary, his forces become every day more formidable on the side of Albania, and it will be necessary to attack him by sea.

There is not much appearance that the war will be of long duration in these countries; but on the contrary, that all the differences will be terminated agreeably by the intervention of some respectable courts. The internuncio from the court of Vienna, returned here the 14th of this month from Cherson. That minister remained six days with the emperor his master; and it is believed that he is charged with a commission, tending to terminate the differences which have taken place; but as he has not yet said any thing on the subject, it is most probable that he is waiting the return of the minister from the court of Russia, who is daily expected. In the mean time the porte does not appear to be disposed to relax in the least thing, but still continues to exact of Russia, the independence of the Georgians. The chief of that nation, the prince Heraclius, reduced to despair by the continual invasions of the Tartars, Lesghis and Abasas, is reduced to the necessity in consequence of not having been supported by Russia, conformable to the treaty, of addressing himself to the pacha of Achiska, to demand his mediation, which has been granted him on condition that he instantly declares the Georgians independent of Russia, and dependent on the porte, and that he gives up two of his sons, and some persons of distinction as hostages, for securing the accomplishment of these conditions.

NAPLES, June 10.

A countryman being at work in his field in the environs of Gaette, felt the earth under his feet suddenly give way, and he immediately fell into a spacious cavern, without receiving the least hurt; here he found three apartments, one filled with cannons, one with mortars, and a third with musquets and other arms. The king having become the proprietor of these effects, his majesty has granted a pension to the man who accidentally discovered them.

LONDON, Aug. 18.

By private letters from Holland we learn, that every thing is in the highest confusion; in consequence of the march of the Prussian troops, the Stadtholder is undoubtedly besieging Utrecht. It were ridiculous to suppose, that the French will remain idle spectators, and at once abandon their party and their true politics.

It is now just a complete century since Louis XIV. persecuted and drove out of his kingdom, by the assistance of two cruel and vindictive ministers, Le Tellier and Louvois, 500 000 of his subjects; in consequence of which, the city of Amsterdam alone raised more than a thousand houses filled with those unfortunate fugitives, revered for their virtues, their dignities, and their valour. Absurdity and folly succeeded those cruelties; a declaration of council authorized infants of seven years of age, to renounce their faith, so that children then became men, and men (the rulers) children! And now the very people who received with open arms those unhappy, persecuted persons, are taking up arms, to bring upon their heads ruin and desolation! If these are, and they certainly are, the ways of men in all ages, are we reasonable or unreasonable beings? Is there not an instinctive disposition in us all to pull down, sooner or later, the monuments we have raised, and to desolate the lands we have cultivated?

We hear with pleasure that our baze manufacture is now in a flourishing state of rivalship with that of France, and that considerable quantities of that valuable article of merchandize of a yard and a half, and two yards wide, and from 42 to 48 in length, are now preparing to be sent to America and to Portugal.

The following is the ordinary of the navy, as made up to the 31st of July, and reported to the Admiralty Board:

In the river Thames—at Deptford and Woolwich, four ships of the line one of 50 guns, 32 frigates, 20 sloops, and 3 cutters.

At Sheerness, 6 ships of the line, 1 of 50 guns, 9 frigates, 4 sloops, and 3 cutters.

At Chatham, 35 sail of the line, 8 of 50 guns, 20 frigates, 7 sloops, and 2 cutters.

At Portsmouth, 43 ships of the line, 2 of 50 guns, 18 frigates, and 3 sloops.

At Plymouth, 37 sail of the line, 1 of 50 guns, 8 frigates and 4 sloops.

The total at all the out-ports is 125 ships of the line, 13 ships of 50 guns, 94 frigates, 38 sloops, and 8 cutters.

The following is a correct account of the Turkish naval force:—In their dock-yards, there are building two ships of 74 guns, one of 72, one of 64, one of 54, two of 36, two of 32, two of 14, one of 10, and four gun-boats. At sea, they have four ships of 52 guns, one of 22, one of 20, two of 16, and fifteen of 12—In harbour, they have seven of 72 guns, two of 66, four of 58, one of 38, one of 34, two of 32, and one of 20. In the port of Constantinople, they have two of 66, one of 62, four of 56, three of 32, two of 20, one of 14, and three of 26—Vessels preparing for service; two of 52, three of 32, one of 50, one of 30, and three gun-boats.——In all, 79 vessels, from 10 to 74 guns.

To act a part becoming wisdom and honour, France should nobly disdain any hostile interference tending to the support of the faction against the Prince of Orange. Let it be recollected, how generously this country acted during the whole of the Corsican commotions. The British Cabinet scorned the idea of advantage procured in succouring insurgents against their lawful sovereign. It was in vain that oppression, tyranny, and a thousand other affecting arguments were urged, to induce a departure from that neutrality which had been the resolve of our national councils. It was conceived to be an infraction of the law of nations, for a sovereign power to interfere, unless as mediator, in commotions strictly of a civil nature. In consequence of this truly honorable conduct on the part of Great Britain, France was left to bring her seditious Colonists to reason in her own way. She pursued it, and succeeded.

It seems extraordinary, that the justice so highly extolled as the first of virtues in private society, should be so little regarded as a rule directing the proceedings of nations towards each other. To acquire property or power, by taking advantage of disputes in families, is universally considered a most infamous act; why is it not equally infamous, to take advantage of commotions prevailing in any particular country? The Prince and people, composing a kingdom, are only a family on a large scale. If differences subsist among them, those differences are surely as much of a domestic nature as houshold quarrels, conjugal or paternal. He who, to benefit himself, would foment, instead of healing breaches—who would watch the momentary gusts of passion, and estrange the affections of an offspring or a wife, is branded as a violator of the first principles of justice. Yet, the Cabinets of some countries scruple not to act that among nations, which by individuals of society, is execrated as the vilest crime. Without complimenting our country with more virtue than falls to her share, it may be said, that whatever crimes she may have to answer for, insidious treachery is not in the catalogue.

His royal highness the duke of York, we are told, intends to visit his Yorkshire estate in a few weeks. His house in that country is modern, and well-built, situated in the centre of a beautiful park, of 480 acres, surrounded by a wall, which is encompassed in its turn by 4080 acres of excellent land, the property of the Prince. The great tithes belonging to the estate. This charming domain possesses, in an eminent degree, all the great constituents of rural beauty—lawn, upland, lowland, wood, and water. A pastoral river intersects the grounds, meanders through them and the park, where it is widest, and makes two good reaches close to the house. The plantations are in a flourishing state, and finely disposed, and the inequalities of the ground are such as the nicest taste must not only approve, but admire. These natural advantages are heightened by the easiness of access to them: one corner of the estate meets the great roads from Appleby, Cataricke, York, Edinburgh, &c. The Duke's affection for the natale solum has not been lessened by his residence in Germany: a little fine linen excepted, no foreign article has been imported on his Highness's account; every thing about him is English; and he has expressly ordered, that whatever is wanting in his house or houshold shall be purchased at York.

August 28. Private letters received yesterday upon 'Change from Amsterdam, mention several persons of property having been lately confined there, on a suspicion of having furnished the Stadtholder with money, and carrying on a prohibited correspondence.

Private letters from Brussels inform us, that every thing was in motion in Brabant and Flanders, and that the inhabitants and Monks were employed in the exercise of arms; that the peasants ran in throngs to change their spades for muskets, and scythes for swords, by which it follows of course, that no one occupies himself either in commerce or trade of any kind. They have got already at Brussels 600 horse and 3000 foot armed, and in uniforms.

It is confidently asserted, that the British Court has entered into a treaty of amity and alliance with the Courts of Petersburgh and Vienna.

The contractor for supplying the navy with beds, it is said, has received an order to turn out 1500 a week, and that his order is 25,000 beds.

It may seem incredible, but it is most certainly true, that Great Britain pay in taxes, upwards of 41 000l. every day of the year. So great are the resources of a commercial nation.

The council of war at Vienna have given sentence against Legisfield and the other officers, accused of peculation in the commissary's department.

The sentences are as follow:—Legisfield is dismissed; to be personally degraded of his nobility, and to be carried to the public place of execution, there to be hanged until he is dead.

The Emperor has, however, granted his life; and has condemned him to be exposed three days in the pillory, with an inscription, calling him "Forger, and Faithless Cheat of the King's Treasury." Afterwards to work in the galleys 12 years, and then to be banished from the Emperor's dominions, and all his effects confiscated.

Leopold Lasolay, condemned to two years imprisonment in a fortress. The emperor has ordered only one year's confinement in irons, in one of the small casements of the fortifications.

Ellinger, dismissed, and declared incapable of being employed; to restore double, and to be sent in irons to the public works for two years. The emperor has ordered him to be exposed on the pillory, with Legisfield, with a writing importing him to be 'A Divulger of the Secrets of Office; an Acceptor of Bribes, and a Favorer of the Cheats in other Offices.'

De Sonnefeld, dismissed from his place, condemned to restore double the value of the presents he accepted; to be imprisoned one year, from the 15th of October, 1786, and then to be at liberty. The Emperor has ordered him to be delivered to the civil power, and to be imprisoned one year, in one of the small casements of the fortifications; without, however, declaring him incapable of serving, or degrading him of his noblesse.

J. Winter is released from confinement.

J. Kubin, condemned to the Prevost for 1 month in irons.

Charles Lafolly banished for life from the emperor's dominions. The emperor has ordered him to be imprisoned till further orders.

Nicolas Pols, dismissed, and declared incapable of serving, and to restore double. The emperor has ordered him also to be imprisoned one year in irons, besides the sentence of the Court-Martial.

The Widow Maderera is released with the loss of her pension.

Schmlosky is declared entirely innocent, and is to receive 200 ducats damages.

De Honoto is to be tried at Bruxelles.

The Auditor Allen, who conducted the process, is made reporter to the state major, with a present of 100 ducats.

Whether Justice be a Dame or a Virgin?—This being disputed at a certain club, remarkable for their wit, abounding as well as their wine; one of them ended the dispute with asking, "How can she be a Virgin who has been so frequently prostituted?"

Thirty English East-Indiamen, one French ditto, four American ditto, four Dutch ditto, one Swedish ditto, two Danish ditto, and twenty-three English country ships arrived at China the last season.

August 15. The following phœnomenon is recorded in a private letter written on the occasion by a canon of St. Omer, and dated from that place July 24:——

I had the pleasure last night to notice a moon rain-bow. As this phænomenon is rather scarce, and has not, to my knowledge, been hitherto observed when the moon has not been in its full, I have been more particular in my remarks. I was crossing the plain of Agincourt, so much renowned in history by the total defeat of the French army in the year 1415, and from the untold number of the killed on that fatal day, justly denominated Le Cimetiere des Francois. It was then about ten at night. The silent darkness then reigning all around, the approaches of a storm which threatened me with a sudden eruption, together with some reflections arising in my mind, from the very spot, on the evils brought at all times, and likely to disturb, in every age, the happiness of the nation, by the inconsiderate levity and fool-hardiness of my countrymen, had plunged me into a deep reverie; it rained then but gently, and soon the sky cleared up to the S. W. the moon appeared, and towards the N. E. I observed a rain-bow, not indeed in a complete form; its basis seemed to rest on the ground, but could not boast of that variety of colours peculiar to a sun-rainbow.

"Mille trahens varios adverso sole colores."

It was rather of a dull grey; if the contrary sometimes happened, it must have been in the full moon.—I had forgot to tell you that it lasted about ten minutes.

By the Lisbon mail of Wednesday we have authentic intelligence of the arrival in the Tagus of the following French ships of war:

List of the squadron which sailed from Brest the 12th of June, under the command of le marquis de Nievil, now at anchor in the Tagus.—

Le Superbe, Sainville	74
La Finne, Marigny,	40
La Pomone, Boneval,	32
La Reunion, de Grenier	32
La Modeste, Village	32
La Flore, Roquet	32
L'Aigrette, Susanert	26
Le Rossignol, La Villion	20
La Poultettee, Brau	20
La Sardine, Froger	20
Le Pilote des Indes, Callaman	16
Le Pandour, Priville	16
L'Alerte, de Barr	10
La Mouche, de Hual	10
Le Goilan, D'Hacallan	10

Several of the above are victualled for four and five months.

Our letters from Paris bring dreadful accounts of a storm which happened on the 13th of July, in Chestrain, particularly at Saumery, Bouville, Vetray and Andeville, where it was so extremely violent, that in less than a quarter of an hour, the earth was covered a foot deep with the hail.—Men, horses, birds, and in short every thing has suffered from this dreadful visitation; the harvest is entirely destroyed and the face of the country desolated. The hail stones were of an angular form, and as large as pullet's eggs.

At the conclusion of the American war, Congress unable to pay the arrears, and answer other pecuniary demands of the army, allotted different quantities of land to their officers, in proportion to their rank and services; several of those officers are now in England and France, for the purpose of selling their respective allotments, the purchase of which runs from four to six pounds per acre in perpetuum.

The deceased sir Richard Jebb was remarked for his quick decision of a patient's case; but he was also remarkable for absence of that gentleness of manner which many Valetudinarians positively want, and all delight to find. He was once sent for out of town; the complaint was of the nervous kind which required his advice; he was so rough with his patient that he himself began to think less asperity of address was necessary. Sir, says the Doctor, by way of apology, it is my way. No, sir, said the patient, collecting himself, that is your way, pointing to the door. He instantly left the room, and the son of Æsculapius was obliged to depart without his fee.

So much is exchange in favor of country, that no less than 50,000l. are remitted weekly from Holland; in addition to this evil, the Dutch consider the commercial treaty as pregnant with destruction to their carrying trade, which has hitherto been their staple, as has served them instead of commodity and manufacture.

Letters were received in town from Plymouth, stating, that the ships, with the negroes on board, bound to Africa, have come into that harbour, and that the whole body refused to proceed in the voyage.

An English gentleman who is arrived from St. Maloes says, that they are building there some flat-bottom boats upon a new construction.

They are so contrived as to be taken to pieces and put together in a short time, and so light, that a man may carry one of them with ease, and yet large enough for 12 or 14 men with their fire arms, &c.

The first symptom of the French supporting the Dutch, will be the lending them French officers. The first symptoms of the French supporting the Americans was the permitting Dr. Franklin to land in France. The cases are perfectly analogous.

Informations for gaming, we hear, have been lately laid against some of the first characters in the kingdom. The process of the law is on this occasion very simple; it being only necessary to give in the name of the party or parties playing, on oath before a magistrate, which subjects them to a penalty of 50l. or a temporary imprisonment, while the name of the informer is concealed. Some needy domestics have availed themselves of the act, and are prosecuting it with advantage.

Mr. Penn, who arrived in the last ships from America, is said to be charged with some proposals from the United States, towards the further establishment of the commercial interests of both countries; and indeed when we consider the arrival of so great a proprietor as Mr. Penn, at a time when a grand convention is sitting in his own country, in order to establish a permanent legislation there, it is presumable that the purport of his embassy must be something very important.

The purpose of the duke of York's journey to England is to solicit their majesties consent to his marriage with the princess royal of Prussia; an alliance certainly highly advantageous to the interests of Britain, and to which, consequently, there can be no objection. This alliance must, at the same time be favourable to the stadtholder; and we hope that out of this marriage may spring a great political connection between England, Prussia, and the United States, which may have an intimidating influence over the aspiring house of Bourbon.

August 23. Letters from Lisbon mention, the arrival there of his majesty's ship Phæton, captain Dawkins, from Gibraltar, and that the French squadron of evolution, were still at anchor in the Tagus.

The French accounts confirm the victory gained by Tippo Saib, over the Nobob of the Decan, who was the Ally of the Mahrattas.

If Monsf. de Calonne has, in truth, taken refuge in a country, which was once the asylum of the oppressed—it is hoped that he will not think himself secure in the smiles, cringes, or promises of ministry. Monsf. de Calonne should know something of the character of courts, and of the ordinary fate of those who confide in them!

'In hearts of Kings, or arms of Queens who lay—
'How happy these to ruin,—those betray!

The Bed of Justice, held at Versailles, the 6th instant, lasted an hour and a half. The parliament set off from Paris before eight in the morning, in forty-five carriages, accompanied by a detachment of the Short Robe. The Throne for the Bed of Justice was prepared in the Great Hall of the Body Guards. The king arrived there precisely at noon. Many persons of the court and even ladies assisted at this grand assembly, when Royal Majesty displayed all his power.

By the Dutch mails which arrived yesterday morning, we have received the following intelligence:——

Extract of a letter from Utrecht, August 15.

"There is every appearance, at present, of a change of affairs, relating to the intentions of foreign powers towards the republic. It is just confirmed, that the King of Prussia has countermanded the march of his troops, by ordering them to remain where they are until further notice. This has been done, we cannot doubt, at the requisition of the court of France, and is the first step to a happy reconciliation. We are not, indeed, certain if the issue will be such as all moderate men desire; that is, if the matter will end without the effusion of blood; but we are, at least, assured, that the ministry of Berlin are not actuated by the impulse of mistaken rancour, and that the court of France has preserved a strict attention to their representations. England makes pacific advances also.

"It is, therefore, probable that these powers will not hereafter, take an open part in the divisions which agitate the United Provinces, nor send their fleets and armies to invade their territories.

"The camp of the patriotic burgesses, situated near Woerden, is to be removed to a place not yet named, but most probably near Holland, where there is every reason to suspect some secret underhand operations,——The indulgence which the states have shewn to certain persons of all classes, known to be in the interest of the stadtholder, has only hardened them, and we are justly afraid of their intentions.

"Some articles of reconciliation have been published, which it is pretended, were drawn up in concert with the courts of France, England and Berlin. They are in number six; we do not publish them, because it is very plain, that they are gross absurdities——We need not prove this any farther, than by saying, that they are all in favor of Stadtholder, and that the drift of them is to undo every thing the patriots have been doing, and again involve the republic in all the miseries which they have endeavored to be freed from. It is more than probable, that these articles are the fabrication of the little council held for some days past at Nimeguen, where are present the prince and princess of Orange, the duke of Brunswick, Mr. Greville, envoy express from the court of London."—Utrecht Gazette.

August 18, 1787.

Since the parliament has been banished, it has been advanced by their advocates, that they shewed a desire of tranquility, when they softened the severity of their protest against the stamp tax. They confined themselves singly to declare the edict null and of no effect; but did not, as is common in such cases, prohibit under pain of death, the carrying it into execution: a constitutional question arises from hence, on the true and original power of parliament. The royalists pretend that the intention of registering the king's edicts in parliament, is merely to give them publicity among the people: the parliament say, that they are the true and of only guardians of the rights and liberties the people, and that their principal duty is to protect the subject from all kind of oppression. Under the first idea it is said, that on the parliament's refusal to publish his majesty's edict, the princes of the blood will go to the courts of aids, &c. and of money, &c. which are jurisdictions independent of parliament, and require the publication of the edict by those courts.

The long talked of reform is now taking place; The Petites Ecuries, at the head of which was the duke de Coigny, is united to the Grand Ecuries, under the prince de Lambese, with a diminution of between three and four hundred horses. The duke de Coigny is recompensed by the government of Flanders, in the room of the late prince de Soubise.

The troops of Gens d'Armes, and of the Chevaux Legers are ſuppreſſed, as likewiſe the company of guards called Gardes de la Porte and ſome reductions made in thoſe called the Gardes du Corps.

The falconery and vautruil, under Monſieur de Vaudruil, and Monſieur de Decquevilly, are likewiſe totally ſuppreſſed.

Many officers of the Queen's ſeparate kitchen are diſcharged, and the remainder united to that of the king, ſo as to form but one eſtabliſhment.

In the king's private houſhold there is alſo a conſiderable reform. The number of all thoſe officers below the firſt grooms of the chamber, is reduced to half the number.

It ſeems determined at preſent that the court will not go as was propoſed, to Fontainbleau this ſeaſon, on account of the very great expence attending that journey.

A great reduction is likewiſe made in the hunting ſtables of his majeſty.

One cauſe aſſigned why the parliament was lately baniſhed, is the following: preceding the edict of his majeſty, for the payment of the ſtamp act, being on the 14th inſtant publiſhed in the Journal of Paris, the parliament immediately aſſembled, and did not break up till near eight o'clock. Their arret forbid the ſale and uſe of any paper ſtamps under the king's late edict, through all their juriſdiction.

DUBLIN, Auguſt 1.

The importation of indigo and cotton from the ſouthern ſtates of the American republics, would be a circumſtance of the utmoſt advantage to the manufactures of this kingdom; but while the preſent jealouſies ſubſiſt, and that no treaty of commercial intercourſe is entered into, even a direct commerce, loaded as it is with the duties laid on at the other ſide of the Atlantic, would not anſwer any eſſential purpoſe whatever. We obtain the moſt of our cotton and dye ſtuffs collatterally and not directly, which muſt be a very great injury to our trade in ſeveral articles. It is ſaid indeed that we have the linen yarn for the manufacturing part of the mixed cotton goods, cheaper than it can be procured in England, but when they have a ſuperior advantage of a direct importation of the principal article from their iſlands ſo much in their favor, it is almoſt impoſſible to hold a competition with them, though making uſe of the ſame machinery, unleſs by treaty we are allowed to trade upon advantageous terms with North-America.

AMERICA.

NEW-YORK, October 19.

We have authority to aſſure the Lovers of the Drama, that the Old American Company are expected to arrive in this city the firſt or ſecond week in November at fartheſt.

Yeſterday an Ordination was held in St. Paul's Chapel, in this city, by the Right Rev. Dr. Provoſt, Biſhop of the Proteſtant Epiſcopal Church in the ſtate of New-York. A ſermon was preached, well adapted to the ſolemn occaſion, by the Rev. Mr Wright; and Mr. Waddell and Mr. Gardiner were admitted to the office of Deacons;—when the following HYMN was ſung:——

Go forth, ye Heralds, in my name,
Sweetly the Goſpel Trumpet ſound;
The glorious Jubilee proclaim,
Wherever Human Race is found.

The joyful News to all impart,
And teach them where Salvation lies;
With Care bind up the broken Heart,
And wipe the Tears from weeping Eyes.

Be wiſe as Serpents where you go,
But harmleſs as the peaceful Dove;
And let your Heav'n taught Conduct ſhow
That you're commiſſion'd from Above.

Freely from me you have receiv'd,
Freely, in Love, to others give:
Thus ſhall your Doctrines be believ'd,
And by your Labours, Sinners live.

O! happy Servants of the Lord,
Who thus their Maſter's Will obey;
Immenſely great is the Reward
Laid up for them till his great Day.

NEW-HAVEN, October 11.

The town of Derby, at a legal town meeting, on Monday laſt, reſolved unanimouſly to inſtruct their repreſentatives in the general aſſembly, to uſe their influence that a convention ſhould be called as ſoon as poſſible, for the purpoſe of taking into conſideration the conſtitution propoſed by the federal convention, in conformity to the recommendation of Congreſs.

PORTSMOUTH, October 9.

Yeſterday arrived here the brig Kitty, Captain Thompſon, from London, after a paſſage of 64 days. In the above veſſel came paſſenger the Hon. George Boyd, Eſq; formerly of this town, merchant—he was not permitted to ſee his native country—he had been lingering under a bodily malady, which put an end to his exiſtence on Friday laſt.

BOSTON, October 15.

A correſpondent obſerves—there are no objections that may be raiſed againſt the Federal Conſtitution, propoſed by the late Honorable Convention, but what may be urged againſt any form of government whatever—and to reject this conſtitution, is little ſhort of reverting to a ſtate of nature, and every man's ſaying, "to your tents, O Iſrael."

The huſbandman, the mechanic, the ſailor, the labourer, the trader, the merchant and the man of independent fortune are all equally concerned in forwarding the American Conſtitution; for nothing ſhort of a firm efficient continental government can diſſipate the gloom that involves every man's preſent proſpect, and give permanence to any plans of buſineſs or purſuit that can be laid.——The huſbandman finds no encouragement to increaſe his ſtock and produce, for he finds no vent for them—the mechanic ſtands idle half his time, or gets nothing for his work but truck—half our ſailors are out of buſineſs—the labourer can find no employ—our traders involved in debt, while they can command nothing that is due to them—our merchants have been ſinking money ever ſince the peace, for want of a commercial treaty, and the wealth of thoſe few individuals who have large ſums in caſh by them, lies dormant for want of encouragement to loan it, under the ſecurity of juſt and equal laws.——All theſe evils will gradually ſubſide, till they finally diſappear, if we have but wiſdom and firmneſs ſpeedily to adopt the new Federal Conſtitution.

"Obſerve," ſays a late ſenſible and judicious writer, "the caution of the American Conſtitution, every ſentence is full of meaning, and of ſuch import, that none but the violent and diſhoneſt can oppoſe. It carries the marks of piety as well as policy. No good man will wiſh to oppoſe it, and I hope no wicked man will dare to do it. It is calculated to anſwer the exigencies of the times, and to unite in one federal body the intereſts of all. A mighty empire may be formed upon this baſis, which ſhall make its enemies to tremble. While it gently detracts from the liberties of each, it provides for the ſecurity of all. If any imagine that it detracts from an individual ſtate more than from another, let it be remembered, it is but to beſtow the benefit upon a ſiſter, or a brother, who have an equal claim to the benefit with themſelves.——Why ſhould members of one and the ſame family claſh, while the intereſts of the family are the ſame?"

Should the arts of evil and deſigning men, fraudulent debtors, anti-federaliſts, inſurgents, &c. ſo far prevail as to effect a rejection of the American Conſtitution, which God forbid, it may be ſeriouſly aſked—whether it is probable that America will ever be able to collect another Continental Convention that will undertake to form a Conſtitution for us? we certainly cannot expect to be ſo fortunate as ever to concenter again ſo bright a conſtellation of patriots, heroes and legiſlators.

Philadelphia, Oct. 22.

Tueſday laſt, Congreſs appointed the Hon. Samuel Holden Parſons, John Armſtrong, junior, and James M. Varnum, Eſquires, to be judges in the weſtern territory of the United States.

On Tueſday laſt arrived in the Grange, from England, the Rev. L. Heath, who is appointed Preſident of Cokeſbury College, at Abingdon, in the ſtate of Maryland.

We are informed by a gentleman from Maſſachuſetts, that Shays has prevailed upon ſome of the officers of government to ſolicit his pardon, and there is reaſon to ſuppoſe it will be granted. This rebel, equally defective in ſpirit and underſtanding, has ſhewn that it is in the power of the moſt contemptible of beings to diſturb the peace of ſociety; but we hope his fate will be a leſſon to the factious heroes of Tioga and Greenbriar, and convince their adherents, that honeſty and induſtry are preferable to tumult and licentiouſneſs.

We hear from Trenton, ſtate of New-Jerſey, that on Thurſday the 11th inſt. the following gentlemen were elected repreſentatives in Council and General Aſſembly for the county of Hunterdon, for the enſuing year:

Council—Robert L. Hooper.

Aſſembly—Benjamin Vancleve, John Anderſon, Joah Houghton.

To preſerve BUTTER perfectly ſweet the whole Year.

TAKE of Crude Sal Ammoniac, and of loaf ſugar, each 4 oz.—nitre 8 oz.—allum-ſalt 1 lb.—Let the above ingredients be finely powdered, and well mixed together. As ſoon as the butter is ſufficiently worked, it ſhould have an ounce of the above powder wrought into every pound, and after ſtanding till the next day, the ſame quantity ſhould again be added to it, working it well as before; preſs it into an oak tub or barrel, as it keeps better in oak veſſels than any other.

N. B. The powder ſhould be mixed with the butter immediately after it is made, for ſtanding even one day previous to that makes the ſucceſs leſs certain.

RECEIPT for a COUGH.

MUCH coughing, dear Phebe, with eaſe you might ſpare,
Much hoarſeneſs and trouble, much head-ach and care,
If a wet parlour floor you would ſeldom admit,
Or a window ſhov'd up in the room where you ſit;
If abroad 'twere your rule but few moments to ſpend,
When the damp ſhades of evening unhealthy deſcend;
But when ſable night with its vapours moleſt,
Be ſparing of ſupper, be early to reſt;
Then lie in the morning as long as you pleaſe,
While ſomething diverts you——for nothing ſhould teaze.
With the ſteam of your hyſon, if health you purſue,
Accept, without butter, a biſcuit or two;
When you riſe, it will further the cure of your cough,
Though your dreſs ſhould be light, let there ſtill be enough:
Serene be your paſſions, your temper be calm,
Keep eaſy, contented, keep chearful and warm,
Theſe are my directions—be this your belief,
I'm an ign'rant old quack, if they give not relief.

AN EASTERN APOLOGUE.

A Lawgiver, in an Oriental country, perceiving evident marks of rapid declenſion, was anxious to reſtore the ſtate to its priſtine ſplendour. With this view he enacted a multiplicity of laws. In the mean time, he was taken ill. A phyſician preſcribed a variety of remedies at once; "Why ſuch a great quantity?" ſaid the ſick miniſter. "The more ſpeedily to reſtore you to health." "But among ſuch a variety of remedies ſome may counteract the effect of the others." "True; I beg pardon; I believe I am wrong; but I was deſirous to treat your diſtemper as you have treated the diſorders of the ſtate."

PIRACY.

RAN-AWAY with from Simpſon's Bay, St. Martins, by three White Men and one Black Boy, on the evening of the 4th September, a ſmall Virginia built SCHOONER, about 38 feet keel, with black ſides, white bottom, quarters and ſtern green, two cabbin windows and two quarter lights, the rudder traverſing clear of the upper part of the ſtern, new ſtanding rigging and new ſails, the main gaff ſcaffed, in conſequence of the new mainſail being too ſquare, new comings and waiſt partly new, has much the appearance of Bermuda built, and had on board nineteen Puncheons of Rum, taken from Friars' Bay, French Quarters, St. Martins, under Dutch colours, the papers in the name of one captain John Stockey, were endorſed to John White, and the Schooner was called The Friars' Bay Packet. The Captain that ranaway with her was one Robert Enefew (or ſomething like it) born in ſome part of England, but reſided for 8 or 10 years laſt paſt in this iſland; about 5 feet 4 or 5 inches high, black hair, black eyes, brown complexion and ſmooth ſkin. Savory Taylor, another white man, about 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high, fair hair, freckled in the face and on the hands, about 21 years of age, with grey eyes, born in Virginia. Thomas Champlin, about the ſize of the Captain, not ſo corpulent, but of a thinner body, black hair hair, and born in the iſland of St. Martins. The Negro Boy, (the property of Simon Ahman) by the name of Billy Scott, about 16 years of age, has but one eye, likely faced. By a ſchooner from Spaniſh-Town, captain John Butler, we have the following information, viz. that a few days before he left that iſland, there had been at St. Johns, as he was informed by ſeveral of the inhabitants, a ſchooner, which came to anchor at Water Mellon Key, which was well known to be the Schooner ranaway with from St. Martins, and that they ſold one hogſhead of rum at two ſhillings per gallon, and bought corn and ſome other articles, and went away again the ſame day. The account they gave of themſelves was, that they were from St. Martins, drove out by ſtreſs of weather; that they had left their Captain on ſhore; but it was obſerved that they kept down before the wind after quitting Water Mellon Key, and it was ſuppoſed were deſtined for St. Thomas: he alſo obſerves, that the natives (after their departure) were ſuſpicious, from their mode of acting, that they were not on any good deſign.

A very reaſonable Reward will be given for ſecuring the Veſſel and Cargo, or any part of the property, as alſo for apprehending the Villain or Villains, ſo that they may be brought to juſtice, and every neceſſary expence will be paid by

AARON AHMAN.

For Griſt Mills & other Water Works

On an extenſive Plan,
One of the beſt ſituations in America is offered

FOR SALE,

Together With

Batſto Iron-Works,

At the forks of Little Egg-Harbour river, one of the moſt healthy ſpots in New-Jerſey, 38 miles by land from Philadelphia, and within a few hours ſail of New-York.

THE river, communicating with the ſea by the beſt inlet on the Jerſey coaſt, is navigable for veſſels of 200 tons within a few miles of the works; thoſe of 100 tons may approach within one mile; flats and ſcows, carrying 10 or 12 tons, load and unload at the works. The uſual freight to New York or Philadelphia is 10 ſhillings per ton. The furnace ſtream affords plenty of water, in the dryeſt ſeaſon, for 3 or 4 pair of mill ſtones, beſides ſupplying the iron works.——An excellent dam, which has been increaſing in ſtrength many years by the cinder from the furnace, is well ſecured from the danger of freſhes, and the works are ſcarcely ever injured or delayed by either ice or back-water, though the tide ſwells to the foot of the dam: mills may therefore be erected at a moderate expence. This being a part of the country in which many people and many teams are neceſſarily employed in collecting and preparing for market the iron and lumber with which it abounds, and at the ſame time illy adapted to the raiſing of grain for their ſupport, there is, and muſt continue to be, a demand for large quantities of midlings, cornell, ſhorts and bran, at advanced prices; and the convenience of conveying flour at a light expence, either to New York or Philadelphia, or to more diſtant markets, will not be overlooked nor conſidered as of ſmall importance, eſpecially as there are few mill ſeats of any conſiderable capacity equally adapted to the New York market, which is not unfrequently ſupplied with ſuperfine flour from Philadelphia. A choice of the various kinds of wheat may be drawn to this ſeat from Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jerſey, and New York with greater eaſe and convenience than to almoſt any other mills now in being.

The FURNACE, which by the extenſive lands annexed to it, is abundantly ſupplied with wood and ore, is now in blaſt, and is noted for producing the beſt hollow ware in America, the metal being peculiarly well adapted to the making of caſtings of all kinds, as well as excellent bar iron.

A FORGE, with four fires and two hammers, belongs to the eſtate, and ſtands about half a mile from the furnace, on another fine ſtream which affords plenty of water.

A SLITTING and ROLLING MILL, having been diſuſed for the laſt two or three years, may [illegible] ſome repairs to prepare it for uſe; but the forebays and gates are in perfect order, and being in the proper ſpot for griſt mills, may be appropriated to that uſe.

Two SAW MILLS in good order, and a ſmall Griſt Mill.

The MANSION HOUSE is elegantly ſituated about 100 yards from the furnace, on an height which commands a view of the whole works, and of the two villages formed by the ſurrounding buildings belonging to the eſtate, ſuch as barns, ſtables, coal houſes, workſhops ſtorehouſes and dwellings for work men. Adjoining the manſion houſe is a large and fruitful garden, affording plenty of vegetables, and well ſtored with choſen fruit trees: alſo a young bearing orchard, containing near 2000 apple trees, moſtly grafted.

Theſe excellent accommodations for extenſive and profitable manufactories, are offered to ſale at a very low rate, and on terms of payment calculated for the eaſe of the purchaſer, who may pay the greater part in the produce of the Iron Works, at a price to be agreed upon; and they are capable of producing more in one year, than will pay the whole price demanded.

For particulars, apply to WILLIAM RICHARDS, at the ſaid Works, JOHN COX, at Bloomſbury, near Trenton, or CHARLES PETTIT, in Philadelphia.

TO BE SOLD,

A likely, ſtout, young

Negro MAN;

Has had the ſmall pox. Enquire of the Printers.

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

Messieurs PRINTERS,

Please to re-publish the following, and oblige

A Constant Reader.

THE arguments of the honorable Mr. Wilson, expressed in the speech he made at the State-house, on the Saturday preceding the general election (as stated in the Pennsylvania Herald) altho' extremely ingenious and the best that could be adduced in support of so bad a cause, are yet extremely futile, and will not stand the test of investigation.

In the first place, Mr. Wilson pretends to point out a leading discrimination between the State Constitutions, and the Constitution of the United States.—In the former, he says, every power which is not reserved is given, and in the latter, every power which is not given is reserved: And this may furnish an answer, he adds, to those who object, that a bill of rights has not been introduced in the proposed Federal Constitution. If this doctrine is true, and since it is the only security that we are to have for our natural rights, it ought at least to have been clearly expressed in the plan of government. The 2d section of the present articles of confederation says: Each state retains its sovereignty, freedom and independence, and every power, jurisdiction and right which is not by this Confederation expresly, delegated to the United States in Congress assembled.—This declaration (for what purpose I know not) is entirely omitted in the proposed Constitution. And yet there is a material difference between this Constitution and the present confederation, for Congress in the latter are merely an executive body; it has no power to raise money, it has no judicial jurisdiction. In the other, on the contrary, the federal rulers are vested with each of the three essential powers of government—their laws are to be paramount to the laws of the different States, what then will there be to oppose to their encroachments? Should they ever pretend to tyrannize over the people, their standing army, will silence every popular effort, it will be theirs to explain the powers which have been granted to them; Mr. Wilson's distinction will be forgot, denied or explained away, and the liberty of the people will be no more.

It is said in the 2d section of the 3d article of the Federal Plan: "The judicial power shall extend "to all cases in law and equity, arising under this constitution." It is very clear that under this clause, the tribunal of the United States, may claim a right to the cognizance of all offences against the general government, and libels will not probably be excluded. Nay, those offences may be by them construed, or by law declared, misprision of treason, an offence which comes literally under their express jurisdiction.—Where is then the safety of our boasted liberty of the press? And in case of a conflict of jurisdiction between the courts of the United States, and those of the several commonwealths, is it not easy to foresee which of the two will obtain the advantage?

Under the enormous power of the new confederation, which extends to the individuals as well as to the States of America, a thousand means may be devised to destroy effectually the liberty of the press——There is no knowing what corrupt and wicked judges may do in process of time, when they are not restrained by express laws. The case of John Peter Zenger of New-York, ought still to be present to our minds, to convince us how displeasing the liberty of the press is to men in high power——At any rate, I lay it down as a general rule, that wherever the powers of a government extend to the lives, the persons, and properties of the subject, all their rights ought to be clearly and expressly defined; otherwise they have but a poor security for their liberties.

The second and most important objection to the federal plan, which Mr. Wilson pretends to be made in a disingenuous form, is the entire abolition of the trial by jury in civil cases. It seems to me that Mr. Wilson's pretended answer, is much more disingenuous than the objection itself, which I maintain to be strictly founded in fact. He says "that "the cases open to trial by jury differing in the "different states, it was therefore impracticable "to have made a general rule." This answer is extremely futile, because a reference might easily have been made to the common law of England, which obtains through every state, and cases in the maritime and civil law courts would of course have been excepted. I must also directly contradict Mr. Wilson when he asserts that there is no trial by jury in the courts of chancery—It cannot be unknown to a man of his high professional learning, that whenever a difference arises about a matter of fact in the courts of equity in America or England, the fact is sent down to the courts of common law to be tried by a jury, and it is what the lawyers call a feigned issue. This method will be impracticable under the proposed form of judicial jurisdiction for the United States.

But setting aside the equivocal answers of Mr. Wilson, I have it in my power to prove that under the proposed Federal Constitution, the trial of facts in civil cases by a jury of the Vicinage is entirely and effectually abolished, and will be absolutely impracticable. I wish the learned gentleman had explained to us what is meant by the appellate jurisdiction as to law and fact which is vested in the superior court of the United States? As he has not thought proper to do it, I shall endeavor to explain it to my fellow citizens, regretting at the same time that it has not been done by a man whose abilities are so much superior to mine. The word appeal, if I understand it right, in its proper legal signification includes the fact as well as the law, and precludes every idea of a trial by jury—It is a word of foreign growth, and is only known in England and America in those courts which are governed by the civil or ecclesiastical law of the Romans. Those courts have always been considered in England as a grievance, and have all been established by the usurpations of the ecclesiastical over the civil power. It is well known that the courts of chancery in England were formerly entirely in the hands of ecclesiastics, who took advantage of the strict forms of the common law, to introduce a foreign mode of jurisprudence under the specious name of Equity. Pennsylvania, the freest of the American states has wisely rejected this establishment, and knows not even the name of a court of chancery—And in fact, there cannot be any thing more absurd than a distinction between law and equity. It might perhaps have suited those barbarous times when the law of England, like almost every other science, was perplexed with quibbles and Aristotelian distinctions, but it would be shameful to keep it up in these more enlightened days. At any rate, it seems to me that there is much more equity in a trial by jury, than in an appellate jurisdiction from the fact.

An appeal therefore is a thing unknown to the common law. Instead of an appeal from facts, it admits of a second, or even third trial by different juries, and mistakes in points of law, are rectified by superior courts in the form of a writ of error; and to a mere common lawyer, unskilled in the forms of the civil law courts, the words appeal from law and fact, are mere nonsense, and unintelligible absurdity.

But even supposing that the superior court of the United States had the authority to try facts by juries of the vicinage, it would be impossible for them to carry it into execution. It is well known that the supreme courts of the different states, at stated times in every year, go round the different counties of their respective states to try issues of fact, which is called riding the circuits. Now, how is it possible that the supreme continental court, which we will suppose to consist at most of 5 or 6 judges, can travel at least twice in every year, through the different counties of America, from New-Hampshire to Kentuckey, and from Kentuckey to Georgia, to try facts by juries of the vicinage. Common sense will not admit of such a supposition. I am therefore right in my assertion, that trial by jury in civil cases, is, by the proposed constitution entirely done away, and effectually abolished.

Let us now attend to the consequences of this enormous innovation, and daring encroachment, on the liberties of the citizens. Setting aside the oppression, injustice, and partiality that may take place in the trial of questions of property between man and man, we will attend to one single case, which is well worth our consideration. Let us remember that all cases arising under the new constitution, and all matters between citizens of different states, are to be submitted to the new jurisdiction. Suppose therefore, that the military officers of Congress, by a wanton abuse of power, imprison the free citizens of America; suppose the excise or revenue officers (as we find in Clayton's Reports, page 44 Ward's case)—that a constable, having a warrant to search for stolen goods, pulled down the clothes of a bed in which there was a woman, and searched under her shift,—suppose, I say, that they commit similar, or greater indignities, in such cases a trial by jury would be our safest resource, heavy damages would at once punish the offender, and deter others from committing the same: but what satisfaction can we expect from a lordly court of justice, always ready to protect the officers of government against the weak and helpless citizen, and who will perhaps sit at the distance of many hundred miles from the place where the outrage was committed?——What refuge shall we then have to shelter us from the iron hand of arbitrary power?——O! my fellow citizens, think of this while it is yet time, and never consent to part with the glorious privilege of trial by jury, but with your lives.

But Mr. Wilson has not stopped here—he has told us that a STANDING ARMY, that great support of tyrants, not only was not dangerous, but that it was absolutely necessary.——O! my much respected fellow citizens! and are you then reduced to such a degree of insensibility, that assertions like these will not rouse your warmest resentment and indignation? Are we then, after the experience of past ages, and the result of the enquiries of the best and most celebrated patriots have taught us to dread a standing army above all earthly evils, are we then to go over all the threadbare common place arguments that have been used without success by the advocates of tyranny, and which have been for a long time past so gloriously refuted! Read the excellent Burgh in his polical disquisitions, on this hackneyed subject, and then say, whether you think that a standing army is necessary in a free country? Even Mr. Hume, an aristocratical writer, has candidly confessed, that an army is a mortal distemper in a government, of which it must at last inevitably perish (2d Burgh 349) and the earl of Oxford (Oxford the friend of France, and the pretender, the attainted Oxford) said in the British parliament, in a speech on the mutiny bill; that "while he had breath, he would speak for the liberties of his country, and against courts martial and a standing army in peace as dangerous to the constitution," (Ibid page 455) Such were the speeches even of the enemies to liberty, when Britain had yet a right to be called free. But says Mr. Wilson, "It is necessary to maintain the appearance of strength even in times of the most profound tranquility." And what is this more than a thread-bare hackneyed argument, which has been answered over and over in different ages, and does not deserve even the smallest consideration?—Had we a standing army, when the British invaded our peaceful shores? Was it a standing army that gained the battles of Lexington and Bunker's Hill, and took the ill fated Burgoyne? Is not a well regulated militia sufficient for every purpose of internal defence? And which of you, my fellow citizens, is afraid of any invasion from foreign powers, that our brave militia would not be able immediately to repel?

Mr. Wilson says, that he does not know of any nation in the world which has not found it necessary to maintain the appearance of strength in a season of the most profound tranquility; if by this equivocal assertion, he has meant to say that there is no nation in the world without a standing army in time of peace, he has been mistaken. I need only adduce the example of Switzerland, which, like us, is a republic, whose thirteen cantons, like our thirteen states, are under a federal government, and which besides is surrounded by the most powerful nations in Europe, all jealous of its liberty and prosperity: And yet that nation has preserved its freedom for many ages, with the sole help of a militia, and has never been known to have a standing army, except when in actual war.—Why should we not follow so glorious an example, and are we less able to defend our liberty without an army, than that brave but small nation, which with its militia alone has hitherto defied all Europe?

It is said likewise, that a standing army is not a new thing in America—Congress even at this moment have a standing army on foot.——I answer that precedent is not principle—Congress have no right to keep up a standing army in time of peace:—If they do, it is an infringement of the liberties of the people—wrong can never be justified by wrong—but it is well known that the assertion is groundless, the few troops that are on the banks of the Ohio, were sent for the express purpose of repelling the invasion of the savages, and protecting the inhabitants of the frontiers.—It is our misfortune that we are never at peace with those inhuman butchers of their species, and while they remain in our neighbourhood, we are always, with respect to them, in a state of war——as soon as the danger is over, there is no doubt but Congress will disband their handful of soldiers:——it is therefore not true, that Congress keep up a standing army in a time of peace and profound security.

The objection to the enormous powers of the president and senate is not the least important of all, but is requires a full discussion and ample investigation—I shall take another opportunity of laying before the public my observations upon this subject, as well as upon every other part of the new constitution. At present I shall only observe, that it is an established principle in America, which pervades every one of our state constitutions, that the legislative and executive powers ought to be kept forever separate and distinct from each other, and yet in this new constitution we find there are two executive branches, each of which has more or less controul over the proceedings of the legislature. This is an innovation of the most dangerous kind upon every known principle of government, and it will be easy for me to convince my fellow citizens that it will, in the first place, create a Venetian aristocracy, and, in the end, produce an absolute monarchy.

Thus I have endeavoured to answer to the best of my abilities, the principal arguments of Mr. Wilson—I have written this in haste, in a short interval of leisure from my usual avocations. I have only traced the outlines of the subject, and I hope some abler hand will second my honest endeavours.

A Democratic Federalist.

From the MASSACHUSETTS CENTINEL.

EVERY unalienable right of the free citizens of these states is sacred; and it is political suicide to resign the full exercise of these rights—one of which is to think for ourselves—upon this principle the AMERICAN CONSTITUTION is to be submitted to the discussion of CONVENTIONS chosen by the people for that purpose.—The truly honourable Continental Convention, after debating upon every possible consequence and attendant of the new constitution, UNANIMOUSLY agreed upon the form handed to the people. It is difficult to conceive of an objection that can be started, which was not thoroughly canvassed in the debates of that honourable body.

FOUR MONTHS CLOSE APPLICATION to the important business of their appointment, has produced a constitution which can be equalled by no form of government upon earth; nothing short of inspiration can excel it—and we ought to remember that had Heaven's own finger penned a constitution for us, there can be no doubt but objections to it would be raised by many persons.

Although the AMERICAN CONSTITUTION is to be submitted to the consideration of POPULAR CONVENTIONS, it can certainly be of no service to the common interest, to have the public mind prejudiced and harrassed by fears, surmises, jealousies, and carpings previous to the meeting of these conventions. There always was, and forever will be, a number of restless, ambitious, interested persons, who find their account in disseminating the seeds of discord, mistrust and faction. The speculations of such persons ought to be discountenanced, and if under a specious garb they are obtruded upon the public eye, they ought to be read with caution; and the motives of their authors strictly scrutinized. The proposal in the last CENTINEL, that the names of those who wish to advance any thing to the public, upon this great subject, should, if required, be disclosed, is fair and equitable;—By this mode we may escape a great deal of imposition—and the secret motives of the writers may be so accurately traced, as to defeat the designs of those who pretend to be FEDERALISTS, but are at heart bitterly averse to a continental government. It is almost universally conceded, that the present is the critical period with us, and upon the adopting an efficient federal goverment at THIS CRISIS, is suspended the very existence of LIBERTY.—Mutual harmony and good-will, patience and liberality of thinking and conducting, will work out our political salvation, and lead to a peaceable and cordial adoption of the American constitution.

But if a suspicious spirit should predominate; and because we cannot penetrate into future ages, and see that the rulers of the people that may then exist, will be perfect beings, we will not trust ourselves at the present time, with ourselves, or which is the same thing, with men from among ourselves—we may complain of the evils we suffer without any hope of redress, and when anarchy and confusion shall have totally ruined the states, they will fall an easy prey to some despot.—From such delusion the Lord in his mercy deliver America, and let all the people say,

AMEN.

ROTTERDAM, August 2.

THERE are two societies here, one of Modern Patriots, and the other of Stadtholderians.—The former last week addressed themselves to the magistrates, and requested that the latter should be dissolved and abolished. The magistrates having deliberated thereon resolved to reject their requisition, and to protect the Stadtholderian party, declaring, that whoever did the least violence to the said society, or any one of its members, should be considered and punished as a disturber of the peace.

PARIS, August 9.

Last Monday the Parliament went to Versailles, having been sent for by the King. His Majesty opened the bed of justice by a very concise speech, in which he expressed his discontent of the resistance shewn to his will.

AMSTERDAM, August 15.

Twelve of the 18 cities have given their votes for the suspension of the Prince of Orange, as Stadtholder and Admiral General of the province of Holland, so that it may be considered as finally concluded. And the money which he annually received as Stadtholder, &c. is to be appropriated to the use of the burgher-armed corps, who stile themselves the patriots, and who are become so numerous, that they overawe the magistrates of the respective cities—even the states of the province.—Some say, their number amounts to 20,000 men. They have their deputies and their provincial assembly, as well as the states; and have lately in a declaration, spoken their minds very freely to the legislative body itself. If the King of Prussia helps his brother-in-law only by memorials, the Prince, it is thought, will not be able to maintain his ground.

HAGUE, July 31.

The states of Friesland have written to their noble and high mightinesses, reflecting in a very severe manner upon the stopping of the Princess, as a dangerous and most shameful proceeding on their part, and a most gross affront and outrage upon the person of one of so illustrious a rank, so intimately connected with the republic, and who had given the most solemn assurances that she had no views in her journey but the most peaceable and salutary intentions to the republic, worthy of her character and dignity, as she has proved in the province of their high mightinesses. That their conduct in this particular alarmed every moderate, and well-disposed person; and the more so, as it shewed that the good order, peace, and security (of which these provinces have been able to boast for so long a time, and which served as an example to their neighbours, under the authority and good direction of their sovereigns, and the firm maintenance of their just laws) were, alas! vanished and so lost, that in one part of the low countries they presumed to arrest by an armed force, the consort of the hereditary stadtholder of the seven provinces, and denied her the enjoyment in those provinces of that liberty which belonged to every individual of them.

They therefore caution and request them to consider the consequences of such a step, and to make such a timely and satisfactory apology as the nature of the outrage demanded, and as was proper in respect of the rank of the Princess, in order to facilitate the adjustment of the troubles which had so long and so hurtfully agitated the republic.

The states of Friesland have also sent a letter to the stadtholder and one to the Princess of Orange, inclosing a copy in each of their letters to the states of Holland and West Friesland, desiring them both to continue their efforts for the re-establishment of peace and order in the republic.

DUBLIN, August 18.

What renders a trade with the United States of America so very desirable an object is, that certain materials of industry may be imported from thence in the greatest abundance, while their own efforts in different branches of manufacture being as yet not very great and successful, they are obliged to purchase large quantities of different kinds of fabric from the European nations. Our relative situation to that continent would make a freer intercourse peculiarly advantageous to Ireland. It is therefore most sincerely hoped, that the long protracted negociation with the American envoy will be shortly brought to proper and effectual issue.

In the year 1778, the Dublin Society first came to the truly wise determination of purchasing every valuable treatise on trade, agriculture, arts, and manufactures, that was not at that time in their possession, and also regularly to procure the proceedings and publications of the several societies instituted throughout Europe, particularly those of countries somewhat warmer or colder than Ireland, in order to take every advantage of our soil and situation; and for this salutary purpose, and likewise for purchasing implements of husbandry of the best construction, and instruments of various other kinds, they granted a sum of 231l. 10s. which has been considerably increased every year since the above period. The advantages resulting have been since particularly experienced, and there is no doubt but the utility of the design will in future be still more sensibly felt by the nation at large.

LONDON, July 28.

Some letters received yesterday from Holland mention, that an entire stop is put to the coasting trade of that province—the embargo on the shipping being so strict, for fear of their carrying any article of provisions, ammunition, &c. to any of the refractory provinces, as the Hollanders call them. The burghers search also indiscriminately all vessels of what nation soever, before they permit them to sail, in order that no conveyance might take place by that means; and passengers of every description are examined with the most minute exactness, and none permitted to pass but with the seal of the states of the province of Holland only, positively disannulling all other authority whatever, without excepting even the states general themselves.

August 11. The Sultan of Mocco, whose territories lie on the north east coast of the Bay of Bengal, has lately caused Mr. Nevin, the resident at Bantale, from the East India Company, and all his family to be murdered. There had subsisted a great animosity between this prince and Mr. Nevin, the ground of which were, his not permitting the Sultan's people to buy rice, and punishing those who sold it. It is the first transaction of the kind that ever happened on that coast.

A most valuable discovery has been lately made by a scientific gentleman at Madras. It is the cochineal, a dye so very necessary as to be in universal demand in all parts of Europe, and so very dear as to be worth its weight in gold. This insect is found in great abundance in every part of the Carnatic near the sea, and promises to yield a very rich article of commerce.

August 14. On Thursday last a young man perished as he was bathing in the river Lee near Hackney. He committed his clothes to the care of his trusty dog, whose howling and lamentations drew many people to the fatal spot, too late to be of service: nor could this faithful animal be diverted from this charge for some days after his unfortunate master's body was discovered.

AMERICA.

AUGUSTA, Sept. 1.

A letter from T. Barnard, Esq. commissary to the Creek nation, to his honor the governor, dated Flint River, Aug. 18, 1787, says, "To-morrow I shall set out for the Cussitah's in order to deliver your talk to them, which, I apprehend, will seem to them so far from granting their request, that I am almost convinced, from their present disposition, they will commit hostilities: therefore, think it highly necessary for the inhabitants on the frontiers, from the mouth of the river Alatamaha up the streams of the Oconee, to be prepared to meet them; as it is very uncertain where they may strike the first blow; but undoubtedly where they expect the least resistance. From every circumstance, I have reason to believe, the savages will be outrageous in a very short time. Some of the Lower Town Indians have lately been at Pensacola, returned with a large supply of ammunition, which as they say, they received from the Spanish governor O'Neal. The party that set out for Cumberland, with an intention to destroy that settlement, are returned without doing any mischief."

Philadelphia, Oct. 23.

Yeſterday twenty-three Members of the Honorable the General Aſſembly met at the State-Houſe, but not being a quorum, adjourned till three o'clock this afternoon.——The returns from the weſtern counties are not yet received.

Extract of a letter from New-Haven, Connecticut, dated October 17.

"Thurſday laſt the general aſſembly of the ſtate, convened in this city; and yeſterday they paſſed a reſolve, appointing Monday, the 12th day of November next, for the ſeveral towns to meet, for the purpoſe of chooſing delegates to repreſent them in a ſtate convention to be holden at Hartford, on the firſt Tueſday of January next, to take into conſideration, the doings of the late federal convention, at Philadelphia, as recommended by Congreſs. The delegates from the ſeveral towns are to be choſen in the ſame manner that the repreſentatives to the general aſſembly are choſen."

Extracts from the Letters of a French Gentleman who lately viſited the Weſtern Country. The firſt of theſe intereſting Letters was inſerted in our Paper of the 16th inſtant, and the following is a continuation of his voyage down the Ohio.

"IT was on the fourth morning at day-break we weighed anchor, and in the ſpace of three days of ſweet and tranquil navigation, anchored before the Scioto, 218 miles from the Muſkingum, and 390 from Pittſburg, in order to receive on board General Richard Butler, who came from finiſhing ſome negociations with the Shawaneſe:—It is to him I am indebted for the following particulars of that fine river, upon the banks of which he had reſided during five years of the war.

"The Scioto is almoſt as large as the Ohio——its current is navigable for veſſels of a middle ſize, to the village of Seccaium, 111 miles from its mouth.——At this village commences the grand portage of Sanduſky, which is but four miles—a communication much frequented by Whites and Savages † and conſequently of the greateſt importance. This river waters a champaign country very luxuriant and extenſive.

"Thoſe vaſt lands, ſo well known under the name of the Plains of Scioto, begin ſome miles above the river Kuſkinkas, and continue almoſt to Succaium——they are watered by the pretty rivulets of Alaman, Deer, Kiſpoko, &c. and by a great number of more conſiderable ſtreams—It is towards their ſources that you have a view of the fine villages of the Shawaneſe nation—Many of them are from 25 to 30 miles in circumference; and as if Nature had been willing to render them ſtill more uſeful to man, ſhe has covered them with gentle riſings, upon which ſhe has planted the fineſt trees.—Theſe plains are never overflowed, and their fertility is moſt admirable. If a poor man, who has nothing but his arms to ſupport him, ſhould aſk of me, where ſhall I go to eſtabliſh myſelf, in order to live more at my eaſe, without the aid of oxen or horſes?—I would ſay to him—go upon the banks of ſome rivulet on the Plains of Scioto—there you will obtain permiſſion of the Savages of the neighbouring villages, to ſcratch the ſurface of the earth, and depoſit your rye, your corn, your potatoes, your cabbages, your tobacco, &c. leave the reſt to Nature; and during her operations, amuſe yourſelf with fiſhing and hunting.

"The uncultivated lands are annually covered with buffaloe graſs, which in October very much reſembles thick foreſts of reeds, to which the Shawaneſe never fail to put fire, in order to prevent the approach of enemies, and to render the graſs more tender and more abundant in the ſpring.—What a ſpectacle does this vaſt conflagration offer!—It is at once intereſting and terrible!—intereſting from its appearance—from the noiſe and brightneſs of the flames—the whirlwinds—the maſſes of thick and dark ſmoke, and many other curious and extraordinary phænomena, which accompany it. It is terrible from the involuntary ſentiment of danger that this great ſcene of devaſtation preſents, and from the fear that ſome unhappy travellers are croſſing theſe plains at this epoch—for every year many of them periſh here. I have no expreſſions which could paint to you the velocity of theſe devouring fires; quickly they rarify the air of the adjacent parts, and agitate the tranquility of the atmoſphere—then a furious wind exhibits itſelf, in the middle of the moſt calm day. In certain places it raiſes the flames in ſpiral columns, to a prodigious height; in others it ſeems to compreſs, and roll them in maſſes of different diameters. Often detached ſparks, by the impetuoſity of this ſame wind, are tranſported to the extreme of its own ſtrength; there they become imperceptibly the principles of new flames—but lie latent, to diſplay themſelves when the grand author § ſtrikes them, then on all ſides a ſecond conflagration appears; a ſecond line of fire is raiſed, glitters, and rolling upon itſelf, devours every combuſtible object. If it meets in its paſſage any woody iſlands, it conſumes the groves; and the tempeſt which accompanies it often breaks and throws down almoſt all the trees.

"The whirlwinds of dark and thick ſmoke, which are raiſed in a thouſand different forms, announce at a great diſtance to the traveller the danger of his ſituation: he is loſt if he is not in the vicinity of high lands or a river. I have ſeen the torrents run through the breadth of the plains, in a very ſhort ſpace of time, and aſſure you that I never attentively conſidered this great picture of deſtruction without being penetrated with an involuntary dread; knowing that theſe terrible effects are produced by the combination of the two moſt powerful elements of nature, which mutually increaſe their deſtructive power.

"Going one day from the village of Waccahala to that of Chillichatee, I perceived the commencement of one of theſe great fires: what was my conſternation and terror, when a few minutes after, a ſecond and a third line of conflagration ſhewed themſelves at a mile's diſtance. I did not know whence the fire came, and although I was well mounted, and had not more than 6 or 700 fathoms to travel, my horſe nevertheleſs could hardly ſave me.

"Every ſpring a prodigious number of ſtorks come to inhabit theſe plains; they are at leaſt ſix feet high; while feeding, they have their centinels to watch, and announce the approach of danger. Some time before their departure, they aſſemble in large flocks, and upon a certain day, altogether raiſe themſelves ſlowly, and by a kind of circular aſcent, deſcribe large ſpiral paths in their flight.

"Finally, on the tenth day after our departure from Pittſburg, we anchored before Louiſville, having made 705 miles of navigation in 212 hours and 30 minutes of time."

† Theſe laſt, who have horſes and waggons, tranſport goods for ſo much the hundred.

Taunton, May 29. 1awtf. GEORGE HASTINGS.

The following Addreſs to Conjugal Love, a ſubject too much neglected by the libertine muſes, is printed in ſome modern collections, and thus tranſlated from the antient Britiſh language.

AWAY! let nought to love diſpleaſing,
My Winifreda, move your care;
Let nought delay the heavenly bleſſing,
Nor ſqueamiſh pride, nor gloomy fear.

What though no grants of royal donors
With pompous titles grace our blood!
We'll ſhine in more ſubſtantial honors,
And to be noble we'll be good.

Our name, while virtue thus we tender,
While ſweetly ſound where'er 'tis ſpoke;
And all the great ones, they ſhall wonder
How they reſpect ſuch little folk.

What though from fortune's laviſh bounty
No mighty treaſures we poſſeſs,
We'll find within our pittance plenty,
And be content without exceſs.

Still ſhall each returning ſeaſon
Sufficient for our wiſhes give;
For we will live a life of reaſon,
And that's the only life to live.

Through youth and age, in love excelling,
We'll hand in hand together tread;
Sweet ſmiling peace ſhall crown our dwelling,
And babes, ſweet ſmiling babes, our bed.

How ſhould I love the pretty creatures,
While round my knees they fondly clung,
To ſee them look their mother's features!
To hear them liſp their mother's tongue!

And when, with envy time tranſported,
Shall think to rob us of our joys,
You'll in your girls again be courted,
And I'll go wooing with my boys.

INDUSTRY AND PERSEVERANCE.

MR. Saunders was at firſt no better than a beggar-boy, if not a pariſh foundling, without known parents or relations. By his obſequiouſneſs and attention to the attorneys' clerks in Clements-Inn, he picked up a ſcanty ſubſiſtence, and made the ſociety deſirous to do him further ſervice. He had a ſtrong deſire to learn to write, and one of the attorneys had a board knocked up at a window on the top of a ſtair-caſe, was his deſk, where he ſat and wrote after copies, given him by the clerks. In a ſhort time he became a ſwift and correct tranſcriber; by degrees he fell to forms, and by books which were lent him, was noted as an exquiſite entering clerk. In ſhort, his prudence and diligence never abating for a moment, he was, in a courſe of years, called to the bar, and allowed to be one of the moſt eminent and popular practitioners of his time.

This man, whoſe entrance into life was ſo unpromiſing, by a happy diſpoſition and unremitting induſtry, was at length raiſed to the Chief Juſticeſhip of England, on the death of Pemberton, and held that high office till his death, which happened a little before the revolution.

Foreign Intelligence.

BOIS LE DUC, July 6.

THE scenes of murder and devastation committed in Gueldres and Zeeland, under the auspices of the Orange colours, and under the unpardonable indulgence of the persons trusted with the reigns of government have been also attempted here, though not with like success. On the 2d of July, an officer (colonel baron Van Tengnayet) who usurped, in a scandalous manner, the cash of his squadron, appeared in the public market place with a large rose of Orange colours, but only to the effect that the boys of the city assaulted him with stones, and made him retire on a sudden.

On the 6th of July the adjutant Van Douglas, from Nimeguen, entered the city with two other officers of his regiment, with Orange cockades in their hats. The sensation of this sight roused the stones against them. They produced their pistols; but that served only to inflame the minds, and to collect on a sudden, some hundred persons. The president Bizdom gave immediate notice of it to the commandant, who commanded them to take their cockades immediately off, and sent them out of the town next morning, under an escort, in order to appease the minds of the people.

July 8. The soldiers of the regiment Envier, at Breda, destroyed, a few days ago, all the windows of more than 40 houses in this city. The magistrates ordered the citizens in arms, and towards evening there was a formal engagement, in which some citizens were killed and wounded. One hundred of the citizens left the town the next day, all the houses were shut up, as a general plunder was spoken of. The magistrates perceiving that no resistance would avail, put a stop to it; afterwards Orange ribbons have been generally worn, and since that the military keep within bounds. An attempt was made at Oude, Beverland, a great and populous village on the Maize, to hoist Orange colours, and to take possession of the public stores; but an assistance of 72 men, and some field-pieces, sent from Dort and Schiedam, interposed time enough, with the exertions of the adjacent country people, to prevent further disorders, after 15 or 16 houses had been totally plundered. A scuffle then ensued between them and the mutineers for about two hours, when the latter were obliged to give themselves up. Five or six of them were killed, and twenty-six made prisoners are carried to Dort. Two men are lost on our side.

LEYDEN, July 6.

Certain reports assure us that the king of France has given orders to form a camp of observation of 15,000 men near Givet, in the vicinity of Mastricht.

UTRECHT, July 16.

This morning a detachment of axiliaries of 130 men left this city, to march towards Gorkum, to assist in securing that place from an invasion of the troops of Gueldres cantoned about it. The day before yesterday we were reinforced by a detachment of Amsterdam militia, who are to be followed by 600 more. It seems that the states of Amersfort perceive their situation not to be the safest, as they come forth a fresh with proposals of mediation, but in fact the same as before, only new modelled. But we shall stand against them as well as the long expected attack of a number of mutineers in our vicinity, with their revolted MASTER in their front.

Extract of a letter from Vicenza, July 23.

"Saturday last, about seven in the evening, there arose here a most terrible tempest, accompanied with hail-stones and rain. The violence of the wind was so great, that it threw down the palisades which enclose the place where the races are run in the field of Mars; the place itself is entirely destroyed, and two workmen have lost their lives; six others have been so severely wounded, that their lives are despaired of; many besides have received violent bruises. Two of these labourers were in a most extraordinary manner carried even into the Rerone, a river which surrounds the field of Mars, and found themselves on the opposite bank of the river, without being able to account how they were brought there, so much were they deprived of all sense on the occasion.

"The loss of the poor is without question the greatest loss which has been sustained; but the damage to the barriers and other works is likewise very great; for the circus was 1400 feet in circumference. There were one hundred lodges about it, some of which were so large as to contain sixteen persons each; they had stairs to mount to them, which were, as well as all the rest of the structure, of remarkable solidity and regularity."

Arrest has been announced to the families of some of the state members inimical to this city, to serve as hostage and security for all the distresses that might befall the city of Wyck, lately taken by this party. This step being performed in an offensive manner, gives us a right to act the same. In consequence of that, the corps of the rhyngrave of Salm, joined by some burghers, in all 600 men, marched towards the camp at Zeist, attacked and repelled the van near to the face of their camp. Another detachment dislodged, at the same time, another of their posts at Bunick, with the loss only of one man killed on our side.

DUBLIN, Aug. 3.

A French gentleman, Mr. Thouvenel, of science and veracity, gives a curious account of a man named Bleton, that feels the most extraordinary sensation in walking over grounds that contain springs of water, or metallic and sulphurous mines. Many celebrated mineralogists have mentioned men endowed with the faculties of making discoveries from a singularity of feeling—but Bleton seems to exceed them all; there is not a doubt but he feels in the highest degree the subterraneous agency of electric bodies——His symptoms in walking over grounds that contain them are a visible spasmodic affection over his body, accompanied with feverish motions, heat and cold, a strange derangement of his organs and muscles, and a sudden change of his eyes and features. What appears very singular, so nice are his feelings, that he can to a certainty tell the nature of the fluid or mineral under him.—He has marked out a place for a coal mine at Rouel, a small village, about two leagues west of Paris, and men are now employed in digging for it. The intendant of Lyons once consulted him upon finding out water for a well near his house. They were to proceed upon the operation next day; but Bleton had not been long in bed, when he rung his bed, and informed the intendant, that he need seek no further, for a water source, he was certain there was one under the ground of the very room in which he lay, as on going to bed he had been seized with aguish symptoms. Search was made, and the water was discovered. Sulphurous substances, he asserts, act with a centripetal—and watry ones with a centrifugal electricity.

The abominable profusion of the public money that has taken place since the accession of the present administration in this kingdom, is really alarming, not so much on account of the sums, as these grants being notoriously made for the accommodation of individuals, whose sole merit is their support of the minister of the day, right or wrong, in every one of his measures: to particularize them is almost unnecessary, our correspondent has, however, selected two of those infamous jobs which he has promised to descant upon in a series of paragraphs, the materials for which he is now, he says, arranging, these are the settlement of the Genevese, and the fishery on the North West coast.

A difficult practice of lythotomy has received great improvements in the chirurgical world within these last seven years, by a revival of the lateral incision, which, if judiciously made, is attended with much less pain and danger to the patient than the ordinary mode. This has been happily proved by a Mr. O'Reilly, who is not long returned from Paris, where he studied under the celebrated Delepine of the Hotel Dieu. A gentleman in the co. Cavan, where Mr. O'Reilly now resides, had long laboured under the grievous complaint of the stone in the bladder: but being rather delicate, and afraid of submitting to the usual operation, at length he applied to Mr. O'Reilly, who proposed opening his side and extracting the stone through the aperture. The patient from the confidence with which the operator assured him both of life and perfect safety, resolved to try the experiment, and in seven minutes was delivered of his burden with much less pain than might be expected from an incision in those parts. The gentleman is recovering fast, without feverish or other symptoms; so that Friar James's method of cutting is likely to established on principles of ease, dispatch, and safety, if a few more instances of success shall eventually recommend it to general notice.

There is a sort of club at a place south of the vicinity of the metropolis, who have made it a practice to discharge pistols at a card, marked only with the ace of any colour, to keep the hand in practice for dispatching one time or other their man. One day in the course of last week, one of these bloods, seeing one of his comrades often fire very wide of his mark, offered to stand a shot for a wager of ten guineas, if his friend doubled his distance, which might have made about 16 paces.—The wager was closed, and the iron-headed gentleman who made the bet, took his station, while his friend traversed the ground and discharged his pistol. The joke was concluded with the lodgment of a ball in the wagerer's right thigh. The wager was acknowledged to have been won; but though it was mere matter of fun, there was no great laughing on the occasion, as the genius who stood the peppering was carried to his father's house, in Aungier-street, rather in a dangerous situation.

We have the pleasure of hearing, that the late French treaty, and the accommodation of matters with Portugal, have given such life to our merchants, even in remote parts of the kingdom, that great quantities of Irish wrought goods are almost every week exporting to those countries. Thursday last the Molly and True Briton sailed for Lisbon and Nantes, from Galway, with cargoes, which it is said, will do honor to our manufactures, and make a profitable to return in less than three months.

Though no advocates for tythes, we must admit, that the vote of agistment was a partial exemption of the wealthy, which encouraged pasturage at the expence and on the ruins of agriculture. As an instance in point, a gentleman who has lately returned from Munster, has given us the names of several graziers, which we do not think proper to publish, who pay from four to five thousand per ann rent, and from eighteen to twenty shillings tythes! What a cruel partiality and injustice, when the wretched cottager pays twenty eight or thirty shillings an acre for his potatoes? The same gentleman asserts, that the great tracts of ground devoted to pasturage, in the counties of Limerick, Tipperary and Clare, are unequalled in any part of the world; no industry; no agriculture; none of the human species are to be seen. It is one extended scene of gloominess, and black cattle, with here and there a hovel for the wretched herd who feeds them——as if the country had been depopulated by plague or pestilence.

Mr. Sheriff Fleming, accompanied by a party of guards, went yesterday morning to remove a nuisance near Balls-bridge, which is too common in many parts of Ireland; the forming dung into heaps close by the road side in the adjoining fields. He ordered the gates to be pulled down, which were accordingly prostrated, and he then made proclamation that any person who wanted dung, or who might think it proper to take the same away, were at liberty; and he would take care that they should receive no obstruction or interruption in carrying it off. It is to be hoped that this exertion, for which Mr. Fleming deserves praise, will operate as a caution to persons to avoid the like in future.

The illustrious widow of the Prince de Camballe, who is yet in the bloom of youth, and now on a visit to the royal family of Great-Britain, is said to be not only the best accomplished in the arts of shining in the higher ranks of society, but the most learned lady in Europe. By learning, we do not mean a bare knowledge and facility of speaking and writing various dead or living languages, but a deep research into those treasures of wisdom, to which language is no more than the key. If some tell truth, the Princess, besides a perfect acquaintance with the French, Italian and Spanish, is no stranger to the Persian, Arabic and Coptic tongues, as now written and spoken by the learned, in Asia, and Egypt, together with several noble sciences therein to be found. Her father the prince of Carignan, of the house of Savoy, placed her early under the tuition of the present archbishop of Turin, one of the most learned amongst the Propaganda Society, to whose instructions, her highness does so much honor, as to be justly esteemed the ornament of her sex, and of any court where she shall think proper to reside.

A late French traveller who made the tour of England and Scoland, in 1778, remarks, that having been politely entertained at the Palace of Chichester by the bishop of that diocese, he enquired into his lordship's private character, and was agreeably informed, that this prelate was thought to have had no interest at court, but obtained his advancement in the church to merit alone. Then your king or his ministers are the most knowing and judicious of any in Europe, answered the traveller. But the bishop in question may be a Rara Avis. How are other ecclesiastical preferments obtained in this free and enlightened country? Why, to confess the truth, replied his friend, interest, solicitation, and parliamentary connections, are in general the road that leads to almost every employment of eminence or profit, in church as well as state. Some years ago continued the Englishman, the archbishoprick of Canterbury, which is the metropolitan see of the whole kingdom, become vacant, several were named by the public as the most likely amongst the dignified clergy to sit on the throne of St. Austin. The vacancy however was not supplied for a long time, till the ministers had leisure to weigh the interests of the various candidates.——A humorous print appeared, representing a number of small boats on the river Thames, each skulled by a gownsman, in lawn sleeves, at a distance was an exact model of the Cathedral of Canterbury, crowded with a triple mitre as the prize. A spectator, on shore, asks, in a label from his mouth—Where bound my Lords?—and is answered by the same means, in the true water stile—For Lambeth ho! The like humorous emblem appeared on the promotion of a certain late prelate to the archiepiscopal see of Dublin. The monarch was represented sitting in a great chair under a canopy, as if quite indifferent about what was going on—at a table spread with four pound and five guinea pieces—sat the minister in the act of poising one of those against several others, in a pair of gold scales, where the single piece kicks the balance and lies flat on the board. This circumstance so well attended to, in the mercantile world, has some influence on the statesman, who turning towards the monarch, announces in a label——This Cobb is weight.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 23.

Capt. Bell of the Leviathan, who arrived here on Friday from Greenland, informs us, that on the 1st of August he had a violent gale of wind, in which the brig Nancy, Capt. Hamilton, from Norway, belonging to Workington, was cast away near the Isle of Glass, one of the Lewis', Captain and crew saved, and was in hopes of saving part of the cargo—when Capt. Hamilton was at Stornaway making a protest, a gentleman informed him that a ship rigged vessel was seen off the Isle of Chaut, on her beam ends, but no people on board, nor could they obtain any information who she was.

LONDON.

Aug. 18. Tuesday last was tried at Bridgewater assizes, before Mr. Justice Groce, a cause wherein Mr. John Twycross was plaintiff, and Mr. Cutwell, Printer of the Bath Chronicle, defendant, for a libel alledged to have been published in the Bath Chronicle of the 12th of April last, respecting the Faro Tables. No justification or defence was offered by defendant, but law and justice suffered to take their course. One witness only was examined, which was —— Bowery to prove the purchase of the news-paper; he acknowledged himself a servant to the proprietors of the faro tables, and his evidence substantiated every thing in the paragraph on which the prosecution was grounded; such as, the keeping of the hounds, the illuminations, and a constant good supper and wines gratis, &c. &c. When the evidence of this single witness on the part of the prosecution was finished, the learned counsel declared, that this was one of the most impudent actions ever brought into a court, it having been clearly proved that the gaming tables in question were kept, and that Mr. Twycross played at them almost daily; that he must indeed confess that Mr. Twycross might have received damages, great damages—from the conviction by the mayor, and from the publication of the paragraphs by the defendant; by these the tables had ever since been suppressed! He was sorry the jury must give a verdict, with damages, for the plaintiff; but if they gave six-pence, he declared it would be twelve halfpence too much. The judge declared himself an enemy to news-paper libels, where virtuous characters were defamed; in such cases, damages could not be too exemplary; but in the present instance, in his opinion, the damages could not be too small. The jury instantly, and without a moment's hesitation, gave their verdict One Penny! notwithstanding Mr. Twycross had estimated the injury sustained by him in his character, reputation, and fair fame, at 1000l.

The changes we meet with every day are unaccountable; but fancy, fickle fancy, must prevail. It is but of yesterday that the ladies flourished away with a shew of large possessions in tail: but now, by some strange kind of caprice, they have exchanged that sort of tenure for one in capite; We wish the change were to better, but unluckily

The bonnet now deforms them more,
Than the rump cushion did before.

A great commercial (and noble) house at Rennes in Bretagne, which had large concerns with America, is said to have stopped!—The merchants of Bretagne thought of carrying on a most extensive and flourishing trade with the American States, but they can neither give the credit nor the goods which England can. Several commercial houses in Bretagne are noble, for even a retail trade does not derogate from nobility; but nobility sleeps while commerce is awake; that is the mercantile noblesse relinquish their titles, and re-assume them, on leaving off business. By two arrets of Louis XIV. the nobility of France are allowed to trade both by sea and land.

The late Henry Fielding once proposed the following plan for the reformation of the police, which being discountenanced in private, was, we believe, never made public:——He recommended that the court at the Old Bailey, should at the end of the trials, be adjourned for four days; that against the day of adjournment a gallows should be erected in the area before Newgate; that the criminals should in that interval be kept from strong liquors and improper company, and on the day appointed, be brought down to receive sentence. It was finally proposed, that this sentence should be executed immediately after it was pronounced, in the sight, and in the presence of the judges. Nothing we think, can be imagined more tremendous, than such an execution, nor any thing more likely to impress the spectators with that kind of awe which operates to the restraint of enormous crimes.

AMERICA.

WORCESTER.

We hear from Lenox, in the county of Berkshire, that the supreme judicial court finished their session there on the 10th inst. when four persons received sentence of death, viz. Charles Rose, Peter Allen, and John Bly, for the crime of robbery, attended with the aggravated circumstances of breaking and entering dwelling houses in the dead of the night; and William Manning for treason. This Manning appears to be one of the persons excepted by the legislature in the act of indemnity of last June. He was an active officer under Perez Hamlen, who made a descent upon the town of Stockbridge, on the night of the 26th of February last, with about 80 or 100 armed men, and plundered and captivated many of its respectable inhabitants, and was afterwards defeated in the memorable action of Sheffield. Hamlin yet remains in such a languishing situation of the wounds he then received, as to be unable to take his trial for the crime of treason of which he stands charged.

On the forenoon of Tuesday this week the seminary in this town was visited by a number of gentlemen, who examined the students in the classicks, under the tuition of Mr. Thomas Payson, and was much pleased with their proficiency. In the afternoon the youth exhibited many specimens of their progress in the art of speaking, &c. which were highly satisfactory to a large audience, assembled on the occasion.

NEW-YORK, October 19.

A crop of pumpkins raised at Jamacia, Long-Island, at the seat of Col. Joseph Robertson, of the most surprising size, and curiosity led him to weigh ten of the largest, which weighed 506 lb. the largest he weighed separate, which weighed 75, and measured 5 feet 7 inches circumference.

The respectable corps of Artillery, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Bauman, will, we are informed, parade this afternoon, in honor of the 19th of October, 1781.—This day compleats the term of six years since the Armies of America, in conjunction with the fleets and armies of our great and good Ally, obtained a most signal and decisive victory, by the surrender of near eight thousand hostile troops, commanded by a British Earl.

October 20. We hear that to morrow morning there will be an ordination in St. George's chapel, when the Rev. Mr. R. Moore and Mr. Bend are to be consecrated priests, by the Right Rev. Samuel Provoost, bishop of the Episcopal Church of the state of New-York.

Yesterday being the anniversary of the capture of Lord Cornwallis, at York-Town, the same was celebrated by the Artillery, under the command of Col Bauman. At one o'clock, the troops paraded at the Fort, when thirteen cannon were fired in honor of the day; they then marched to the Fields, where they performed a variety of evolutions and firings, with great spirit, activity, and a soldierly conduct.

SALEM, October 16.

The public are informed, that the new commodious bridge over Concord river, is now compleated, at the close of which thirteen guns were fired by the workmen. This bridge is toll free.

Next Wednesday the general court will convene in the town of Boston, agreeably to adjournment.

Died, at Hingham, last Sunday week, Mr. John Fearing, aged 67; in whose death was exhibited a striking and melancholy instance of the frailty and precariousness of human life: he was riding to meeting on horseback, in perfect health, with his wife behind him, and, in the midst of conversation with another man in company, suddenly fell from his horse, and instantaniously expired, without a struggle or groan. He was a very worthy member of society.

Philadelphia, Oct. 24.

Extract of a letter from New-York, Oct. 17, 1787.

"Immediately after the death of the Rev. Mr. Muhlenberg, Rector of the German Lutheran churches of Philadelphia, was announced to the Lutheran congregation of this city, Christ church was immediately ordered by the vestry to be dressed in full mourning, and the officers of said church to wear mourning six weeks, out of respect, which is due to that venerable character, who was the first founder of their church, as well as all the Lutheran churches on this continent. His whole life was devoted to establish peace and harmony—he effectually banished all discord among the different congregations he headed——In him they have lost a father and a friend."

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Dumfries, dated October 11, 1787.

"Last night an attempt was made to burn the house in this town wherein the records and papers are deposited, and the clerk's office kept.—This was done by the breaking of a pane of glass and introducing a coal of fire, which, after burning through the plank floor, between two of the sleepers, and leaving a hole about six inches square, fell upon the floor of the cellar, and happily did no further damage."

Monday evening last, a man coming to market in a one horse cart, was stopped at the upper end of Second street by four fellows armed with pistols. One of them jumped into the cart and searched the driver, and found only eleven shillings and three pence, which they took from him, but seeing nothing more which they thought worthy of notice, and a child in the cart beginning to cry, the villains made off.

SHIP NEWS.

The Hope, Wescot, is arrived at Providence, Rhode-Island, 54 days from l'Orient.

The Ann and Elizabeth, Atwater, from Antigua, and Elizabeth, ——, from Bermuda, are arrived at New-York.

From the MARYLAND JOURNAL.

Mr. GODDARD,

The following asks for admittance into your entertaining Journal.

DIRECTIONS to conduct a News-Paper Dispute; according to the most approved method now in practice.

ART. I. SUPPLY yourself with all political, polemical, controversial, and hyper-critical authors, and arrange them before you.

II. If you quote any of these authors, be sure to omit the sign of quotation, it will then carry all the mark of originality.

III. If you insert the sign of quotation, at the bottom of the passage quoted, write in Italics:—According to the best of my recollection;—and as your recollection cannot be supposed infallible, you may, with a good face, (by changing an affirmative into a negative term, and vice versa) pervert the sense of the author in favor of your argument.—Thus, truth becomes a lie by prefixing the little negative un; and in a thousand other ways, as may easily be learned by looking into the commentaries and miscellaneous productions of the great Cisatlantic Blackstone.

IV. Authors generally write in a train, and one argument supports another, like the links of a chain. —Now, in quotation you may easily turn any author to your use, if you are careful to take out a link without the one which supports it; and here too, never trouble yourself with small words, for I will warrant you, no one will give himself the pain to follow you to the passage quoted.

V. If your piece is of a public nature, interesting to each sex, and every denomination, place at the top a long frontispiece in Latin; but be sure not to translate it, for as it stands, there are many hidden truths in it.

VI. Surcharge your piece well with the names of Coke, Sydney, Locke, Hale and Blackstone; talk of Lycurgus, Solon, and Draco, as though you had been their contemporaries;—let all your comparisons, similies and allegories be sublime, and on an extensive scale. Comparisons from the planetary and philosophical world, when applied to common life, have a most happy elucidation; they not only discover your learning, but are best suited to vulgar capacity; for those that cannot understand, will adore the incomprehensibility of your genius.

VII. If you find yourself growing obscure, thrust in a laconic sentence from the Classics; nothing elucidates like it.—At the conclusion do not disgrace your piece with a signature in any modern language; let it rest on a Græcian or Roman pillar; an Aristides, Epaminondus, Lycurgus, Solon, Hortensius, Sempronius, or Brutus.

VIII. If your dispute is of a private and personal nature, throw no daggers in the dark; it is Ingianish.—The innocent and unconcerned, by these means, may fall a victim to your envenomed arrows.—Make no proffers of private settlement; this belongs to your antagonist; but bring him to a public tribunal: here the merits of your dispute will depend on the authority of your evidence, when the DEAD are sometimes called forth to assert:—But there are certain laws established to conduct a private dispute.

IX. Arrange your books as directed in article first. Now, as you are not to quote a whole paragraph, but a sentence here and there, let them be diffusive authors; all treatises on the passions, and above all, the News-Papers; here you will find an inexhaustible fund for slander and defamation, which you know is to pervade your whole piece.

X. Mingle in your ink three-quarters gall; this being analogous to your mind, must act in concert with it, and prove a most potent ally.

XI. Read over one of the pieces of your antagonist, no matter which, for you are not to answer any, but to rail, defame, and vilify. Besides, were you to try to trace his arguments, your passions might cool, and so lose the whole life and support of your piece.

XII. Above, in capitals, place your antagonist's name: At the beginning of every sentence, turn your eye upon it: this will suggest proper ideas, and rancour will flow through the whole.

XIII. After you have finished your piece, and found it the dictates of passion, slander and revenge, you will feel pleasing emotions, and then you may venture to write your introduction. In this assert, that the lies and misrepresentations of your antagonist have moved you to be impartial, and perhaps rigidly severe. If you have ever discovered any marks of benevolence, generosity, or public spirit, do not forget to mention them: they will prepare your readers to swallow the whole gorge, and keep it down till they have read your antagonist.

LANDS FOR SALE

IN MARYLAND,

THE subscriber has for sale, all that TRACT of LAND called Beall's Plantation and Bateman's Field (being part of Snowden's Reputation Supported) containing from a late survey 676 and a half acres, situate on the head of South river, Anne Arrundel county, about 3 miles from navigable water, 12 from the city of Annapolis, 28 from Baltimore town, 24 frow George town, and about 7 from the Inspection Houses of Indian Landing and Queen Anne, is well adapted for corn, wheat, and particularly tobacco.

This Plantation has not been tenanted for 3 years is a most pleasing and desirable situation, and capable of great improvement at a small expence; there are 259 acres of timber land, a greater part of whichais very valuable. The subscriber would prefer disposing of the whole in one lot; but has no objection to making several of it; the timber land is conveniently situated for making such divisions in equal proportions, & there are many pleasant situations for erecting different buildings; it is also well watered—A very good mill stream runs through it, and there is some meadow ground, and much more may be very readily made.

The improvements upon it are, a good dwelling house with three large rooms on each floor, kitchen, quarter, corn house, stables, tobacco house, and two very fine apple orchards, one of which contains 220 trees, together with a number of other valuable fruit trees.

A plan of this estate may be seen at Mr. Vachel Stevens, surveyor, Annapolis, who will shew the premises; also at Mess. William Patterson & Brother's, Baltimore, and further information had. For price, terms, &c. apply to JOHN WADDINGTON.

ODE TO SIMPLICITY.

DAUGHTER of Innocence and virtuous love,
Sweet maid, Simplicity!—whose humble lot
To dwell with rustics in the verdant grove,
The modest tenant of the straw-roof'd cot.

No gaudy trappings deck the nymph's attire,
But all is plain and artless as her mind;
Those tifling gew-gaws that attract desire
Of town-bred belles, were ne'er for her design'd.

She scorns the splendid ornaments of dress
That Fashion dictates, or that Folly deigns;
A slave to neither, happier far, I guess,
In the white robe of Innocence remains.

The lofty mansion, and the stately dome,
Where dwell the sons of Luxury and Pride,
May fancy pleasure in the crowded room,
Which to the lowly cottage is deny'd:

Vain are their fancies—Peace ne'er dwelleth there,
Nor rich Content amidst the glittering throng,
But envious Malice, heart-corroding Care,
Which ne'er to thee, Simplicity, belong.

Thy peaceful haunts, O let me, Muse, pervade,
The tinsel finery of dress to shun,
Fly from the glare of Folly to thy shade,
With thee, blest nymph, life's little course to run.

OF A CARMELITE FRIAR.

THE following incident occurred in the kingdom of Naples. A friar Carmelite, who was making his quest (another word for begging) in honour of the little Scapulary, being waiting under the window of a lady of quality, for the descent of some alms, the lady conveyed down in her basket a large loaf of white bread, which the friar was extending his arms to receive, when two Frenchmen coming by, who were almost famished, proved more nimble than he; for one of them thrusting the friar to the opposite side of the street, the other seized what was in it, they both decamped with the utmost expedition. The Carmelite, who was conscious of guilt, and therefore desirous of getting the loaf again into his possession, ran after them, crying out, Stop the thieves! On which the people stopped them, on the supposition they had stolen something considerable; but the poor wretches gave the best evidence imaginable, that mere want had occasioned the theft; for, finding the croud press on them, he who had stolen the loaf broke it in two, and gave the half of it to his companion. As this was doing, some papers dropped out of it on the pavement, which an Italian snatched up: on which the Carmelite, who till then had expressed such earnestness to have his loaf again, slipped away through the croud, without making any farther inquiries concerning it.

The spectators expressing great curiosity to know the contents of the papers, the Italian retired to an inn, to avoid the croud, and there communicated the desired particulars. There were two letters, the one inclosed in the other, being the friar's letter and the lady's answer to it. It is the custom in Italy for these friars to demand alms for the honour of the mother of God, as they stile the holy Virgin. In pursuance of this practice, the devout friar began his letter with these words: "Amma devota della grand Madre Venere fatima la Carita, povero Fraticello: den per pieta datemi un squardo, un riso, un bacio: Qualche cosetta, par l'amor del Dio Cupido." In English, thus: "Devout soul of the great mother Venus, give an alms to a poor friar; vouchsafe to me, I pray you, for charity, a look, a smile, a kiss; some little thing or other, for the sake of the god Cupid." At the bottom of his letter he desired the lady to honor him with a word in answer, and to send him back his own letter, not only to make him easy in regard to it, but that she might not be liable to the insults of her husband. The letter had no name to it, and concluded with these words: "The poorest of all your lovers."

The lady's answer breathed an air of gallantry not at all inferior to the friar's letter. She told him, that "If he had demanded any favor of her, she should have desired him to inform her of his rank and quality; but finding that he had only asked an alms, every one might without debasing themselves afford that to the poor and miserable. That though she had had no opportunity of taking a view of him, otherwise than from the garret window, where she was imprisoned, yet that her sight was good enough to discern that he had a very good countenance under his hood; that she allowed him from that moment to study the best means of getting to her, provided it were done with all imaginable precaution: that she might have possibly burnt the letter he had sent her, but that she supposed it would have been an ill presage, to condemn to the fire the first fruits of his love towards her; and that she doubted not, since he had been so circumspect in the securing his own letter, but that he would be at least so careful of the answer she sent him, that it might never fall into the hands of her tyrant." She concluded with the most tender expressions that the most ardent affection could give rise to, and desired the friar not to fail of returning the next day, at the same hour, to make his quest; and assuring him, that he might depend on her charity.

On Monday the 5th November,

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be expoſed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thurſday the 29th of November next, at the Court-Houſe in Harford county, ſtate of Maryland.

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilſon and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-houſe, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a ſmall expence by ſeveral ſprings, and a conſiderable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the Winter's run likewiſe flows through a part of it, on which is a mill ſeat. There is on each farm a good brick houſe, with barn, ſtables, &c. a large orchard ſtocked with the beſt fruit, and a large garden paled in. The ſituation is high and healthy, the ſoil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to ſeveral merchant mills, where there is a conſtant market for all kinds of grain.

From the WORCESTER MAGAZINE.

EVERY thing that is accomplished by human art, changes and decays. Man, the lord of all below, is weak, fickle, and inconsistent; like the wind, turned from his course by the smallest obstruction. As an individual is liable to variation, and exposed to misfortune, so is an empire. As the former tarnishes his fair rising reputation by suffering his unruly passions to hold the reins; so the latter, by an indulgence of internal tumults, sinks from the summit of grandeur and fame, to the obscure vale of poverty and disgrace. As the welfare and happiness of the one, demand a strict regulation of the passions; so the peace and harmony of the other, require a due subordination of subjects to government. There ought to be regularity and system in every thing; more especially in national affairs. America sensibly feels the truth of this observation: Her disordered, convulsed situation, too evidently evinces it. How great the contrast between her present character, and that she sustained at the conclusion of the late important war!—When an honourable peace was established between Great-Britain and the United States, every true son of America experienced a heart expanding with joy; every patriotic bosom heaved with a laudable pride, which bid him rank Columbia among the first nations of the earth. With all orders of men, from the hoary head to the mirthful youth, her growing grandeur was the topic of conversation. The patriotism, the perseverance, the wisdom, and the bravery of Americans, were instanced to show to what a length of worth and dignity the noble faculties of human nature might be extended: At foreign courts, whenever a sage politician wished to communicate the idea of an infant country advancing with hasty strides to majesty and empire, he quoted America. But Alas! it is now far otherwise. The fair page of American history is indelibly tarnished; the censure of foreigners is now no less flagrant than of late was their applause; their smiles of approbation are converted into frowns of contempt. Unless there is a speedy alteration in our political fabric, it will soon be esteemed, in Europe, an insult of the grossest nature to call a man an American. Independence and Liberty, who landed a few years since on these then innocent, injured shores, fully confident that they should not only be cheerfully received, but protected in their noble prerogatives until the last ages, are now preparing to return. They expected to find the climate of America salutary to their constitutions, and congenial to their dispositions: But to our eternal disgrace, they were disappointed. At their arrival they were embraced with cordiality, and treated even with extravagant attention and respect. Every one enthusiastically proclaimed, that he would cheerfully yield half his property for their maintenance and protection: But the ardour of hospitality soon began to abate: Presently the welcome guests noticed a degree of indifference and coldness in their sanguine hosts. Many, after informing fair Liberty that they had been in an error; that they mistook her for Licentiousness; begged her pardon, bid her adieu, and with the utmost warmth of affection, flew to the shrine of their darling goddess. By and by Independence and Liberty perceived themselves of little consequence. This treatment caused them to lament that they ever took residence in these climes. The violence done them last winter was too great for them to brook: They seriously determine before long, to seek refuge in foreign realms. Alas! my countrymen, they are now hastening to depart, and with them the emaciated, disordered matron Public Faith. What will be the disgraceful story they will tell? Will they not with propriety relate, that the sons of famed Columbia are very well calculated for "hewers of wood and drawers of water," to other nations, but totally unfit to maintain the dignity and enjoy the blessings of an independent free government?—What is to be done? The grand important question, which calls for our serious attention, is, how to restore the declining matron to health, and persuade her, with Independence and Liberty, to forbear to depart. What entreaties will induce them to give up the idea of leaving us?—I am convinced, that while the present form of federal administration continues, nothing will be an inducement. The system of government lately formed must be adopted. Every man of sense and observation knows, that America cannot exist as a nation, in her present condition. It is a very critical moment with her. Her alternative is either to adopt the system published by the grand convention, or dwindle into nothing. If this system is rejected, the probability is, that any one would be that human art is capable of forming. Some object to it for its excess of freedom. They proclaim that it is idle to alter the federal government unless an absolute rigorous one is introduced in its stead. That the one proposed is too popular; that it will not be a sufficient barrier against sedition. Others oppose it for reverse reasons. They say that it is calculated to wrest from them their liberty, and expose them to the dominion of great and ambitious men—"Let no man judge rashly."—It behoves us all, with calmness and deliberation, to consider and realize our dangerous condition. Let us remember that we are justly indebted to foreign powers: That France kindly extended her hand to save us from the revenge of Albion: That gratitude dictates, and justice demands, a compensation: That it is now in our power to lay a foundation for the future prosperity and glory of our country: That while Mars stalks over Europe with his horrible retinue, is the fortunate period for America to open her ports to all nations, and establish a regular, extensive commerce: That we cannot all be politicians, therefore ought to confide in those whose fidelity and abilities we have experienced: That the system which is presented us, was formed by the best and wisest men that perhaps ever met in council: That the great Washington, the political saviour of America, presided: And that a convention, composed of good men from every state, after deliberately debating on every part of our political situation, is capable of judging what system of confederation is best calculated to restore our public faith, and secure our liberty and independence. With anxious expectation have the people of this commonwealth waited the result of the convention: Nothing but a prospect of being relieved by that, has inclined them to remain for a few months past so peaceable; and if the system now digested and proffered, is not accepted, that a horrid civil war will speedily break out, and fill America with blood and slaughter, is almost beyond a doubt. May heaven avert it.

Foreign Intelligence.

BELGRADE, July 14.

THE return of the Russian minister to the Porte, has dissipated the fears that we began to entertain, on account of his absence; and the public tranquility is so far restored, that we hope to pass the approaching festival of the Beyram, from those commotions which were apprehended.

The third division of the Turkish squadron is ready to sail for the Black Sea. It consists of 32 frigates, and some armed brigs. Last week 5000 men, commanded by the son of the Bacha Battal, arrived here, they are destined to strengthen the borders of the Black Sea, and we are assured that they observe the most exact discipline, and pride themselves on their bravery.

It does not appear that the Internuncio from Vienna has been charged with any commission relative to the differences subsisting between Russia and us; it was however, believed, that the Emperor would have proposed a reconciliation, and offered himself as mediator. The court of France is absolutely devoted to the Ottoman ministry. There are many French officers serving in our fleet, and many sailors of the same nation, disguised under the habits of Turks.

The French ambassador presses very strongly the conclusion of a treaty, by which the navigation of the Red Sea will be granted to the French. It is but a few years past that the Bashaw of Cairo treated on that subject with the French, without the knowledge of the Porte; it is much doubted whether the ministry will ratify that convention. The navigation of the Black Sea was prohibited to the English three years since, by an express order from the Porte, and it is not to be imagined, that they will so openly declare the French the more favoured nation.

An Arabian Prince, named Muntesik-Chaki, has put himself at the head of 100,000 men, and is approaching Bassora, with an intention of invading it; he pretends that that important city, at the confluence of the Tygrus and Euphrates, was formerly part of the inheritance of his fore-fathers; and, that in virtue of that right, he pretends to be the true and only sovereign.

Government has received the confirmation of the defeat of the rebel Mochmul Bacha; Selim Bacha, governor of Salonica, at the head of 20,000 good troops, got so near to him, that he narrowly escaped.—Even before the publication of the amnesty, in favour of all those who would abandon that rebellious and turbulent Bashaw, he had been deserted by a great number of the troops under his command.

MIDDLEBURG, (Capital of Zealand) July 6.

We have had a terrible riot here, which lasted from the 29th of June, to the 2d instant; during which time the rioters pillaged 23 Burgesses houses, who were attached to the States. Six persons were killed, and five wounded—almost every window in the town was broke—but peace is now restored.

AMSTERDAM, July 31.

The Beurtman of Hardwyk has brought the disagreeable news, that the military have plundered 29 Patriot's houses at that place, and killed several who refused to surrender or declare for the Prince of Orange; and that when he left the place, it appeared the whole town would be destroyed.

DUBLIN, July 21.

We are happy to inform our readers, that by a report made to the Linen Board, by a proper officer, it appears that the value of linens exported directly from the Linen Hall in the June market 1787, has exceeded the value of the linens exported in the June market, 1786, in a sum not less than £11,600l.

BIRMINGHAM, (England) July 28.

We have the pleasure to mention the following instance of the increasing manufacture and opulence of those concerned in the iron trade in this kingdom. A few days ago a boat built with English iron, by J. Wilkinson, Esq; of Bradley Forge, came up our canal to this town, loaded with 22 tons 15 hundred weight of its own metal, &c. &c. It is nearly of equal dimensions with the other boats employed upon the canal, being 70 feet long, and 6 feet 8 inches and a half wide. The thickness of the plates with which it is made is about 5-16ths, and it is put together with rivets, like copper or fire engine boilers; but the stern post is wood, and the gunwhale is lined with, and beams are made of elm planks. Her weight is about 8 tons; she will carry in deep water upwards of 32 tons, and when light she draws about the same as a common wooden boat, viz. eight or nine inches of water.

LONDON.

July 19. There is printing at the city of Nimeguen, at the Prince of Orange's private Press, a paper, in the form of a manifesto, which is meant to be distributed on the part of the Stadtholder, throughout the United Provinces, in justification of his late proceedings, copies of which will be sent to all the Courts of Europe.

As far as military preparation can give alarm, the alarm is given from the center of France through every direction.

July 20. The Stock Exchange has not exhibited for these many years, such a scene, as took place yesterday, on the settling of accounts: There were no less than twenty-five lame ducks waddled out of the Alley! Their deficiencies amount to two hundred and fifty thousand pounds!

An unhappy contest is likely to take place between the King of Sardinia and the Republic of Genoa. His Majesty thinking himself insulted by the hardships which the Piedmontese shepherds are subjected to by the Genoese, when they are driving their cattle thro' the republic, has forcibly taken 4 forts, and the town of Savona, and now keeps possession of them. As soon as the news of this invasion was brought to Genoa, the Senate dispatched three couriers, one to Paris, the other to Vienna, to implore the protection and mediation of those courts, and the third to Swisserland, to obtain of the Helvetian Cantons a body of 6000 men, to defend the Republic against this unforeseen attack of the King of Sardinia.

August 12. The humane society of Paris have saved since their first institution in 1772 till 1785, inclusive, 599 out of 701 persons. And last year they were so successful as to preserve the lives of 54; 30 were drawn out of the water with some appearance of life, and others apparently dead; their attempts miscarried only on 6 who had been too long under water.

Aug. 18. Gen. Murray is now in form appointed by the Emperor Lieutenant Governor and Captain General of the Belgic Provinces, and invested with all the usual powers and authority of that office during the absence of the Governor General and the Minister Plenipotentiary, the Count de Belgioso.

Aug. 28. Four Consuls it is said, are to be appointed for the management of the British mercantile concerns in the United States of America.

Saturday at noon, a large packet was received at St. James's, brought over by a messenger extraordinary from Nimeguen. The dispatches are from the Hon. James Greuville, now resident on a private commission at the Stadtholder's court; but there are a number of other letters.

Since the arrival of the above, a report has got into circulation, that a proposal has been made by his Prussian Majesty to the states of Holland, for holding a Congress of mediators to arbitrate in the present disputes, and settle differences. Their High Mightinesses the States General to be one of the arbitrators.

Mr. Van-Robes Abbeville, the most eminent clothier in France, and whose goods are by way of excellence called after his own name, is at this time in London, and has, it is said, contracted very largely with several English houses in that trade.

The celebrated Mr. Isaac de Pinto, died in Holland, the 13th inst. upwards of 70 years of age. This distinguished character had, by his talents, extensive knowledge and writings, acquired the friendship and respect of many persons of the first distinction in England, France and Holland. He enjoyed till his death, a pension of 500l. per ann. from the English East India Company, in consideration of the great services he rendered the said Company at Paris, in the year 1762.

Among other important matters which are to become the subject of parliamentary inquiry the ensuing sessions, that branch of commerce, the African slave trade to the West Indies, is neither the last nor least important. This traffic in human flesh has often been threatened with a public inquiry, but as often dropped. A society of gentlemen, at the head of which are several members of the house of commons, is now formed in town, who correspond with some principal persons at the outports, where the ships employed in this trade, are fitted out, so that a full, free, and fair discussion is expected. Among other things the treatment of slaves in the West India islands will be brought on the tapis, it being notorious that in times of war, the slaves in the British settlements, upon every emergency, have been mutinous; while in the French islands, their negroes have been among the most zealous defenders of their master's property.

Stagnant air has been the cause of bishop Watson's illness—it is not meant, typically at all, from his confinement at Landaff—but literally and physically true, from his drinking, when heated with exercise, a large draught of water, from a spring that had not been pumped for some time, and which was putrid from stagnation. A fever ensued; and with the consequences of that he is still languishing—and in truth, there languishes some of the best ability in England.

The projects of the Emperor have excited the most lively alarms, and a spirit of discontent now reigns in the four states of Brabant, Heinau, Namur, and Flamand, which it will not be easy for him to quiet, as the most unanimous disposition prevails against him. The chancellor, who was the only officer that shewed an alacrity in carrying his pretended reforms into execution, has been forced to leave the country, and count Belgioso is confined to his own house. A mob assembled round his house last week and threatened to murder him; they even wrote to the duke d'Aremberg to request that he would oblige them with a charger on which to lay his head; and had not that nobleman taken pains to pacify them, they would certainly have proceeded to some outrage.

AMERICA.

ST. PIERRE, (Martinico) Aug. 30.

On Thursday last, the 23d of this month, we were threatened, from the morning, with the weather that too often in this time of the year ruins these colonies. The wind shifted frequently from the east to the north-east and north, and west to the south west and south. It went through almost every point of the compass with violent gusts. It settled at the south, and created a prodigious swell, which soon became fatal to our road; we saw perish before our eyes, 4 coasting sloops and 4 schooners, an American sloop and schooner, seven passage boats and two lighters. One mulatto sailor was the only victim of the disaster in the road. Six passage boats from Port Royal, and three from Lementen, were also lost. In general the plantations of this colony have suffered but little, except from the loss of provisions.

ROSEAU, (Dominica) Sept. 2.

We are sorry to give a recital of a more tremendous hurricane in this island than has happened for many years past; and it is doubtful, if any has ever occasioned more damage and distress here in the memory of man.

The squall commenced last Wednesday morning (from north west) at 4 o'clock, accompanied with heavy rain, lightning and thunder, and continued to blow with the utmost violence till near six o'clock. Destruction and inundation to the buildings and plantations in general were rapidly accomplished in that short period. The little abatement of the hurricane permitted few individuals to survey the ruins it had occasioned; the fragments of buildings levelled with the ground, and roofs of houses carried to an incredible distance, occasioned a melancholy view. The suspense was of short duration: for, soon after six o'clock, the squall taking an opposite direction, what was undemolished by the first, fell a sacrifice to a second most furious blast, from the south-east, mingled with drifting rain, which shook to the foundation the strongest buildings in Roseau, and raged till eight o'clock with unabating violence.

The officers apartments, and the barracks in Morne Bruce (where the thirtieth regiment was quartered) are totally destroyed; and we are sorry to observe that the officers in general and forty of the soldiers, have been severely bruised, and sustained great loss from this storm, of the severity of which a just idea can be formed only by those who were spectators of the dreadful scene.

We are happy to hear that capt. Breerton sustained little other damage except the loss of a fine and valuable horse, who was killed by the fall of the barracks roof.

Serjeant Brook, was rolled down an almost perpendicular mountain from Mount Bruce, to the estate of Charles Wimstone, Esq; a precipice of 150 yards, without sustaining any hurt.

At Prince Rupert's Bay, the newly erected barracks are demolished, but the magazine has received little or no injury. No lives lost or bruises sustained, so far as we can learn. It is said however, that the storm has done great damage to the buildings and plantations.

By the storm on Thursday se'ennight last the public works were greatly damaged, and one negro killed at the latter place.

At Olive Hill, but one hut remains of the encampment. The houses in Roseau have in general received much damage.

September 9, 1787.

The damages sustained by the last storm are, by the most recent accounts, very great through all the plantations in this island. The buildings in general and at the least one half the crops, are destroyed, and the greatest part of the provisions rendered useless.

So violent was the squall on Mount Bruce, that three sheets of lead from one of the barracks were blown 100 yards distance, and fell on the roof of the provision store.

The damage done at Martinico among the shipping is great. At St. Pierre, eleven sail of vessels have been drove ashore, it is said, by the last gale, which added to their former loss, made the number twenty five sail.

July 25. About two o'clock, on the morning of Saturday last, was felt a very severe shock of an earthquake, which lasted about 30 seconds.

And in the night between Sunday and Monday a second shock was felt, but not so severe as the former.

We learn from St. Pierre, Martinico, that the first shock was felt with considerable violence in that island: that it threw down a house at Le Carbet, by which some lives were lost; damaged the church and the play-house, and did other injury to St. Pierre. We have, however, received no very distinct or authentic account of the particulars.

ST. JOHN's, (Antigua) Sept. [illegible].

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in London, to his friend in this Island, June 27, 1787.

"I wish I was competent to explain to you a new or rather revived kind of proceeding at law, which has just been attempted with success; and which affects all admiralty determinations—they are now going to try the grand St. Eustatia Questions in this manner. It has been ever understood that the determination of the delegates was final; but a Mr. Richardson a young counsel, in a matter respecting commodore Johnson's Dutch East-Indiamen, gave notice he should move the court of common pleas for a prohibition against the decree of the delegates, to whom this cause had been carried from the admiralty courts, on the ground of their having exceeded the powers vested in them and decreed contrary to law. The old stagers in the law laughed, but lord Loughborough was convinced of the propriety and legality of the application, and ordered the prohibition without a moment's hesitation. The chief aim seems to be, to bring the matter before the house of lords, which they can do from the common pleas, but could not from the delegates. I suppose by this lucky hit Mr. Richardson has made his fortune."

BOSTON, October 16.

The third division of the militia, under the command of major-general Brooks, is now reviewing by regiments. Last week the regiments commanded by colonels Rice, Wright, and Varnum, which compose the brigade of general Woods, were reviewed, and made a very respectable appearance. This week the arrangement for general Hall's brigade is as follows: colonel Gleason's regiment, at Framingham, this day—colonel Munro's, at Concord, to morrow—colonel Blanchard's, at Reading, on Thursday—and colonel Hagar's, at Cambridge, on Friday.

To-morrow the Boston regiment of militia will parade in the common, agreebly to orders from the colonel, for the last time this year.

As the new constitution for the United States, now before the public, is a concern of such vast importance to the freedom and happiness of our young nation, the people ought to bestow upon it the most serious attention, and also "ask wisdom of God who giveth to them who ask it,"—and as we are to expect some erroneous friends, as well as artful enemies, who will give their sentiments to the public upon this great subject, in order to guard the people as much as possible from impositions, it seems necessary that every writer should leave his name with the printer, that any one, who may be desirous of knowing the author, should be informed.

This appears perfectly reasonable, and is perfectly consistent with the liberty of the press. No honest man, I conceive, can object to this rule, in the present very interesting concern. Every man will admit, that this period is big with importance to our country—and if foreign and domestic enemies are allowed to publish their dark and alarming fears, while they are concealed, many honest people may suppose such fears were expressed by real friends and patriots, and therefore may receive an undue impression from them. Enemies we certainly have, who wish to prevent our growth and prosperity; and shall we at this critical day suffer them to sow the seeds of our ruin in the dark?

As to real friends, no one can rationally object to have his name known, as the author of what he publishes—therefore it is expected that every printer, who is a true patriot, will adhere to this rule.

A CITIZEN.

[As it is not the wish of an individual citizen only, but the desire of a great majority of them, that the printers should adopt the rule referred to in the above,—the publisher of the Massachusetts Gazette is determined to coincide with those wishes, so far as they respect pieces wrote on the most important of all subjects——the New Fœderal Constitution.]

LITCHFIELD, October 15.

On Friday last arrived in town, from his seat at New-London, the right rev. Bishop Seabury; and yesterday he attended divine service at St. Paul's church; where he preached a most excellent and animated discourse, on the attonement and various sufferings of our SAVIOUR to a very crowded and decent audience; not less than 800 persons being present. The subject was discussed with great propriety and candour; and his observations were distinct, pertinent and perspicuous, which, added the bishop's graceful deportment, commanded the ferious and close attention of the whole assembly.—Upwards of one hundred persons received confirmation.

NEW-YORK, October 20.

On Tuesday an unfortunate accident happened in this port on board the ship Lydia, captain T. Watson, of London. A young man, named William Marks, one of the ship's crew, being on the main top-sail yard, fell from the same, and was instantly killed.

RICHMOND, October 18.

Monday last the honorable general assembly of this state, met agreeable to adjournment, and there appearing a sufficient number of members to constitute a house, proceeded to the election of a speaker, when the honorable Joseph Prentis, esquire, was conducted to the chair without any opposition.

Extract of a letter from Harrison county, Sept. 29, 1787.

"On Monday the 10th instant, a young lad discovered a party of Indians stealing horses on the west fork of Monongalia river. Upon which information major Wm. Lowther, (who has often distinguished himself) assembled a party of volunteers and went in pursuit of them upwards of 140 miles, when on a sudden they approached their camp, fired, on them, and killed two and wounded one, (who made his escape) with the loss of only one of our men; we took from them all their horses, four guns, and a considerable quantity of plunder, amongst which was found a white person's scalp."

During the 1st week of the sitting of the present general court, nine prisoners were tried and found guilty; among whom was John Price Posey, from New Kent, for burning the jail and clerk's office of that county.

The freeholders of Henrico county, are requested to meet at the Masons' Hall at 11 o'clock on Monday the 22d instant, to instruct their representatives in the present assembly in the adoption of the Federal Constitution.

ALEXANDRIA, Oct. 18.

Last Tuesday morning passed this port for George Town, the Potomack Planter, captain Johns, in 7 weeks from London.—By her we received English papers to the 25th of August, from which we have taken the following Extracts:

"That in consequence of an express arriving from France to the French ambassador in Holland a courier was dispatched to the Prussian court, declaring that France will not look quietly at the march of the Prussian troops, and that she must be compelled to break all connexions with her, if the march of these troops are not stopped.—That the affairs of Holland remain in the same distracted state they have been in for some time past.—That on Saturday the 11th of August, was published at Paris, by the royal authority, the king's declaration of the stamp-act, as also the edict for a land tax.—That the Prussian army was to march in two columns, on each side of the Rhine, and be commanded by general Mollendorf.—That his Prussian majesty has ordered a magazine to be established at Wesel, and has assigned for that purpose 500 000 rix dollars.—And that M. de Calonne, the late French minister, dined on Thursday last with sir Robert Herries, in Jefferies-Square."

"There is an act of the general assembly of Scotland, says a London Paper, forbidding the clergy to wear wigs. The reason assigned was, that those people of whose hair the wigs were made, might now be in Hell.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman in Providence, Rhode Island, to his correspondent in this Town, dated Sept. 15, 1787.

"We have had a shadow of an Assembly at Newport, which has resolved, by a majority of 12, to send no members to Congress, nor to accept any constitution the convention may offer.

"Ought not the whole continent to be much alarmed, and to doubt their opinion of the salutary effects of the new constitution, when they see it is likely to be rejected by an administration that has given such unprecedented proofs of political integrity and virtue, since their having come to the management of state affairs? Or rather ought they not to wish the time not far distant when the chief magistrate of that state should be obliged to quit his native soil with as little property as he was obliged to leave New-York in the year 1776, with his saddle-bags over his shoulders, attended by his present adherents, who in fact are a disgrace to human nature?"

Philadelphia, Oct. 25.

Charles Biddle, Esq; was on Tuesday last appointed secretary to Council, in the room of J. Armstrong, Esq; whom Congress has appointed one of the Judges of the western territory.

We hear a beacon is speedily to be erected on Cape May, in New-Jersey, for the better accommodation of vessels that may find it necessary to enter the bay of Delaware through that channel.

Accounts from Albemarle (Virginia) say, that "great exertions have been made in that part of the state for passing an instalment law, enacting, that all debts due on the —— day of ——, 1786 may be paid in the following manner: all judgments now already obtained were to be divided into three equal parts, one payable on January 1st, 1788, another January 1st, 1789, and the last on the same day of January 1790.—All judgments obtained in the course of the year 1787 were to be paid in moieties, one half on January 1st, 1789, and the other on January 1790.—And lastly all judgments obtained in the course of the year 1788 were to be entirely paid off on the 1st of January 1790.—No appeal or replevy was to be allowed, but bonds were to be immediately given, with good security, &c. and upon failing to comply with the conditions of the bonds, the sheriff was to seize and sell property at ten days notice, for what it would bring." Whatever blessings may have attended the American revolution, says an observer, a general spirit of public honesty does not seem to be among the number.

By the United States in Congress assembled, Oct. 3, 1787.

On a report of the secretary at war, to whom was referred his letter of the 26th of September, Congress came to the following resolutions:

Whereas the time for which the greater part of the troops on the frontiers are engaged will expire in the course of the ensuing year—

Resolved, That the interests of the United States require, that a corps of seven hundred troops shall be stationed on the frontiers to protect the settlers on the public lands from the depredations of the Indians, to facilitate the surveying and selling of the said lands, in order to reduce the public debt, and to prevent all unwarrantable intrusions thereon.

Resolved, That in order to save the great expence of transporting new levies to the distant frontiers of the United States, and also to avail the public of the discipline and knowledge of the country acquired by the troops of the frontiers, it is highly expedient to retain as many of them as shall voluntarily re-engage in the service.

Resolved, That seven hundred non-commissioned officers and privates be raised for the term of three years, unless sooner discharged; and that the same be furnished in the proportions herein specified, by the states which raised the troops agreeably to the requisitions of Congress of April, 1785.

Connecticut, one hundred and sixty five.
New-York, one hundred and sixty-five.
New-Jersey, one hundred and ten.
Pennsylvania, two hundred and sixty.

That the commissioned officers for the said troops be furnished by the said states, agreeably to the present proportions.

That the organization of the said troops, together with the two companies of artillery, raised by virtue of the resolves of Congress of the 20th October, 1786, be according to the present establishment, viz. one regiment of infantry of eight companies, each company four serjeants, four corporals, two musicians, and sixty privates: and one battalion of artillery, of four companies, each company four serjeants, four corporals, two musicians, and sixty privates.

That the secretary at war make the necessary arrangements from time to time, to replace the men on the frontiers, whose engagements shall expire.

That the said troops shall be governed by such rules and articles of war as are or shall be established by Congress or a committee of the states.

That the pay and allowances of the said troops be the same as directed by the resolve of Congress of April 12, 1785.

That the Board of Treasury make the necessary provisions of cloathing and rations from time to time, at such places as the secretary at war shall judge necessary.

At a meeting of the Freemen of the county of Somerset (New Jersey) October 9, being the day of the annual election;

THOMAS BERRY, Esq; Chairman and Judge of Election.

THE Constitution of the United States, as agreed upon by the Federal Convention at Philadelphia, was read; whereupon,

Resolved unanimously, That this county do highly approve of the same; and that if the same be adopted by the confederated states, they will support it with their lives and fortunes.

Resolved unanimously, That the representatives of this county in the General Assembly be, and they are hereby instructed to use their utmost endeavours to have a convention appointed for this state, without delay, agreeably to the recommendations of Congress, for the purpose of considering and ratifying said constitution.

By order of the freemen and voters present,
THOMAS BERRY, Judge and Chairman.

On Sunday the 7th instant the Rev. Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, doctor of divinity, and senior minister of the German Lutheran congregation of Philadelphia, departed this life, in the 77th year of his age. This truly worthy and highly esteemed father and founder of the German Lutheran ministry, and of nearly all the congregations of that church within the United States, was born at Eimbeck, in the electorate of Hanover, on the 6th of September, 1711. He was forty-eight years a faithful and zealous minister of the church of Christ; of this period forty-five years were spent in America in diffusing the blessings of his ministry, uniting unwearied diligence with meekness and discretion for the promotion of religion, and in collecting and founding many congregations, which, under the influence of his exemplary piety, unremitted care and fatherly attention, have increased and flourished in peace and unity. The university of Pennsylvania bore honorable testimony to his merit, by conferring on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. His advanced age and bodily infirmity induced him a few years since to retire to his seat in Providence township, Montgomery county, where, after an illness of six days, he closed his pious and useful life, with truly christian fortitude and resignation. On the 10th instant, his remains were deposited near Providence church, which was the first house founded and consecrated by him for religious worship. As his pious life and conversation had rendered him universally beloved, his funeral was attended by a great concourse of inhabitants, as well English as German, of divers religious denominations, when a sermon was preached on the occasion by the Rev. Mr. Voigt minister of the Providence congregation, from Psalm 15 v. 1, 2. And on Sunday the 21st instant, sermons adapted to the same occasion were preached in both churches of the Philadelphia congregations (which were also founded and consecrated by him) in Zion church by the Rev. Dr. Helmuth, from II Kings, v. 11, 12, and in St. Michael's church by the Rev. Mr. Schmidt, from Prov. 10. v. 7. The solemn silence which pervaded the very numerous audience, and their unaffected grief, were convincing proofs of the great love they bore their worthy and meritorious father and pastor, and that his memory is dear and precious to them.

Go, faithful steward, and receive
The favour of thy Lord;
A crown of glory he will give,
Thy labour's great reward.
The glorious sentence thou shalt hear
Pronounc'd by Truth Divine,
Come, blessed soul, inhabit here,
Eternal joys are thine.

The Rev. Martin Sherlock gives the following character of the Queen of England.

"She is neither a wit nor a beauty:—She is prudent, well-informed, has an excellent understanding, and is very charitable. She has an elegant person, good eyes, good teeth, a Cleopatra nose, and fine hair; the expression of her countenance is pleasing and interesting; it is full of good sense and good temper. She loves domestic pleasures; is fonder of diamonds than the Queen of France; as fond of snuff as the King of Prussia; is extremely affable, very pious, and is praised by all the world both at home and abroad."

SHIP NEWS.

The ship Neptune, Capt. James Scott, lying at the Long Wharf, in Boston, will sail for London the 10th of November.

By accounts from Jamaica we learn, that the Peggy, Capt. Peyton, from Norfolk, was drove out of 'Statia roads on the 24th ult. and afterwards lost on Saba. A man and two boys perished.

From Lindsay's Marine Intelligencer, Norfolk, Oct. 7.

Arrived in distress the sloop Amphion, Robert Barry, master, from Jamaica, bound for New-York. Capt. Barry informs, that they met with a heavy gale of wind from the east, which lasted three days, and the current setting heavy to the westward, carried them inside the breakers on the Florida shore, where they remained ten days before they could procure a pilot to carry them out. They had afterwards very bad weather, which damaged their sails and rigging in such a manner, that they were obliged to make for this port. Capt. Barry likewise informs, that during the time they were on the Florida shore, the brigantine Dispatch, Capt. Dodd, from Kingston, Jamaica, bound to Philadelphia, was cast away on the said breakers, and entirely lost.

Bankrupt-Office, Octo. 23, 1787. 25.10 3.

INVITATION, BY MR. POPE,

To Mr. CRAGG, Secretary of State:
Not Printed in the Edition of this Writer.

FEW words are best—I wish you well,
Bethel, I'm told, will soon be here,
Some morning walks along the mall,
And evening friends will end the year.

If in this interval between,
The falling leaf and coming frost,
You please to see on Twit'nam green,
Your friend, your poet, and your host;

For three whole days you here may rest
From office, business, news and strife;
And, what most folks would think a jest—
Want nothing else, except your—wife!

ANECDOTE.

THE marquis de St. Andre applied to Louvois, minister of the war-department under Louis XIV. for a small government then vacant. The minister, who had received some complaints against this officer, refused to comply. The Marquis, somewhat nettled, rather hastily said, "If I were to enter again into the service, I know very well what I would do." "And pray what would you do?" returned the minister in a furious tone. "I would take care," replied St. Andre, who had now recollected himself, "to behave in such a manner, that your Excellency should have nothing to reproach me with." Louvois, agreeably surprised at this reply, immediately granted him his request.

PIRACY.

RANAWAY with from Simpson's Bay, St. Martins, by three White Men and one Black Boy, on the evening of the 4th September, a small Virginia built SCHOONER, about 38 feet keel, with black sides, white bottom, quarters and stern green, two cabbin windows and two quarter lights, the rudder traversing clear of the upper part of the stern, new standing rigging and new sails, the main gaff scarfed, in consequence of the new mainsail being too square, new comings and waist partly new, has much the appearance of Bermuda built, and had on board nineteen Puncheons of Rum, taken from Friars' Bay, French Quarters, St. Martins, under Dutch colours, the papers in the name of one captain John Stockey, were endorsed to John White, and the Schooner was called The Friars' Bay Packet. The Captain that ranaway with her was one Robert Enctew (or something like it) born in some part of England, but resided for 8 or 10 years last past in this island; about 5 feet 4 or 5 inches high, black hair, black eyes, brown complexion and smooth skin. Savory Taylor, another white man, about 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high, fair hair, freckled in the face and on the hands, about 21 years of age, with grey eyes, born in Virginia. Thomas Champlin, about the size of the Captain, not so corpulent, but of a thinner body, black hair hair, and born in the island of St. Martins. The Negro Boy, (the property of Simon Ahman) by the name of Billy Scott, about 16 years of age, has but one eye, likely faced. By a schooner from Spanish-Town, captain John Butler, we have the following information, viz. that a few days before he left that island, there had been at St. Johns, as he was informed by several of the inhabitants, a schooner, which came to anchor at Water Mellon Key, which was well known to be the Schooner ranaway with from St. Martins, and that they sold one hogshead of rum at two shillings per gallon, and bought corn and some other articles, and went away again the same day. The account they gave of themselves was, that they were from St. Martins, drove out by stress of weather; that they had left their Captain on shore; but it was observed that they kept down before the wind after quitting Water Mellon Key, and it was supposed were destined for St. Thomas: he also observes, that the natives (after their departure) were suspicious, from their mode of acting, that they were not on any good design.

A very reasonable Reward will be given for securing the Vessel and Cargo, or any part of the property, as also for apprehending the Villain or Villains, so that they may be brought to justice, and every necessary expence will be paid by

AARON AHMAN.

Bordentown Academy.

THE subscriber takes this method to inform the public, that he still continues his Academy open at Bordentown, and that having supplied himself with a good tutor, means to increase his school to about thirty pupils, having formerly confined himself to a smaller number, being confident that he and his assistant can fully do their duty by them. The branches that are taught in his academy are reading, writing, arithmetic, the Latin, Greek and French languages, practical mathematics, geography, with the use of the globes, and the arts and sciences in general. He has in said Academy a good library and philosophical apparatus, for the use of his pupils; so that gentlemen may have their children fitted either for any particular class in college, or their education finished with him. He pays a particular attention to rhetoric and oratory, and flatters himself that he has turned out some good speakers, so necessary in our republic. He provides board, washing, lodging and every necessary accommodation, either in his own house, or in a genteel family, who accommodates part of his pupils. The exceeding healthiness and pleasantness of the situation, together with the ready communication with both the cities of Philadelphia and New-York, render it the most eligible spot on the continent for a seminary of learning. As there will be a vacation during the month of October, such gentlemen as wish to send their sons had best apply to him at Bordentown, either by letter or otherwise, during the time of vacation, that they may enter when the school commences on the first of November, as he cannot admit any more when his number is compleated. Those gentlemen who confide their children to his care may depend upon every attention being paid by

For Griſt Mills & other Water Works

On an extenſive Plan,

One of the beſt ſituations in America is offered

FOR SALE,

Together With

Batſto Iron-Works,

At the forks of Little Egg-Harbour river, one of the moſt healthy ſpots in New Jerſey, 38 miles by land from Philadelphia, and within a few hours ſail of New York.

THE river, communicating with the ſea by the beſt inlet on the Jerſey coaſt, is navigable for veſſels of 200 tons within a few miles of the works; thoſe of 100 tons may approach within one mile; flats and ſcows, carrying 10 or 12 tons, load and unload at the works. The uſual freight to New York or Philadelphia is 10 ſhillings per ton. The furnace ſtream affords plenty of water, in the dryeſt ſeaſon, for 3 or 4 pair of mill ſtones, beſides ſupplying the iron works.——An excellent dam, which has been increaſing in ſtrength many years by the cinder from the furnace, is well ſecured from the danger of freſhes, and the works are ſcarcely ever injured or delayed by either ice or backwater, though the tide ſwells to the foot of the dam; mills may therefore be erected at a moderate expence. This being a part of the country in which many people and many teams are neceſſarily employed in collecting and preparing for market the iron and lumber with which it abounds, and at the ſame time illy adapted to the raiſing of grain for their ſupport, there is, and muſt continue to be, a demand for large quantities of midlings, cornell, ſhorts and bran, at advanced prices; and the conveniencp of conveying flour at a light expence, either to New York or Philadelphia, or to more diſtant markets, will not be overlooked nor conſidered as of ſmall importance, eſpecially as there are few mill ſeats of any conſiderable capacity equally adapted to the New York market, which is not unfrequently ſupplied with ſuperfine flour from Philadelphia. A choice of the various kinds of wheat may be drawn to this ſeat from Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jerſey, and New York with greater eaſe and convenience than to almoſt any other mills now in being.

The FURNACE, which by the extenſive lands annexed to it, is abundantly ſupplied with wood and ore, is now in blaſt, and is noted for producing the beſt hollow ware in America, the metal being peculiarly well adapted to the making of caſtings of all kinds, as well as excellent bar iron.

A FORGE, with four fires and two hammers, belongs to the eſtate, and ſtands about half a mile from the furnace, on another fine ſtream which affords plenty of water.

A SLITTING and ROLLING MILL, having been diſuſed for the laſt two or three years, may want ſome repairs to prepare it for uſe; but the forebays and gates are in perfect order, and being in the proper ſpot for griſt mills, may be appropriated to that uſe.

Two SAW MILLS in good order, and a ſmall Griſt Mill.

The MANSION HOUSE is elegantly ſituated about 100 yards from the furnace, on an height which commands a view of the whole works, and of the two villages formed by the ſurrounding buildings belonging to the eſtate, ſuch as barns, ſtables, coal houſes, workſhops, ſtorehouſes and dwellings for workmen. Adjoining the manſion houſe is a large and fruitful garden, affording plenty of vegetables, and well ſtored with choſen fruit trees: alſo a young bearing orchard, containing near 2000 apple trees, moſtly grafted.

Theſe excellent accommodations for extenſive and profitable manufactories, are offered to ſale at a very low rate, and on terms of payment calculated for the eaſe of the purchaſer, who may pay the greater part in the produce of the Iron Works, at a price to be agreed upon; and they are capable of producing more in one year, than will pay the whole price demanded.

For particulars, apply to WILLIAM RICHARDS, at the ſaid Works, JOHN COX, at Bloomſbury, near Trenton, or CHARLES PETTIT, in Philadelphia.

The following is copied from a late New-York Paper at the request of some of our readers.

To the CITIZENS of the STATE of NEW-YORK.

WHEN the public is called to investigate and decide upon a question in which not only the present members of the community are deeply interested, but upon which the happiness and misery of generations yet unborn is in great measure suspended, the benevolent mind cannot help feeling itself peculiarly interested in the result.

In this situation, I trust the feeble efforts of an individual, to lead the minds of the people to a wise and prudent determination, cannot fail of being acceptable to the candid and dispassionate part of the community. Encouraged by this consideration, I have been induced to offer my thoughts upon the present important crisis of our public affairs.

Perhaps this country never saw so critical a period in their political concerns. We have felt the feebleness of the ties by which these United States are held together, and the want of sufficient energy in our present confederation, to manage, in some instances, our general concerns. Various expedients have been proposed to remedy these evils, but none have succeeded. At length a Convention of the states has been assembled, they have formed a constitution which will now, probably, be submitted to the people to ratify or reject, who are the fountain of all power, to whom alone it of right belongs to make or unmake constitutions, or forms of government, at their pleasure. The most important question that was ever proposed to your decision, or to the decision of any people under heaven, is before you, and you are to decide upon it by men of your own election, chosen specially for this purpose. If the constitution offered to your acceptance, be a wise one, calculated to preserve the invaluable blessings of liberty, to secure the inestimable rights of mankind, and promote human happiness, then, if you accept it, you will lay a lasting foundation of happiness for millions yet unborn; generations to come will rise up and call you blessed. You may rejoice in the prospects of this vast extended continent becoming filled with freemen, who will assert the dignity of human nature. You may solace yourselves with the idea, that society, in this favored land, will fast advance to the highest point of perfection; the human mind will expand in knowledge and virtue, and the golden age be, in some measure, realised. But, if on the other hand, this form of government contains principles that will lead to the subversion of liberty—if it tends to establish a despotism, or, what is worse, a tyrannic aristocracy; then, if you adopt it, this only remaining assylum for liberty will be shut up, and posterity will execrate your memory.

Momentous then is the question you have to determine, and you are called upon by every motive which should influence a noble and virtuous mind, to examine it well, and to make up a wise judgment. It is insisted, indeed, that this constitution must be received, be it ever so imperfect. If it has its defects, it is said, they can be best amended when they are experienced. But remember, when the people once part with power, they can seldom or never resume it again but by force. Many instances can be produced in which the people have voluntarily increased the powers of their rulers; but few, if any, in which rulers have willingly abridged their authority. This is a sufficient reason to induce you to be careful, in the first instance, how you deposit the powers of government.

With these few introductory remarks, I shall proceed to a consideration of this constitution.

The first question that presents itself on the subject is, whether a confederated government be the best for the United States or not? Or in other words, whether the thirteen United States should be reduced to one great republic, governed by one legislature, and under the direction of one executive and judicial; or whether they should continue thirteen confederated republics, under the direction and controul of a supreme fœderal head for certain defined national purposes only?

This enquiry is important, because, although the government reported by the convention does not go to a perfect and entire consolidation, yet it approaches so near to it, that it must, if executed, certainly and infallibly terminate in it.

This government is to possess absolute and uncontroulable power, legislative, executive and judicial, with respect to every object to which it extends, for by the last clause of section 8th, article 1st, it is declared "that the Congress shall have power to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this constitution, in the government of the United States; or in any department or office thereof." And by the 6th article, it is declared "that this constitution, and the laws of the United States, which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and the treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby, any thing in the constitution, or law of any state to the contrary notwithstanding." It appears from these articles that there is no need of any intervention of the state governments, between the Congress and the people, to execute any one power vested in the general government, and that the constitution and laws of every state are nullified and declared void, so far as they are or shall be inconsistent with this constitution, or the laws made in pursuance of it, or with treaties made under the authority of the United States.——The government then, so far as it extends, is a complete one, and not a confederation. It is as much one complete government as that of New-York or Massachusetts, has as absolute and perfect powers to make and execute all laws, to appoint officers, institute courts, declare offences, and annex penalties, with respect to every object to which it extends, as any other in the world. So far therefore as its powers reach, all ideas of confederation are given up and lost. It is true this government is limited to certain objects, or to speak more properly, some small degree of power is still left to the states, but a little attention to the powers vested in the general government, will convince every candid man, that if it is capable of being executed, all that is reserved for the individual states must very soon be annihilated, except so far as they are barely necessary to the organization of the general government. The powers of the general legislature extend to every case that is of the least importance—there is nothing valuable to human nature, nothing dear to freemen, but what is within its power. It has authority to make laws, which will affect the lives, the liberty, and property of every man in the United States; nor can the constitution or laws of any state, in any way prevent or impede the full and complete execution of every power given. The legislative power is competent to lay taxes, duties, imposts, and excises;—there is no limitation to this power, unless it be said that the clause which directs the use to which those taxes, and duties shall be applied, may be said to be a limitation: but this is no restriction of the power at all, for by this clause they are to be applied to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States; but the legislature have authority to contract debts at their discretion; they are the sole judges of what is necessary to provide for the common defence, and they only are to determine what is for the general welfare: this power therefore is neither more nor less, than a power to lay and collect taxes, imposts and excises, at their pleasure; not only the power to lay taxes unlimited, as to the amount they may require, but it is perfect and absolute to raise them in any mode they please. No state legislature, or any power in the state governments, have any more to do in carrying this into effect, than the authority of one state has to do with that of another. In the business therefore of laying and collecting taxes, the idea of confederation is totally lost, and that of one entire republic is embraced. It is proper here to remark, that the authority to lay and collect taxes is the most important of any power that can be granted; it connects with it almost all other powers, or at least will in process of time draw all other after it; it is the great mean of protection, security and defence, in a good government, and the great engine of oppression and tyranny in a bad one. This cannot fail of being the case, if we consider the contracted limits which are set by this constitution, to the late governments, on this article of raising money. No state can emit paper money—lay any duties or imposts, on imports, or exports, but by consent of the Congress; and then the net produce shall be for the benefit of the United States: the only mean therefore left, for any state to support its government and discharge its debts, is by direct taxation; and the United States have also power to lay and collect taxes, in any way they please. Every one who has thought on the subject, must be convinced that but small sums of money can be collected in any country by direct taxation, when the fœderal government begins to exercise the right of taxation in all its parts, the legislatures of the several states will find it impossible to raise monies to support their governments. Without money they cannot be supported, and they must dwindle away, and, as before observed, their powers absorbed in that of the general government.

It might be here shewn, that the power in the fœderal legislature, to raise and support armies at pleasure, as well in peace as in war, and their controul over the militia, tend, not only to a consolidation of the government, but the destruction of liberty.—I shall not, however, dwell upon these, as a few observations upon the judicial power of this government, in addition to the preceding, will fully evince the truth of the position.

The judicial power of the United States is to be vested in a supreme court, and in such inferior courts as Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The powers of these courts are very extensive; their jurisdiction comprehends all civil causes, except such as arises between citizens of the same state; and it extends to all case in law and equity arising under the constitution. One inferior court must be established, I presume, in each state, at least, with the necessary executive officers appendant thereto. It is easy to see, that in the common course of things, these courts will eclipse the dignity, and take away from the respectability of the state courts. These courts will be, in themselves, totally independent of the states, deriving their authority from the United States, and receiving from them fixed salaries; and in the course of human events it is to be expected, that they will swallow up all the powers of the courts in the respective states.

How far the clause in the 8th section of the 1st article may operate to do away all idea of confederated states, and to effect an entire consolidation of the whole into one general government, it is impossible to say. The powers given by this article are very general and comprehensive, and it may receive a construction to justify the passing almost any law. A power to make all laws, which shall be necessary and proper, for carrying into execution, all powers vested by the constitution in the government of the United States, or any department or officer thereof, is a power very comprehensive and definite, and may, for ought I know, be exercised in such manner as entirely to abolish the state legislatures. Suppose the legislature of a state should pass a law to raise money to support their government and pay the state debt, may the Congress repeal this law, because it may prevent the collection of a tax which they may think proper and necessary to lay, to provide for the general welfare of the United States? For all laws made in pursuance of this constitution, are the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby; any thing in the constitution or laws of the different states to the contrary notwithstanding.—By such a law, the government of a particular state might be overturned at one stroke, and thereby be deprived of every means of its support.

It is not meant, by stating this case, to insinuate that the constitution would warrant a law of this kind; or unnecessarily to alarm the fears of the people, by suggesting, that the fœderal legislature would be more likely to pass the limits assigned them by the constitution, than that of an individual state, further than they are less responsible to the people. But what is meant is, that the legislature of the United States are vested with the great and uncontroulable powers, of laying and collecting taxes, duties, imposts, and excises; of regulating trade, raising and supporting armies, organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia, instituting courts, and other general powers. And are by this clause invested with the power of making all laws, proper and necessary, for carrying all these into execution; and they may so exercise this power as entirely to annihilate all the state governments, and reduce this country to one single government. And if they may do it, it is pretty certain they will; for it will be found that the power retained by individual states, small as it is, will be a clog upon the wheels of the government of the United States; the latter therefore will be naturally inclined to remove it out of the way. Besides, it is a truth confirmed by the unerring experience of ages, that every man, and every body of men, invested with power, are ever disposed to encrease it, and to acquire a superiority over every thing that stands in their way. This disposition, which is implanted in human nature, will operate in the fœderal legislature to lessen and ultimately to subvert the state authority, and having such advantages, will most certainly succeed, if the fœderal government succeeds at all. It must be very evident then, that what this constitution wants of being a complete consolidation of the several parts of the union into one complete government, possessed of perfect legislative, judicial, and executive powers, to all intents and purposes, it will necessarily acquire in its exercise and operation.

Let us now proceed to enquire, as I at first proposed, whether it be best the thirteen United States should be reduced to one great republic, or not? It is here taken for granted, that all agree in this, that whatever government we adopt, it ought to be a free one; that it should be so framed as to secure the liberty of the citizens of America, and such an one as to admit of a full, fair, and equal representation of the people. The question then will be, whether a government thus constituted, and founded on such principles, is practicable, & can be exercised over the whole United States, into one reduced state?

If respect is to be paid to the opinion of the greatest and wisest men who have ever thought or wrote on the science of government, we shall be constrained to conclude, that a free republic cannot succeed over a country of such immense extent, containing such a number of inhabitants, and these encreasing in such rapid progression as that of the whole United States. Among the many illustrious authorities which might be produced to this point, I shall content myself with quoting only two. The one is the baron de Montesquieu, spirit of laws, chap. xvi. vol. 1. "It is natural to a republic to have only a small territory, otherwise it cannot long subsist. In a large republic there are men of large fortunes, and consequently of less moderation; there are trusts too great to be placed in any single subject; he has interest of his own; he soon begins to think that he may be happy, great and glorious, by oppressing his fellow-citizens; and that he may raise himself to grandeur on the ruins of his country. In a large republic, the public good is sacrificed to a thousand views; it is subordinate to exceptions, and depends on accidents. In a small one, the interest of the public is easier perceived, better understood, and more within the reach of every citizen; abuses are of less extent, and of course are less protected." Of the same opinion is the marquis Beccarari.

History furnishes no example of a free republic, any thing like the extent of the United States. The Grecian republics were of small extent; so also was that of the Romans. Both of these, it is true, in process of time, extended their conquests over large territories of country; and the consequence was, that their governments were changed from that of free governments to those of the most tyrannical that ever existed in the world.

Not only the opinion of the greatest men, and the experience of mankind, are against the idea of an extensive republic, but a variety of reasons may be drawn from the reason and nature of things, against it. In every government, the will of the sovereign is the law. In despotic governments, the supreme authority being lodged in one, his will is law, and can be as easily expressed to a large extensive territory as to a small one. In a pure democracy the people are the sovereign, and their will is declared by themselves; for this purpose they must all come together to deliberate, and decide. This kind of government cannot be exercised, therefore, over a country of any considerable extent; it must be confined to a single city, or at least limitted to such bounds as that the people can conveniently assemble, be able to debate, understand the subject submitted to them, and declare their opinion concerning it.

In a free republic, although all laws are derived from the consent of the people, yet the people do not declare their consent by themselves in person, but by representatives, chosen by them, who are supposed to know the minds of their constituents, and to be possessed of integrity to declare this mind.

In every free government, the people must give their assent to the laws by which they are governed. This is the true criterion between a free government and an arbitrary one. The former are ruled by the will of the whole, expressed in any manner they may agree upon; the latter by the will of one, or a few. If the people are to give their assent to the laws, by persons chosen and appointed by them, the manner of the choice and the number chosen, must be such, as to possess, be disposed, and consequently qualified to declare the sentiments of the people; for if they do not know, or are not disposed to speak the sentiments of the people, the people do not govern, but the sovereignty is in a few. Now, in a large extended country, it is impossible to have a representation, possessing the sentiments, and of integrity, to declare the minds of the people, without having it so numerous and unwieldy, as to be subject in a great measure to the inconveniency of a democratic government.

The territory of the United States is of vast extent; it now contains near three millions of souls, and is capable of containing much more than ten times that number. Is it practicable for a country, so large and so numerous as they will soon become, to elect a representation, that will speak their sentiments, without their becoming so numerous as to be incapable of transacting public business? It certainly is not.

In a republic, the manners, sentiments, and interests of the people should be similar. If this be not the case, there will be a constant clashing of opinions; and the representatives of one part will be continually striving against those of the other. This will retard the operations of government, and prevent such conclusions as will promote the public good. If we apply this remark to the condition of the United States, we shall be convinced that it forbids that we should be one government. The United States includes a variety of climates. The productions of the different parts of the union are very variant, and their interests, of consequence, diverse. Their manners and habits differ as much as their climates and productions; and their sentiments are by no means coincident. The laws and customs of the several states are, in many respects, very diverse, and in some opposite, each would be in favor of its own interests and customs, and, of consequence, a legislature, formed of representatives from the respective parts, would not only be too numerous to act with any care and decision, but would be composed of such heterogenous and discordant principles, as would constantly be contending with each other.

The laws cannot be executed in a republic, of an extent equal to that of the United States, with promptitude.

The magistrates in every government must be supported in the execution of the laws, either by an armed force, maintained at the public expence for that purpose; or by the people turning out to aid the magistrate upon his command, in case of resistance.

In despotic governments, as well as in all the monarchies in Europe, standing armies are kept up to execute the commands of the prince or the magistrate, and are employed for this purpose when occasion requires: But they have always proved the destruction of liberty, and is abhorrent to the spirit of a free republic. In England, where they depend upon the parliament for their annual support, they have always been complained of as oppressive and unconstitutional, and are seldom employed in executing of the laws; never except on extraordinary occasions, and then under the direction of a civil magistrate.

A free republic will never keep a standing army to execute its laws. It must depend upon the support of its citizens. But when a government is to receive its support from the aid of the citizens, it must be so constructed as to have the confidence, respect, and affection of the people. Men who, upon the call of the magistrate, offer themselves to execute the laws, are influenced to do it either by affection to the government, or from fear; where a standing army is at hand to punish offenders, every man is actuated by the latter principle, and therefore, when the magistrate calls, will obey: but, where this is not the case, the government must rest for its support upon the confidence and respect which the people have for their government and laws. The body of the people being attached, the government will always be sufficient to support and execute its laws, and to operate upon the fears of any faction which may be opposed to it, not only to prevent an opposition to the execution of the laws themselves, but also to compel the most of them to aid the magistrate; but the people will not be likely to have such confidence in their rulers, in a republic so extensive as the United States, as necessary for these purposes. The confidence which the people have in their rulers in a free republic, arises from their knowing them, from their being responsible to them for their conduct, and from the power they have of displacing them when they misbehave: but in a republic of the extent of this continent, the people in general would be acquainted with very few of their rulers: the people at large would know little of their proceedings, and it would be extremely difficult to change them.——The people in Georgia and New Hampshire would not know one another's mind, and therefore could not act in concert to enable them to effect a general change of representatives. The different parts of so extensive a country could not possibly be made acquainted with the conduct of their representatives, nor be informed of the reasons upon which measures were founded. The consequence will be, they will have no confidence in their legislature, suspect them of ambitious views, be jealous of every measure they adopt, and will not support the laws they pass. Hence the government will be nerveless and inefficient, and no way will be left to render it otherwise, but by establishing an armed force to execute the laws at the point of the bayonet—a government of all others the most to be dreaded.

In a republic of such vast extent as the United States, the legislature cannot attend to the various concerns and wants of its different parts. It cannot be sufficiently numerous to be acquainted with the local condition and wants of the different districts, and if it could, it is impossible it should have sufficient time to attend to and provide for all the variety of cases of this nature, that would be continually arising.

In so extensive a republic, the great officers of government would soon become above the controul of the people, and abuse their power to the purpose of aggrandizing themselves, and oppressing them. The trust committed to the executive officers, in a country of the extent of the United States, must be various and of magnitude. The command of all the troops and navy of the republic, the appointment of officers, the power of pardoning offences, the collecting of all the public revenues, and the power of expending them, with a number of other powers, must be lodged and exercised in every state, in the hands of a few. When these are attended with great honor and emolument, as they always will be in large states, so as greatly to interest men to pursue them, and to be proper objects for ambitious and designing men, such men will be ever restless in their pursuit after them.—They will use the power, when they have acquired it, to the purposes of gratifying their own interest and ambition, and it is scarcely possible, in a very large republic, to call them to account for their misconduct, or to prevent their abuse of power.

These are some of the reasons by which it appears, that a free republic cannot long subsist over a country of the great extent of these states. If then this new constitution is calculated to consolidate the Thirteen States into One, as it evidently is, it ought not to be adopted.

Though I am of opinion, that it is a sufficient objection to this government, to reject it, that it creates the whole union into one government, under the form of a republic, yet if this objection was obviated, there are exceptions to it, which are so material and fundamental, that they ought to determine every man, who is a friend to the liberty and happiness of mankind, not to adopt it.

THE DEATH OF ABEL!

YESTERDAY at one o'clock, died after three days sleep, without pain, Mr. Abel, the celebrated composer, whose great musical ability was an honor to the age in which he lived. If he cannot be stiled so great a man as Handel, it is because fashion had ruined music before he took up the pen! His overtures, quartetts, and other works, will, however be always in high estimation. Among those who are capable of discerning the inspiration of genius, the subjects of his movements, and the elegant combinations of his harmony, will ever be attended with admiration.

His instrumental performance was ever distinguished for its elegance and fine-feeling!—Musicians listened to him with wonder, pleasure, and astonishment; and it may be truly said, looked up to him for instruction. His powers on the Viol de Gambo, were particularly great; no person ever touched that instrument with sweeter effect or taste.

As a man, if he had a fault, it was too much generosity; and when he found the world undeserving of it, he was liable to lose his temper.

Among his patrons, their Majesties take the lead; and among his friends, Mr. Gainsborough, to whom his attachment was unexampled, and who merited all his confidence and esteem!

His last public performance was about a month since, for Mrs. Billington, at the Hanover-square Rooms. It was his opinion she had not been treated well at the Ancient Music; and therefore he came forward to assist her Concert.

June 25. Mr. Abel, who died lately, and whose excellence as a composer and performer, were equalled by few, and excelled by none, should not go to the grave with little more said of him, than that he slept three days previous to his death, for whilst there is harmony on earth, his memory must exist, and be revered. Indeed his virtues as a man entitled him to regard; but yet, justly admired as he was at his public performances, it was a few only of his intimate friends in private, who were witnesses of his most wonderful musical powers, to come at which, a bottle or two of good Burgundy before him, and his Viol de Gambo within his reach, were necessary. In that situation his friends would introduce the subject of the human passions, and Abel, not very capable of expressing in English his own sentiments, would catch up his Viol de Gambo, and tell the story of Le Fevre thereon, till he brought tears into the eyes of his hearers, and not lay it down, till he had made his friend Gainsborough dance a hornpipe upon the bottom of a pewter quart pot.

For some years past he has gone constantly to Paris to teach a Farmer-General to play on the Viol de Gambo, who always gave him his skin full of Burgundy, and 200 louis d'ors, well knowing that the former was the principal object of his journey. It was impossible that a man of his generous disposition, who had so extensive an acquaintance, and such a number of his countrymen about him, should die rich; but if he had not a guinea to give, he had a tear to drop for all the sons and daughters of Woe; and his house and table were the rendezvous of the unfortunate.

At the assizes at Gloucester was tried, before Mr. Baron Perryn, and a special jury, a cause, not only of the utmost importance to the parties, (no less a sum than 40 000l. depending upon the verdict) but also to the public at large, and particularly to the trading part of it:——

The action was brought by Mr. Charles Eddy, against Messrs. Glover and York, for the sum of 266l. being the value of the goods belonging to the plaintiff, and lost in the trow Hero, that was sunk on the 14th of March 1785, in her voyage from Gloucester to Bristol. The law laid down by the counsel was admitted by the learned Judge, that every carrier of goods by land or water, was answerable to his employer, for the safe delivery of their goods, unless their loss was occasioned by the act of God, or the King's enemies. In this case it was proved, to the satisfaction of the court, and a most crowded audience, that the loss of this trow was owing to the rapid and irresistable force of the tide, and the sudden shifting of a sand bank; and that every precaution had been taken by the master of the vessel, to prosecute his voyage in the safest and most expeditious manner; and that no human foresight could possibly have guarded against this accident. The jury, therefore, after a hearing of more than eight hours, found a verdict for the defendants; but at the same time observed, that the most light proof of negligence or carelessness, on the part of the defendants, would have been sufficient to have authorized them to give a verdict for the plaintiff.

Let the owners of vessels, and other carriers, therefore, take the utmost care whom they employ, and what vessels they make use of, as the proof of a defect in the vessel, or of one drunken sailor being on board, would have saddled the defendants with the payment of a sum, that would have been their utter ruin.

Counsel for the plaintiff, Messrs. Burton, Plummer, and Richardson; for the defendants, Messrs. Adair, Bearcroft, and Bower.

AMERICA.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 16.

Notwithstanding the many flettering addresses, which have been presented to Prince William Henry, from the several towns and places which he has visited, we can assert with truth, that the conduct of this royal lad is far from being pleasing to any of the first circles. He has rarely left a place without affronting the inhabitants in such a manner, as to leave the most unfavourable impressions of his polite character: His conduct is ridiculously boyish. Instead of that mild, noble and generous conduct which ever distinguishes the gentleman from the churl, he cultivates an imperious deportment, which discovers itself in his every action, and in all companies he deigns to grace with his royal presence —the ladies not escaping the rudeness of his manners.——O, Billy, Billy, what a pity that after all the expence wasted in your education, you should still merit the lash of correction.

Information being received on Tuesday last, of the Hon. John Langdon, Esq; being on his return from the Federal Convention, several gentlemen, possessing federal principles, expressed their approbation of his conduct, by meeting him at Greenland, congratulating him on his arrival, and escorted him into this town. The satisfaction which the real patriot feels from a consciousness of exerting his time and talents for the service of his country, infinitely exceeds all the fulsome panegyrics of sycophantish flatterers. We congratulate this worthy character on his safe arrival, and while we applaud his conduct as truly meritorious, and highly deserving of public approbation, we must not forget his worthy colleague, the Hon. Nicholas Gilman, Esq; who has taken his seat in Congress, and shall close with asserting, that the patriotism discovered by these two gentlemen can only be equalled by the approbation which the good people of this state express towards the result of that august assembly, at which they have assisted as members.

We hear from Durham, that the mills belonging to his Excellency John Sullivan, Esq; were lately set on fire, (supposed by some incendiaries) and entirely consumed.

NEW-HAVEN, September 26.

The following account of the number of the inhabitants of this city, together with the number of buildings of different kinds, is the result of an accurate enumeration, made by a number of gentlemen in this city:

Number of Souls	3364
Do. Students	176
Do. Males	1657
Do. Females	1707
Do. Families	614
Do. Houses	466
Do. Stores	103
Do. Barns and Shops	324
Total Number of Buildings	893

A large and elegant State-House and four Houses for Public Worship.

The numbers on each side 17 years are equal.

In the year 1724 there were 163 buildings of all kinds, from which we may conclude, that the number of souls and of buildings has doubled since that time in periods of about 20 years.

The number of deaths annually is about 50, which is to the whole number of souls as 1 to 70—This shews the salubrity of the climate, and the healthfulness of New-Haven in particular. Indeed, for temperature and purity of air, it is the Montpelier or Florence of America.

YALE-COLLEGE.

The first college edifice was erected here in 1717, being 170 feet in length and 22 in width, and 3 stories high. The present college edifice, which is of brick, is 100 feet long, 40 feet wide, and 3 stories high, containing 32 chambers and 64 studies, convenient for the reception of 100 students. The college chapel is built of brick, 50 by 40 with a steeple 125 feet high. In this building is a public library, consisting of 2500 volumes.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.

Extract of a letter from New-Haven, dated Octo. 19.

"Our assembly have recommended the report of the convention to the consideration of the people, but our democratics and tories conspire against any change."

Wednesday last the General Assembly elected the Honorable Thomas Mifflin, Esq; for their Speaker, and Peter Z. Lloyd, Esq; Clerk. Mr. James Martin was at the same time appointed Serjeant at Arms.

At a meeting of the freeholders and other inhabitants of the city of Williamsburg, at the Court-House of the said city, the 6th day of October, 1787.

I. Resolved, THAT it is the opinion of this meeting, that the act of the last session of Assembly, imposing new taxes, is unjust and impolitic, as it imposes an excessive tax on riding carriages, the use of which seems not to be prohibited by any moral or political reasons: as it deprives clerks of courts and lawyers of a large part of the reward of their services, which had been by law assured to them: as it lays an extraordinary burden on particular classes of men, without conferring on them any equivalent of particular privileges and immunities, and as it subjects improvements in towns to a growing tax, from which it has been thought good policy to exempt those in the country.

II. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the act imposing new taxes is rendered still more oppressive, by the act of appropriation, which directs that these taxes shall be paid in specie only.

III. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the act for reviving and continuing the act for adjusting claims for property impressed or taken for public services, and the act giving farther time to officers, soldiers, sailors and mariners, to settle their arrears of pay and depreciation with the Auditor of public accounts, ought not to be again revived, as they are the sources of numberless frauds and impositions, and defeat the operation of any system of finance calculated to discharge the certificates already issued.

IV. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the interest on all certificates, and all warrants on the Treasury, should be receivable in payment of all taxes.

V. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the obligation of all contracts, legally entered into, whether of a public or private nature, ought to be held sacred.

VI. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting, that a speedy, equal and compleat administration of justice is essential to the welfare and prosperity of every state; that courts should be so constructed, and laws so framed, as to reach all persons and every kind of property, and subject them without delay to the claims of justice.

VII. Resolved, That a committee be appointed to prepare a memorial to be presented to the next General Assembly, pursuant to the first, second, fourth and sixth resolutions, and that the said committee do consist of Mr. Andrews, Mr. Bracken, Mr. Prentis, and Mr. Beall.

VIII. Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting, that a convention ought to be appointed for the purposes of deliberating on the measures recommended by the honorable Convention lately held at Philadelphia, and that the said convention ought also to be empowered to revise and amend the constitution of this commonwealth.

Ordered That the foregoing proceedings be published in the Virginia Gazette

Teste WILLIAM RUSSELL, Clerk.

HINTS to MANUFACTURERS.

IT has been objected to my projects for manufacturing the spades and shovels, and the glass bottles, that they require too large capitals; there are, however, many branches of manufacture which are neglected merely because they require too small capitals.

A shopkeeper who lives near me, whose business is obviously too small to support his family, even with good œconomy, frequently asks his friends what business he shall do, and is really anxious to be determined. One of my acquaintance, to whom the complaint was made, answered, your wife is industrious, and is handy at the use of the needle; half your stock in trade would make you a capital glover, and you may attend your shop with the other half at the same time: But the business is too small. The manufacturing the gloves which are sold in this town, would maintain any shopkeeper's family.

I designed this remark only as introductory to another.

We send bristles and wood to Europe, to have them made into brushes. We import not only tooth and buckle brushes, but the hearth, the white washing and the floor brushes, including the very handles. It is only a moderate calculation, that we could make all the larger brushes for the expences of importing them only, exclusive of any first cost.

At a time when the joiners are almost out of employment, any one of them might find employment in making only our larger brushes.

Bristles have sometimes been so scarce, that when a particular kind of brush has been wanted, imported brushes have been purchased to take to pieces to obtain the bristles in a different form. It is not surprising that bristles are scarce, when we have no use for them; but let any person purchase all that are brought, and enough will come. But the business is too small!

A FAVOURITE AIR.

BY moon light on the green,
  Where lads and lasses stray,
How sweet the blossom'd bean!
  How sweet the new-made hay!
But not to me so sweet
  The blossoms on the thorn,
As when my lad I meet,
  More fresh than May-day morn.
    Give me the lad sa' blith and gay,
      Give me the tartan plaiddy;
    For spite of all the wife can say,
      I'll wed my Highland Laddie.
      My bonny Highland Laddie.

His skin is white as snow,
  His een are bonny blue,
Like rose-bud sweet his mow,
  When wet with morning dew:
Young Will is rich and great,
  And fain would ca' me his,
But what is pride or state,
  Without love's smiling bliss?
          Give me the lad, &c.

When first he talk'd of love,
  He look'd sae blith and gay,
His flame I did approve,
  And could na say him nay:
Then to the kirk I'll haste,
  There prove my love and truth;
Reward a love sae chaste,
  And wed the constant youth.
          Give me the lad, &c.

A BURLESQUE on GENEALOGY.

[Translated from the FRENCH.]

TWO men disputing one day upon their genealogy, each of them pretended to be better than the other. You cannot, says one, compare yourself to me, who am of a thousand times better house than you.—You! said the other, had your father, like mine, the first post of the city?—The first post of the city! replied the first, was he governor?—No.—Was he judge?—No; not that yet.—What was he then? continued the first.—Gate-keeper, replied the second, is not that the first post of the city?—Yes, said the other, but mine preceded the first men of the province; he went before the dukes and peers, and before the marshals of France.—In virtue of what office?—In virtue of his post, replied the other.—What was then that post? said he.—He was a postillion, said the other. If my father had taken care, he should have been rich, but he was a fool. I grant that to be true, said the other, and I see clearly that his office is hereditary. My father prevented that, added the son of the postillion, for before he was postillion he was a man of letters. What call you a man of letters? replied the son of the gate-keeper; was he judge-advocate or counsellor? None of all those, said the postillion, he was runner to the post-office; call you not that a man of letters? True, said the gate-keeper, but that does not prove the antiquity of your family; whereas I can trace mine farther back than five hundred years. And I mine, replied the other, more than eight hundred. That is nothing, answered the gate-keeper, I can prove my family to have existed before the Deluge. And I mine from Adam, said the postillion. And I mine before Adam, said the gate-keeper. You are in the right, replied the other, the proof is very easy; for before Adam there were no animals but brutes, and it is very certain that you are descended from them.

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be exposed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thursday the 29th of November next at the Court-House in Harford county, state of Maryland,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 919 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

Those who wish to view the land, on application to Mess. Ashton and Waters, the present tenants, will be shewn it. Possession will be given the 1st of January, if required. The title good and free of all incumbrances. The terms will be easy to the purchaser, and will be made known on the day of sale, by Wm. WEST.

For the PENNSYLVANIA PACKET.

THE depreciation of our Paper Money has been ſo conſiderable of late, that many have apprehended its value would continue to leſſen, and have been eager to part with it at any rate. I muſt confeſs, I have entertained the ſame apprehenſions; but the enquiries which I have lately made, have fully ſatisfied me, that this currency muſt ſoon appreciate, becauſe the demand for it will increaſe, and the quantity in circulation will certainly be leſſened. I have therefore locked up my paper money, though it is with difficulty I can forego the uſe of it; and I think it my duty to communicate to others the knowledge I have acquired, that they may not be driven by the preſent panic (perhaps artfully created) to ſacrifice their property, through ignorance of its value.

I infer that the demand will increaſe from the following circumſtances:—

Firſt.—I am informed that agreeably to the directions of Council writs have been iſſued to compel the immediate payment of the principal and intereſt of large ſums of money borrowed from the public before the war. Many of the eſtates mortgaged for theſe ſums, from the accumulation of the debt, and other cauſes, muſt neceſſarily be ſold, and this paper money will be received in payment for them.

Second.—I underſtand that large ſums are due on the loan of 1785, and that the truſtees of the new loan office alſo have proceeded againſt the delinquents. There will be nearly one fourth of all the money loaned, due on the 1ſt of November next; and if this is not paid off, the lands mortgaged will be ſold in the courſe of this fall for paper money. This will bring in a few weeks, people from all parts of the ſtate to this city, (which ſeems to have drawn all this money within its vortex) and their demand will greatly contribute to appreciate it.

Third.—The taxes during the laſt year, were but feebly collected in many of the back counties. This was owing, it is ſaid, to the badneſs of the crops, to the high-handed riots in York county, and to the falſe tenderneſs of collectors. But this year the crops have been every where abundant, the rioters in York county have been puniſhed, and obliged ſet an example of ſubmiſſion to government, and the collectors, by ſuits which have been brought againſt them, are compelled to do their duty.—— The collection of taxes will, therefore, be conſiderable during the remainder of the year. The Aſſembly might greatly accelerate this collection, by directing that all arrearages after the preſent year, ſhould be paid in ſpecie.

Fourth.—Conſiderable ſums are due for the exciſe; and I perceive that the collector in this county has advertiſed that he will immediately proceed againſt thoſe who neglect payment.

Fifth.—The arrival of the fall veſſels, the duties on goods already arrived, and arrears due at the Cuſtom-houſe form another, and no inconſiderable ſource of the approaching demand for paper money; eſpecially as the treaſury orders which uſed to be bought up for theſe payments, have been almoſt wholly abſorbed by them.

Sixth.—While theſe great funds are operating with energy, the fees of the Surveyor General, of the Secretary of the Land Office, of the Receiver General, of the Secretary of Council, and the tax upon legal writs, being all payable in this currency, will contribute to increaſe the demand, eſpecially at this ſeaſon, when the country people generally come down to do buſineſs at the Land-Office.

But there is reaſon to believe, that the quantity in circulation, will alſo be conſiderably leſſened:

Firſt.—The ſum of 20,000l. will certainly be burnt as by law directed, before the preſent ſeſſion of the Aſſembly is over. All payments, it is ſaid, will be poſtponed to this neceſſary meaſure; and if the whole ſum ſhould not be in the Treaſury, it is expected that ſteps will be taken to procure it.

Second.—People who have this money on hand, and are not driven by their neceſſities or their fears to part with it, chuſe to keep it while its current value is ſo low, and thus withdraw large ſums from circulation.

Third.—It is ſuppoſed, and ſincerely hoped, that the General Aſſembly before they riſe, will take meaſures either to prevent the re-emiſſion of this money, or at leaſt to deſtroy an additional ſum beyond the 20,000l. This latter might conveniently be done, by keeping the money received in the Loan-Offices for this purpoſe, it not being appropriated to any ſpecial uſe, except that of being loaned again. This in the courſe of the preſent year, would reduce the ſum to leſs than 100 000l.

From this view of things, it is certain that our paper money cannot long remain at its preſent depreciated ſtate. Every bill will certainly be redeemed, and that very ſoon, at its full value. At the ſame time, it muſt be acknowledged, that an imperfection is interwoven with all our ſyſtems of paper money, which renders it a very improper medium of trade. Its fluctuations cannot be prevented, and theſe do infinite miſchief. They engender controverſies, embitter men's minds againſt each other, give birth to ſpeculation and fraud, defeat the proſpects of honeſt induſtry, and deſtroy that idea of ſecurity of property, in which a great part of the happineſs of civil ſociety conſiſts. The ſooner, therefore, that the ſtate can be honeſtly rid of it, the better.

The information which I have received, and ſtated in as plain a manner as poſſible, has freed me from any further diſtreſſing apprehenſions about the fate of my paper money. I ſhall be happy if this communication ſhall have the ſame effect upon the minds of others, and prevent them from being impoſed upon or deceived in the value of theſe bills of credit. It is certain it is the intereſt of many to excite and ſpread theſe groundleſs terrors which have been prevalent among us. When the Indians would take the deer, they place a party of the hunters on one ſide of the foreſt, and then raiſe outcries and alarms on the other: The deer, panic-ſtruck, ſtart from their coverts, and precipitate themſelves into the ſnare that is laid for them.

This is an emblem of modern ſpeculation!

GUSTAVUS.

Philadelphia, Oct. 22, 1787.

THE preſent is univerſally acknowledged to be a moſt momentous era, as likely to decide the fate of a world for future ages. This conſideration renders it the duty of every individual to ſubmit to the conſideration of his fellow citizens whatever he may deem calculated to elucidate the grand ſubject in general diſcuſſion.

The oppoſition to the new conſtitution is ſaid to be made by intereſted men. This aſſertion is true only in part. It is probable, indeed, the moſt violent, the moſt active, and the moſt voluminous writers againſt the propoſed ſyſtem are generally influenced by ſiniſter and perſonal conſiderations. But there are many perſons, whoſe apprehenſions have been excited by the Centinels, the Old Whigs, the Democratic Federaliſts, and the Catos, and whoſe oppoſition is patriotic and diſintereſted, as they are fearful for the liberty of poſterity, and anxious to prevent future encroachments of Congreſs. To ſatisfy the minds of thoſe people, I venture, but with great diffidence, to propoſe a plan, which may poſſibly remove great part of the preſent oppoſition.

Let a meeting of the citizens be called, and a proper committee appointed to frame a bill of rights, for ſecuring the liberty of the preſs, and all other rights which the ſtates hold ſacred. Let this bill of rights be tranſmitted to the ſeveral ſtate conventions, to be taken into conſideration with the new conſtitution. Little doubt need be entertained but that it would be univerſally agreed to.

This meaſure, if adopted, would draw a line of diſtinction between the deteſtable few who would ſacrifice the intereſt and happineſs of not only the preſent, but diſtant generations to their own emolument, and thoſe who oppoſe the new ſyſtem from a patriotic, but perhaps miſtaken, dread of danger. The former would be left deſtitute of the vain covering under which they ſhelter their want of virtue and public ſpirit:——and the latter would become zealous federaliſts.

To the friends of the propoſed conſtitution, I beg leave to obſerve, that this meaſure cannot poſſibly retard or affect the ſucceſs of a plan which has juſtly met with their admiration. Even admitting that no ſuch precaution is really neceſſary, would it not be adviſeable to indulge the honeſt prejudices of many of their fellow citizens? This much, at leaſt, may be ſaid in favor of my plan, that even if it does no good, it can do no poſſible injury.

I ſubmit it to the candour of the oppoſers of the new conſtitution, whether it would not be better to unite in this or ſome ſimilar plan, than to attempt to defeat the wiſhes and deſires of the continent for an efficient form of government, which is confeſſedly all that is neceſſary to reſtore America to her loſt ſplendor, conſequence, credit and happineſs?

Should this hint be attended to, and produce the good effect I hope for, I ſhall eſteem it the moſt fortunate idea that ever occurred to

Your humble ſervant,

M. C.

LONDON, Auguſt 28.

YESTERDAY a court of directors was held at the Eaſt-India Houſe, Leadenhall-ſtreet, at which captain Fiott, late captain of the Hartwell Eaſt-Indiaman, which was loſt near Bona-Viſta, attended to lay his journal before the court, when after an examination of the ſeveral circumſtances which attended her loſs, it appeared to have been wholly owing to the mutinous behaviour of the crew, who ſeemed to have formed the deſign of murdering the officers, and running away with the ſhip, on which the ſame was ordered to be entered upon the journals, accompanied with a reſolution of the court of directors to lay the ſtate of the caſe before his majeſty's miniſters, entreating their aſſiſtance towards forming a code of regulation for the future well-governing the crews on board their ſhips, in order to be laid before parliament for their ſanction, as early as poſſible in the next ſeſſion.

By the Hartwell's being loſt, the company loſe 80,000l. the ſhip's value was 25,000l. and the private trade 25,000l. Total loſs 130,000l.

Bona-Viſta—off which the Hartwell ſtruck, contains near three thouſand inhabitants—it is but poorly cultivated, and very indifferently ſupplied with water—ſixty of the Hartwell's crew, among whom, we underſtand, is the brother of a nobleman, were left on the iſland.—The India Company have humanely given proper directions for relieving theſe unhappy men from their diſagreeable ſituation—a veſſel is fitting out for that purpoſe—and there are great hopes entertained, that by employing ſkilful divers moſt part of the treaſure may yet be ſaved—The cargo of this ſhip has been much exaggerated—the dollars on board, ten thouſand pounds worth of which were private property, did not amount in the whole to more than the value of eighty thouſand pounds.

On Tueſday laſt, ſoon after the races at Preſton, in Lancaſhire, one of the ſtands well with above 200 people upon it, fifty of whom at leaſt had their limbs broken, and are otherwiſe much bruiſed, but we do not hear of any one being killed, though the recovery of ſeveral is very doubtful. The craſh of the ſtand, and the cries and groans of men, women, and children, was dreadful to the ſurrounding people. The earl of Derby, with that humanity which ever diſtinguiſhed his character, ordered every poſſible aſſiſtance to be adminiſtered to the ſufferers, and gave directions for the medical gentlemen of the town to attend all the wounded, whoſe profeſſional ſkill his lordſhip generouſly paid for out of his own purſe.

A letter from Seaford, in Suſſex, ſays, that by the number of pieces of wrecks and other things that have been thrown on the ſands on that coaſt, a great deal of damage muſt have been done by the tempeſtuous weather. Some of the veſſels loſt are ſuppoſed to be French and Dutch, by ſeveaal ankers of brandy and kegs of geneva being thrown on the ſands.

The laſt accounts from Algiers ſay, that the ravages of the plague are dreadful beyond imagination, the contagion having ſpread to all the towns and villages within a conſiderable diſtance of that capital. The letters add, that to aggravate the miſeries of the people, agriculture is almoſt entirely ſuſpended, and that they have before them only the proſpect of falling victims either to the dreadful diſtemper by which the country is afflicted, or to a general famine.

On a report of the ſecretary for foreign affairs, to whom were referred two letters from the Hon. John Adams, of the 24th and 27th of January laſt:

Reſolved, That the Hon. John Adams, the miniſter plenipotentiary of the United States, at the court of London, be permitted, agreeably to his requeſt, to return to America at any time after the 24th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1788, and that his commiſſion of miniſter plenipotentiary to their High Mightineſſes do alſo then determine.

Reſolved, That Congreſs entertain a high ſenſe of the ſervices which Mr. Adams has rendered to the United States, in the execution of the various important truſts which they have from time to time committed to him, and that the thanks of Congreſs be preſented to him for the patriotiſm, perſeverance, integrity and diligence with which he has ably and faithfully ſerved his country.

On the report of a committee, conſiſting of Mr. Dane, Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Kean, Mr. Irwine and Mr. Carrington, to whom were referred a report of the ſecretary at war, and ſundry papers relative to Indian affairs in the northern department:

Reſolved, That a general treaty be held with the tribes of Indians within the limits of the United States, inhabiting the country north-weſt of the Ohio, and about Lake Erie, as ſoon after the firſt of April next as conveniently may be, and at ſuch place and at ſuch particular time, as the governor of the weſtern territory ſhall appoint, for the purpoſes of knowing the cauſes of uneaſineſs among the ſaid tribes, and hearing their complaints; of regulating trade, and amicably ſettling all affairs concerning lands and boundaries between them and the United States.

That the ſaid governor of the weſtern territory hold the ſaid treaty agreeably to ſuch inſtructions as ſhall be given him for that purpoſe.

A London newſpaper of the 28th of Auguſt contains an extract of a letter from Londonderry, of the 7th of the ſame month, which adviſes, that the ſub-commiſſioners had condemned an American veſſel, called the Diſpatch, taken off Iniſhowen-Head, which it appeared was endeavouring to run her cargo—and that an appeal for both veſſel and cargo was intended.

Thurſday morning, a poor woman, in Crown-ſtreet, near Race-ſtreet, put an end to her exiſtence, by hanging herſelf with a rope, at her own dwelling, and in the preſence of two of her ſmall children, who ſeeing their mother about the horrid act, began to cry: this brought in one of the neighbours, who, inſtead of cutting the rope and relieving the unhappy woman, ran off for the coroner, and in the mean time the miſerable wretch periſhed.—It is ſaid that matrimonial infelicity was the cauſe of this cataſtrophe.—Many ignorant people have an idea that the coroner only has a right to interfere in the caſes of dead or dying bodies, and thus for want of timely aſſiſtance many lives have been loſt.

At a meeting of ſundry reſpectable inhabitants of the county of Northampton, held at Bethlehem, Oct. 22, 1787, to agree upon the nomination of perſons, to be returned, to ſerve in the ſtate convention, as appointed by the honorable Houſe of Aſſembly; and to ſupport ſuch nomination at the election for that purpoſe.

PETER RHOADS, Eſq; was unanimouſly choſen Chairman.

THE buſineſs of the meeting was opened by the chairman, and the Conſtitution of the United States, as formed by the late Convention, being read, the following reſolutions were unanimouſly entered into:

Reſolved, That this meeting do moſt warmly and cordially approve of the ſaid Conſtitution, and that they eſteem it the only ſalvation of this country, on which the exiſtence of the United States of America, as a people, depends.

Reſolved, That this meeting entertain the higheſt ſenſe of the public virtue and patriotiſm of the majority of the Houſe of Aſſembly, in calling immediately a convention of this ſtate, in purſuance of the recommendation of the Federal Convention.

Reſolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the withdrawing or abſenting of any member of Aſſembly, who was ſworn to ſerve his country to the beſt of his abilities, tends to ſubvert all order and the fundamental principles of good government, and eſtabliſhes precedents of ariſtocratic powers, for a minority, to defeat the proceedings of a majority.

Reſolved, That this meeting nominate four perſons, propoſed by a committee appointed for that purpoſe, as candidates to ſerve in the ſaid ſtate convention, and that each perſon preſent engages to ſupport this ticket at the enſuing election, and as much as in him lieth, to prevent all fraud and deceit at the ſaid election.

Reſolved, That each of the candidates nominated as aforeſaid do make public declaration before this meeting, that if it ſhould be his lot to be elected as member of the ſaid convention, he will uſe his utmoſt endeavours, that the ſaid conſtitution be ratified.

And the ſaid four candidates accordingly ſeverally made the ſaid declaration before this meeting.

Reſolved, that the chairman ſign theſe reſolves, and that the ſame be printed and publiſhed.

PETER RHOADS, Chairman.

From the BOSTON GAZETTE.

CONSTANTLY I go to meeting,
When I'm able to appear;
Not to ſpend the time in ſleeping,
But the ſacred word to hear.

When the parſon's voice is ſounding,
If he preaches, reads or prays,
I ſtand or ſit like others round him,
And attend to what he ſays.

When ſome lines to ſing are mention'd,
And the prieſt has read them through;
Then I turn my warm attention
To the riſing ſinging few.

If each part does its proportion,
And the tune and words agree,
Then my heart is all in motion,
Raviſh'd with the harmony.

Some there be of ſtrange perſuaſions;
And they make this crude pretence,
That lively tunes on ſad occaſions
Don't agree with common ſenſe.

Give ſuch perſons information,
Tell them of the diff'rent airs,
'Tis not quick or ſlow vibration
That muſt guide in thoſe affairs.

If the tune moves ſomething briſkly,
And the words are grave and ſad,
Then ſome people judge directly
That the ſingers all are mad.

'Tis not ſaid they never miſs it,
For perfection is not theirs:
But the man who does but gueſs it,
He perhaps as often errs.

Let ſuch perſons know for ever,
If the tune's on a flat key,
Though the notes are ſemi-quavers,
They with ſolemn words agree.

If the tune be ſharp and cheerful,
And the words expreſs no joy;
Then the ſingers are not careful,
Though 'tis ſlow as old Savoy.

I'll appeal to § Knap or Billings,
To defend what I aſſert;
And I'll venture twenty ſhillings
They'll not fail to take my part.

Read their ſev'ral books of muſic,
Study well their different keys;
Read more authors (if you chuſe it)
Then determine as you pleaſe. C. F.

§ Authors of Muſic.

An old Portugueſe ANECDOTE.

PEDRO the firſt, the eighth king of Portugal, diſtinguiſhed his reign by a ſteady and impartial adminiſtration of juſtice, by which he rendered his people no leſs happy than himſelf. The following inſtance of his equity and inflexibility is very remarkable.

An Eccleſiaſtic, in a high fit of paſſion, killed a maſon whom he had employed, for not executing ſomething agreeable to his mind. The King diſſembled his knowledge of the crime, and left it to the cognizance of the proper courts, where the iſſue of the buſineſs was, that the Prieſt was ſuſpended from ſaying maſs for a year. At this ſlight puniſhment the family of the deceaſed was highly offended. The King cauſed it to be hinted to the Maſon's ſon, that he ſhould kill the Prieſt: he did ſo, and falling into the hands of juſtice, was condemned to ſuffer death; but as no capital ſentence could be executed without the King's conſent, this was laid before him among the reſt: upon which he aſked, "what was the young man's trade?" It was anſwered, "that he followed his father's:" "I ſhall commute this puniſhment, by reſtraining him from meddling with ſtone and mortar for twelvemonth." After this affair he puniſhed capital crimes in the clergy with death; and when they deſired that his Majeſty would be pleaſed to refer their cauſes to a ſuperior tribunal, he anſwered very calmly, "this is which I mean to do, for I ſend them to the higheſt of all tribunals, to that of their Maker and mine!"

Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, July 7.

An account of Three Volcanos in the Moon, by William Herschel, L. L. D. F. R. S. Read before the Royal Society.

IT will be necessary to say a few words by way of introduction to the account I have to give of some appearances upon the moon, which I perceived the 19th and 20th of April last. The phœnomena of nature, especially those that fall under the inspection of the astronomer, are to be viewed, not only with the usual attention to facts as they recur, but with the eye of reason and experience. In this we are, however, not allowed to depart from plain appearances; though their origin and signification should be indicated by the most characterizing features. Thus when we see on the surface of the moon, a great number of elevations, from half a mile to a mile and an half in height, we are strictly intitled to call them mountains; but when we tend to their particular shape, in which many of them resemble the craters of volcanos, and thence argue, that they owe their origin to the same cause which has modelled many of those, we may be said to see by analogy, or with the eye of reason. Now, in this latter case, though it may be convenient, in speaking of pœnomena, to use expressions that can only be justified by reasoning on the facts themselves, it will certainly be the safest way not to neglect a full description of them, that it may appear to others how far we have been authorised to use the mental eye. This being premised, I may safely proceed to give my observations.

"April 19, 1787, 10h. 36m. sidereal time.

"I perceived three volcanos in different places of the dark part of the new moon. Two of them are either nearly extinct, or otherwise in a state of going to break out; which may perhaps be decided next lunation. The third shews an actual eruption of fire, or luminous matter. I measured the distance of the crater from the northern limb of the moon, and found it 3 deg. 57 min. 3 sec. Its light is much brighter than the nucleus of the comet which M. Meshain discovered at Paris the 10th of this month.

"April 20, 1787, 10h. 2m. sidereal time.

"The volcano burns with greater violence than last night. I believe its diameter cannot be less than 3m. by comparing with that of the Georgian planet. As Jupiter was near at hand, I turned the talescope to his satelite, and estimated the diameter of the burning part of the volcano to be equal to at least twice that of the satelite. Hence we may compute that the shining or burning matter must be above three miles in diameter. It is of an irregular round figure, and very sharply defined on the edges. The other two volcanos are much farther towards the center of the moon, and resemble large pretty faint nebulæ that are gradually much brighter in the middle; but no well defined luminous spot can be discerned in them. These three spots are plainly to be distinguished from the rest of the marks of the moon; for the reflection of the sun's rays from the earth is, in its present situation, sufficiently bright, with a 10 feet reflector, to show the moon's spots, even the darkest of them; nor did I perceive any similar phœnomena last lunation, though I then viewed the same places with the same instrument.

"The appearance of what I have called the actual fire or eruption of a volcano, exactly resembled a small piece of burning charcoal, when it is covered with a very thin coat of white ashes, which frequently adhere to it when it has been some time ignited; and it had a degree of brightness, about as strong, with which such a coal would be seen to glow in faint day-light.

"All the adjacent parts of the volcanic mountain seemed to be faintly illuminated by the eruption, and were gradually more obscure as they lay at a greater distance from the crater.

"This eruption resembled much that which I saw on the 4th of May, 1783; an account of which, with many remarkable particulars relating to the volcanic mountains in the moon, I shall take an opportunity of communicating to this society. It differed, however, considerably, in magnitude and brightness; for the volcano of the year 1783, tho' much brighter than that which is now burning, was not nearly so large in the dimensions of its eruption: the former seen in the talescope resembled a star of the fourth magnitude as it appears to the natural eye; this, on the contrary, shews a visible disk of luminous matter, very different from the sparkling brightness of star-light.

WILLIAM HERSCHEL."

DUBLIN, August 18.

ON Wednesday, the officers of the several corps encamped at Rathmines, gave an elegant entertainment to a number of Gentlemen Volunteers—among whom were Sir Edward Newenham, Major Edwards, and Captain Baker. His Excellency Lord Charlemont was invited, but obliged to send an apology. Col. Tandy was in the chair, when the following, among other loyal and patriotic toasts were drank:—

The Constitution—may we always have arms to defend, and spirit to support it.

The King and Royal Family.

The Prince of Wales.

The Volunteers of Ireland, and may they always prove a terror to her foes—foreign and domestic.

General Lord Charlemont.

Adjutant General Smyth.

The Majesty of the People.

Public Justice to those, who would barter the Rights of the People to aggrandize themselves.

Ireland, and her Rights.

Poverty and a broken Constitution to those who invade them.

Cæsar's fate to the first man who proposes a Union between this Country and Great Britain.

A speedy Reform to a corrupt Parliament.

Lord Mountgarret and the Traversers at Kilkenny, and success to them.

May Titles and Honors become the Reward of Virtue, and not as they are in the present days—the Wages of Prostitution.

May the Servants of the People never be suffered to become their masters.

May the Friends of the Constitution triumph over the Aristocracy.

General Washington and his Fellow-labourers in the Field, who emancipated their Country from the assumed Power of a British Parliament.

The Memory of those Heroes, who fell in defence of the Liberties of America.

May the Fate of America be a Lesson to Ministers how they sport with the Privileges of a Free People.

May Corruption cease to be the Measures of our Rulers.

May the dread of a foreign Enemy never make us forget the Justice we owe the Invaders of our Rights.

A lock'd Jaw, with the full use of their Reason, to those Members of Parliament who prefer the smiles of a Court to the service of the Public.

Union to the Friends of Freedom.

The Punishment of Prometheus to those who would tax the Industry of the Poor and Needy, to support an unconstitutional Police.

May Irishmen, like Americans, preserve the Constitution of their Country, or perish in the Ruins.

May our Cannon proclaim the Voice of the People, when a besotted Minister shall refuse to do Justice to their Complaints.

A speedy extinction of Parties, by a reformation of the Castle Hacks, to the Principles of Truth and Liberty.

AMERICA.

BOSTON, October 22.

The SPEECH of his Excellency the GOVERNOR, to both branches of the Legislature convened in the representatives chamber, on Thursday last.

Gentlemen of the senate, and
Gentlemen of the house of representatives,

I HAVE directed the secretary to lay before you several letters which I have received in the recess of the court; among them you will observe a letter from his excellency the governor of New-York, wherein he expresses his apprehension of a wicked combination entered into by a number of persons, with an intention to deprive this commonwealth, & that state, of the lands which have been lately the subject of a compact between them. I need not enlarge upon this subject, as it will appear to you that the pretensions of these people are rather an insult upon this government, than an apology for their conduct. I have no doubt of your immediate attention to a subject, by which the interest and honour of the commonwealth are so much affected.

The general convention having completed the business of their appointment, and having reported to Congress, "a constitution for the United States of America," I have received the same from that honourable body, and have directed the secretary to lay it, together with the letter accompanying it, before the legislature, that measures may be adopted for calling a convention in this commonwealth, to take the same into consideration. It not being within the duties of my office to decide upon this momentous affair, I shall only say, that the characters of the gentlemen who have compiled this system, are so truly respectable, and the object of their deliberations so vastly important, that I conceive every mark of attention will be paid to the report. Their unanimity on deciding those questions wherein the general prosperity of the nation is so deeply involved, and the complicated rights of each separate state are so intimately concerned, is very remarkable; and I persuade myself that the delegates of this state when assembled in convention, will be able to discern that, which will tend to the future happiness and security of all the people in this extensive country.

By a resolve of the legislature of the thirteenth of June last, the governor was requested to raise a body of troops, of not less than five hundred, nor more than eight hundred men, as the public exigency, in his opinion, should require, to be stationed in the counties of Hampshire and Berkshire, and to be continued in service for the space of six months, unless sooner discharged, in the whole, or in part, by the governor with advice of council. In pursuance of that resolve, I issued orders for raising five hundred men, rank and file, and appointed lieutenant colonel Lyman to the command of them. But the recruits never amounted to more than two hundred and fifty; which were, as the event shews, fully adequate to the business for which they were raised.

Soon after the general court were adjourned, the intelligence from those counties indicated a military force to be unnecessary; but as you had, by your act of the twenty-ninth of June, requested me to write to the governors of other states, for leave to march troops into their territories, if it should be found necessary to pursue any number of men collected there, for the purpose of annoying this commonwealth, there would have been an impropriety in disbanding the troops immediately upon writing letters in consequence of that request, they were therefore continued in service until the thirteenth of September, when, by the unanimous advice of the council, I gave orders for disbanding them.

But as some persons, who were under charge for taking an active part in the late commotions, were confined in the jail of the county of Berkshire, with advice of council, I gave orders to major-general Patterson to afford such guard to the prison, by drafts from the militia, as the sheriff of that county should find to be necessary.

I have the pleasure to congratulate you, gentlemen, on the return of peace and good order thus far; and while I sincerely lament those insurrections, which have greatly injured the interest and character of our country, I am persuaded you will join with me in the sentiment, that this unhappy occurrence cannot be considered as a certain mark of the indisposition of the people to good order and government. Similar insurrections are found in the history of all countries; and although in this state, where no tax can be levied, or law made, but by the consent of the immediate representatives of the people, and where every grievance can be redressed in a constitutional way, they are inexcusable; yet from my knowledge of the great degree of intelligence, which our fellow citizens at large possess, I am obliged to believe, that a sense of their own reputation, and the regard they have to their own interest and happiness, will produce a due subordination to government, and a regular obedience to the laws, without a further application of military force.

The legislature having, by their act of the thirteenth of June, indemnified from criminal prosecution all the persons concerned in the late commotions, excepting those convicted of crimes, and nine others specially named in the act; the supreme executive, on similar sentiments, conceived that a pardon to Jason Parmenter, Henry M'Cullock, Henry Gale, and Job Shattuck, who were then under sentence of death for treason, might be granted consistently with the dignity and safety of the government, and that such a measure would have a tendency to restore the public tranquility, to conciliate the affections of the people, and to establish peace in the state. Accordingly, by and with the advice of council, on the thirteenth day of September, I sealed a pardon for those persons.

As a tax in the course of the year will become necessary, an attention to the mode of taxation may tend to the peace as well as to the prosperity of the commonwealth. While we were a part of the British empire we necessarily acquired a habit of fixing our attention upon taxes levied from polls and estates to supply the treasury. This we were then, from the peculiarity of our situation, compelled to: but I earnestly recommend it to your consideration, whether, that as the wealth and power of the state must depend upon the cultivaion of the soil, and the encouragement of useful arts, it has not become our duty to lessen as far as we possibly can, the taxes upon polls and estates, and to raise the necessary supplies, in a great measure, by imposts on foreign goods—by excises on luxuries imported—and by taxes on those superfluities which can never be an advantage to the community, unless it be by producing funds to support the public burdens.

In consequence of an act, made in October, 1786, a mint has been erected for coining cents; and a very considerable quantity of copper coin will soon be ready for circulation. I wish your attention to the subject, and that a law may be made to prevent the daily frauds and impositions arising from the circulation of foreign copper coin in this commonwealth.

I have not gone minutely into all the communications which are necessary to be made, but shall by particular messages make such as may be for the public interest; and shall be very ready to unite with you in all measures tending to a proper regulation of our finances, the promoting of virtue and knowledge, to the establishing of good order and government, securing the liberties and increasing the happiness of the United States in general, and those of this commonwealth in particular.

JOHN HANCOCK.

Council Chamber, October 17th, 1787.

Saturday last, the senate, after mature deliberation, passed a resolve, conformable to the recommendation of Congress—for calling a convention, to meet at the representative chamber, on the 2d Wednesday in December next; and sent it down for concurrence.—The house have postponed the consideration of it till Wednesday next.

BENNINGTON, October 15.

Extract of a letter from Hartford, dated September, 1787.

"Complaints have lately prevailed of ginsang arriving at the East-Indies in a ruined state. This evil if not remedied may injure America in this important article of remittance. As I entertain a high esteem for your respectable state, I will offer my advice, the result of experience, in order to render this produce not only profitable, but lucrative to Vermont. Should the matter be neglected, and the article continue to be badly cured, it will meet the condemnation of the Chinese mandarins.

"The merchants in many instances advertise, that they want to purchase ginsang, but it must look of a yellow colour. This is a mistake, as it may look yellow and yet be very poor.

"The question is, when it should be collected and how it should be collected.

"It ought to be collected in the driest days of October, and should have no connexion with the heat of the sun or fire, or be washed.

"Ginsang is an aromatic and its virtues are easily evaporated, after it comes out of the ground, if improperly used. I have seen the Indians laugh at the folly of the white people, when they have seen them in the brooks washing their ginsang. The reason why they wash it is to make it look of a yellow colour, but the virtues of the root so strongly impregnate the water that it may be tasted many rods distant. After washing the root, people generally expose it to the sun or fire, which scalds the skin, and when it feels dry it is packed up; but the watery particles left within, soon occasion it to sweat, mould and spoil.

"The root immediately after it comes out of the ground should be spread on boards, under a shelter where the wind can blow freely, and when dry the dust can be brushed off. When one barrel is put up so, it will fetch more than fifty barrels the other way.

NEW-YORK, October 23.

Extracts from

THE JOURNAL OF CONGRESS.

MONDAY, October 1.

ON a report of the board of treasury, to whom was recommitted their report on the memorial of Arnold Henry Dohrman:—

Resolved, That Arnold Henry Dohrman be reimbursed the sum of five thousand eight hundred and six dollars, and seventy-two ninetieths of a dollar, with interest on the same from the time of expenditure, being the amount of sundry disbursements by him made for the relief of American prisoners, agreeably to vouchers examined and admitted by the proper officers of the treasury.

And whereas the claims of the said Arnold Henry Dohrman against the United States, amount to twenty thousand two hundred and seventy-seven dollars, and forty ninetieths, over and above the sum of five thousand eight hundred and six dollars, and seventy-two ninetieths, as above stated, in support of which, various and important documents are offered, though of a nature too general to be admitted agreeably to the rules of the treasury: And whereas this deficiency of vouchers appears to a rise from the nature of the disbursements made by Mr. Dohrman, whose own house was frequently the asylum of whole crews of captive American seamen, who were fed, cloathed, and relieved in sickness through his benevolence, and that at a time when his attachment to the cause of America was dangerous both to his person and property: And whereas Congress are disposed to acknowledge in the most honorable manner, the eminent services rendered by Mr. Dohrman, and to make him further compensation,

Resolved unanimously, That the said Arnold Henry Dorhman, be allowed in consideration of his faithful and generous services, as agent from the United States at the Court of Lisbon, the sum of sixteen hundred dollars per annum, and that the said salary be computed from the period at which his expenditures commenced to the present day.

Resolved unanimously, That one compleat and entire township, subject to the reservations as in the other townships agreably to the ordinance of the twentieth of May, 1785, out of the three last ranges surveyed in the western territory of the United States, be and hereby is granted to the said Arnold Henry Dohrman, free from all charges of survey, and that the said Arnold Henry Dohrman be allowed to make choice of the aforesaid township of land, out of any of the said three ranges last surveyed, after the secretary at war shall have drawn for the proportionate quantity of land assigned to the late army, agreeably to the said ordinance of the 20th May, 1785.

Resolved unanimously, That the above payments be made in such manner, as the present state of the finances will best admit of; and that the same, together with the grant of land as aforesaid, be in full of Mr. Dohrman's claims against the United States.

October 26.

Extract of a letter from Halifax, Oct. 4.

"Tuesday last, Capt. Hedley of the 37th regiment, returned to town from the eastern battery, with a party under his command. All reports of a body of Indians lately seen in that district, are void of foundation. It could be no other than the train which accompanied the beautiful Princess Kalafootongo, of the Mickmack tribe, in a visit paid the Captain, during his residence in that district.—Whether there was any thing political in this visit, or the Princess was stimulated to it by the same motives which induced Thalestris, Queen of the Amazons, in her visit to Alexander the Great, time only can discover."

AUGUSTA, Sept. 22.

Tuesday last was the day on which the attendance of the general assembly of this state was required by his honor the Governor's Proclamation. Yesterday some members met, and recommended to the honorable the executive council, to proclaim the state to be in alarm:—also to send for absent members.

We have it from the most unquestionable authority, that on the latter part of last week, lieut. col. Barber, of col. Freeman's battalion, went out upon the line up the Appalachi, with a small reconnoitering party of eight; and that a little above the Brig Shoals, they were first discovered by a party of Indians, who had time to divide and lay down on either side of an old trail, and fired on the party as they were going to pass. That colonel Barber was wounded in both hands, his bridle reins shot in two, and his horse wounded; himself was thrown, with three men who were mortally wounded. In this situation they retreated, without being pursued. Gen. Clarke, upon being informed, ordered some men to be collected, and immediately marched to that quarter, and it is hoped, will at least be able to discover the force of the Indians at present on our borders. Col. Barber thinks the party of Indians who attacked him, consisted of about 40.

We are informed from Greene county, that on Friday the 14th inst. a party of Indians killed a man in Greensborough, in sight of one of the forts; the Savages ran off with such precipitation, that every attempt made to overtake them proved fruitless.

Arthur Fort, Esq; a member for Wilkes county, informs us, that major Ledbetter appeared before him, and made oath to the following:—On Monday, the 17th inst. some Indians came to Buffaloe creek, in the county of Washington, about twelve miles from the Oconee, killed and scalped a lad of about 12 years of age, and shot a girl about 9 years old, through the breast and thighs, and took two scalps off her head; they were both at work in the fields, a small distance from the house. The girl, notwithstanding the wounds she received, recovered her senses some time after, and says that she saw about 5 or 6 Indians. They made no attempt on the house.

Extract of a letter from Gen. Cooke, at Mulberry-Grove, State of Franklin, to Major Elholm, at Augusta, dated August 28, 1787.

"Col. Typton, the other day, appeared with a party of about 50 men, of such as he could raise under pretence of redressing a quarrel that had arisen between our sheriff and the sheriff of North Carolina, though their principal view was to put themselves in possession of our records. This conduct produced a most rapid report, that they had made a prisoner of his excellency to carry him to North Carolina, which caused 200 volunteers to repair immediately to the house of col. Typton before they became sensible of the mistake; and it was only through the influence of his excellency that the opposite party did not fall a sacrifice to our Franks. During this time, a body of about 1500 veterans embodied themselves in order to rescue their governor (as they thought) out of the hands of the North Carolinians, and bring him back to the mountains—an instance that proves our citizens to have too noble a spirit to yield to slavery, or to relish a national insult."

SAVANNAH, Oct. 4.

Copy of a letter from Gen. Clarke, to his Honor the Governor.

SIR, Long Creek, Sept. 24, 1787.

YOUR favor of the 19th inst. I have received; and am informed that the arms and ammunition mentioned have arrived at Washington.

I had certain information that a man was killed on the 14th near Greensborough, by a party of 6 or 7 Indians; and that on the 16th, col. Barber with a small party, was waylaid by 50 or 60 Indians and wounded, and three of his party killed.—This, and the information contained in Mr. Barnard's last letter, and a variety of other accounts equally alarming, determined me to raise what men I could in the course of 24 hours, and marched with them to protect the frontiers; in which space of time I collected 160 men, chiefly volunteers, and proceeded to the place where col. Barber had been attacked; there I found the bodies of the 3 men mentioned above, mangled in a shocking manner, and after I had buried them, proceeded on the trail of the murderers as far as the south fork of the Oakmulgee, where, finding I had no chance of overtaking them, I left it, and went up the said river, until I met with a fresh trail of Indians coming towards the frontier settlements; I immediately turned and followed this trail until the morning of the 21st, between 11 and 12 o'clock, when I came up with them. They had just crossed a branch called Jack's Creek, through a thick cane-brake, and were encamped and cooking on an eminence. My force then consisted of 130 men, 30 having been sent back on account of their horses tired and lost. I drew up my men in three divisions, the right commanded by Col. Freeman, the left by Major Clarke, and the middle by myself. Col. Freeman and Major Clarke were ordered to surround and charge the Indians, which they did with such dexterity and spirit, that they immediately drove them from their encampment back into the cane-brake, where, finding it impossible for them to escape, they obstinately returned our fire until half past four o'clock, when they ceased, except now and then a shot.

During the latter part of the action, they seized every opportunity of escaping by small parties, leaving the rest to shift for themselves. About sunset I thought it most adviseable to draw off, as the men had suffered for want of provisions nearly two days, and for want of water during the action, but more particularly to take care of the wounded, which amounted to 11, and 6 killed. From every circumſtance I am certain there were not leſs than 25 Indians killed, and am induced to ſuppoſe that could I have ſtaid all night, I muſt have found 40 or 50 dead of their wounds by the morning;—in ſhort, they were totally defeated, with the loſs of their proviſions, clothing, &c. conſiſting of the following particulars: 2 guns, 32 braſs kettles, and 87 large packs, containing blankets, match coats, boots, mocaſons, tomahawks, pipes, upwards of 100 halters and bridles, &c. from all which I judge their number was fully equal to our's. Col. Freeman and Major Clarke diſtinguiſhed themſelves, and, from the ſpirit and bravery with which the whole of my little party acted during the action I do not believe that had we met them in the open woods we ſhould have been more than five minutes in giving them a total overthrow.

While I was on this excurſion, two ſkirmiſhes happened near Greenſborough, in one of which one man was wounded, and in the other 6 ſtand of arms were loſt, being guarded by only two men, while the reſt of the party were gathering fodder.

Should there not be a houſe made, I flatter myſelf you will afford the back country all the ſupport in your power. Indeed I cannot proceed much farther without your aſſiſtance; the general ſcarcity of proviſions in this part of the ſtate, points out the neceſſity of ſupplies from below; indeed men cannot be drawn out without it; the delays that this would occaſion would be fatal to the frontiers. Had I not fallen in with that choſen party of Indians, every circumſtance beſpeaks their deſign to diſtreſs the back ſettlers, and I think that Allen's mills, or lower, would by this time have become a frontier ſettlement; and I am convinced that if the back ſettlers one break, they will not ſtop with us.

I have now to beg your attention to the unfortunate wounded, who are at Read's Fort; a doctor, ſome wine, tea, coffee, and ſugar, are indiſpenſably neceſſary.

I ſhall expect an anſwer to this as ſoon as poſſible; and ſhould wiſh to be informed of the probability of a houſe being made, if that event ſhould not already have taken place. I think that the neceſſity of activity on, and attention to our frontiers, will prevent my attendance, ſhould the houſe convene

I am, ſir, with the utmoſt reſpect,
Your honor's moſt obedient,
and very humble ſervant,
E CLARKE, brigadier general.

The hon. GEORGE MATHEWS, eſq;
Governor of Georgia
Certified to be a true copy from the original letter, in council, Auguſta, September 26, 1787.
BEN. FISHBOURN.

We are informed that two or three men have been killed at Shoulderbone ſince General Clarke's defeating a large party of the Creek Indians; that on the 26th the General again croſſed the Oconee with 400 men, and that Colonel Dooley, with 100 more, followed the day after

Philadelphia, Oct. 29.

A correſpondent is happy to find that the county of Luzerne is repreſented in the preſent Aſſembly; and adds that there is great reaſon to hope from the abilities and diſpoſition of the new member, that a perfect reconciliation will be accompliſhed between the government and that diſtrict, where every thing remains at this time in the utmoſt tranquility.

On Monday laſt the city ſeſſions commenced, and on Friday the buſineſs of the court was concluded. Several perſons were condemned to the wheel-barrow, but the greater number of bills were for keeping diſorderly houſes, and committing aſſaults and battery—a melancholy proof of the depraved manners, and the contentious ſpirit of the times. One woman, who had been indicted for ſome violence offered to the perſon of the unhappy creature that was lately attacked by a mob under the imputation of being a witch, maintained the juſtice of that opinion, and inſinuated her belief that her only child ſickened and died, under the malignant influence of a charm. Upon which the preſiding Juſtice made the following obſervation—"What! that a poor wretch whoſe ſorrows and infirmities have ſunk her eyes into her head, and whoſe features are ſtreaked with the wrinkles of extreme old age, ſhould therefore become an object of terror, and be endowed with the powers of witchcraft—it is an idle and abſurd ſuperſtition! If, however, ſome damſels that I have ſeen, animated with the bloom of youth, and equipped with all the grace of beauty, if ſuch women were indicted for the offence, the charge might receive ſome countenance, for they are indeed calculated to charm and bewitch us. But age and infirmity, though they deſerve our compaſſion, have nothing in them that can alarm or facinate our nature."

Extract of a letter from New York, dated October 17, 1787.

"Mr. Wilſon's ſpeech is read with much approbation here by one party; the other party ſee nothing but nonſenſe and contradictions in it. You have paid a compliment to my judgment, which I am by no means entitled to, having never made the ſcience of government my ſtudy, and I wiſh the bulk of the people felt, like myſelf, diſpoſed to confide in the judgment of thoſe men who have made it their ſtudy, and are by the uprightneſs and integrity of their conduct in private life entitled to confidence. I would not however receive a ſyſtem of government from any ſet of men without examining it, and uſing that degree of reaſon which GOD has given for the regulation of my conduct in life; and if I can diſcover no miſchief in it, I do not feel inclined to ſtart at the raw head and bloody bones, which ſome men pretend to diſcover in it, becauſe it happens to differ from a particular ſyſtem of their own, for which they have a fondneſs. As this is the caſe with the conſtitution propoſed by the convention, I am willing to believe that ſuch men as formed the majority of the convention have in this inſtance acted conſiſtent with their former conduct, and recommended ſuch a conſtitution as they believed would be for the happineſs of their country. But altho' I am but ill qualified to judge in affairs of government, I have ſome judgment in the characters of men. I have attended to the converſation of every cluſter of people I have fallen into from the higheſt to the loweſt, and had I never ſeen the new conſtitution, this alone would have determined my opinion. When I hear an upſtart politician who is the oracle of his own little circle, but has not abilities to attract notice on a larger theatre, declaim againſt it as a ſyſtem of tyranny, which endangers the liberty of the people, I know very well that he means his own conſequence is in danger; and when I ſee a man ſet down his wheel-barrow to diſpute the point with a carman, and tells him that if the new conſtitution is adopted we ſhall no longer have a free trade. I conclude he belongs to the abovementioned politician's circle; a third, who is dreſſed like a gentleman, calls it an ariſtocracy, but cannot tell what an ariſtocracy is. On the other hand I perceive that almoſt all the men of property whoſe occupations and education are ſuch as preclude any ambition of becoming rulers, are in favor of the change propoſed. To me it appears that the rights of the people are ſufficiently guarded. Some body muſt be intruſted with power, and a much greater ſhare of it than Congreſs have at preſent or we ſhall ſoon be a very unhappy people, and I think the conſtitution propoſed has provided as many checks upon the ambition of the rulers, as is neceſſary in any government: ſhould it eventually degenerate into a mixed monarchy, when this country becomes populous and powerful, I do not think it a change greatly to be regretted, and this, in my opinion is the only evil to be dreaded, and that cannot happen until a diſtant period. In ſhort, I am highly pleaſed with the conſtitution becauſe it is far better than I expected; I was apprehenſive the convention would purſue a timid line of policy and only patch up the old garment. I believe it will be adopted, becauſe it is the only means of preventing a total diſſolution of the union and conſequent civil war, for the old confederation is virtually repealed, and it is not probable that more than one Congreſs more will ever meet under it."

Extract of a letter from Salem County, West Jerſey, dated Oct. 22, 1787.

"Nothing is talked of here, either in public or private, but the new conſtitution. All read, and almoſt all approve of it. Indeed it requires only to be read, with attention and without prejudice, to be approved of. It is true, there are a few here that do not like the new form of general government: but they are only thoſe who have not yet paid their debts; and therefore the only objection theſe people pretended to make againſt this conſtitution, is levelled at the 10th ſection of the firſt article, which puts it out of the power of any individual ſtate to make paper money: and here I cannot forbear to obſerve, that nothing, in the whole federal conſtitution, is more neceſſary than this very ſection; for we find, by woeful experience, that nothing, neither the religion of nature, nor even the pure religion of Jeſus Chriſt, which enjoins honeſty in almoſt every page of it, can make men honeſt. It was therefore abſolutely neceſſary to guard againſt that great inſtrument of fraud, viz. the emiſſion of paper money It is much to the credit of the people, that neither this great objection of the advocates for a paper currency; nor indeed any other that can poſſibly be raiſed, gains any ground in this part of the country. There are ſeveral petitions in this and the neighbouring counties, ready to be tranſmitted to our aſſembly. In theſe, the numerous ſubſcribers pray the aſſembly, earneſtly as ever they did to God Almighty for the forgiveneſs of their ſins, immediately to call a convention for the ratification of the propoſed conſtitution. One of theſe petitions has the following ſtrong and expreſſive ſentence in it: "We are convinced, after the moſt ſerious and unprejudiced examination of the different articles, and ſections of articles of this conſtitution, that nothing, but the immediate adoption of it can ſave the United States in general, and this ſtate in particular, from abſolute ruin.""

An eaſtern correſpondent obſerves, "That the pages of hiſtory no where deſcribe a government that has been ſo famous a nurſe of all kinds of vices, as that of the American ſtates ſince their independence. Speculation and oppreſſion in particular were never ſo rampant any where as they have been here. Men in the higher offices have not preyed upon us for their power has been only nominal. But like the Iſhmaelites of old, every man's hands have been miſchievous upon his neighbour. Individuals and ſtates have all been privateering upon each other. I believe the Grecian ſtates never half equalled us in over-reaching, in injuſtice, in knavery, and in mutual jealouſy and diſtruſt. The greateſt defect in our preſent government is this fundamental miſconception of human nature, that to know and do what is right is the ſame thing. Our civil and eccleſiaſtical leaders have in general inſtructed us in our duty with great clearneſs; but experience has convinced us, that clear knowledge and cool reaſon will not controul ſelfiſhneſs and untoward paſſions. The confederation chalked out a way to teach us our duty: but Congreſs were left to arbitrary devices to compel obedience; and for fear of being thought arbitrary, have left us to run our own ways to ſeparate ruin. The new conſtitution, propoſed by the Convention, appears much more perfect. There is no need of arbitrary device to go forward with it Every line of conduct for rulers and for ſubjects is clearly marked.

"There can be no free, good and ſecure government, but where every man is under the coercive power of law. All men in office ſhould be liable to puniſhment when they deviate from the conſtitution; from law and juſtice. And ſubjects ſhould be alſo liable to chaſtiſement, for their various tranſgreſſions of thoſe laws which they make by their repreſentatives, and which are agreeable to the conſtitution. The Federal Convention, as I conceive, hold out to us a ſyſtem of government. Under this ſyſtem no man can be above law. Rulers muſt govern according to law; ſubjects muſt walk according to law. The people have power to compel their rulers to do their duty. Rulers have power to compel the people to do their duty. Rulers have power given them ſufficient to make them ſtrong rods: yet the checks to the abuſe of thoſe powers are ample and admirably placed."

At a General Aſſembly of the ſtate of Connecticut, in America, holden at New-Haven, in ſaid ſtate, on the 2d Thurſday of October, Anno Domini 1787.

WHEREAS the Convention of delegates from the United States, lately aſſembled in the city of Philadelphia, have propoſed a conſtitution for ſaid States, to be ſubmitted to a convention of delegates, choſen in each ſtate by the people thereof, under the recommendation of its legiſlature, for their aſſent and ratification; and that each convention aſſenting to and ratifying the ſame ſhould give notice thereof to the United States in Congreſs aſſembled.

AND WHEREAS the United States in Congreſs aſſembled have unanimouſly reſolved, that ſaid conſtitution, with the reſolutions and letter accompanying the ſame, be tranſmitted to the ſeveral legiſlatures, in order to be ſubmitted to a convention of delegates, choſen in each ſtate by the people thereof, in conformity to the reſolves of the Convention, made and provided in that caſe;

RESOLVED by this Aſſembly, That it be, and hereby is recommended to the people of the ſeveral towns of this ſtate, who are qualified by law to vote in town-meetings, to meet on the ſecond Monday of November next (at their uſual place of town-meetings) and chuſe delegates to meet in a convention, for the purpoſes mentioned in the aforeſaid reſolves of Convention and Congreſs. And that each town in this ſtate chuſe by ballot the ſame number of delegates to attend the convention aforeſaid, which they have now a right by law to chuſe for repreſentatives in the General Aſſembly; and the towns of Colebrook and Barkhamſtead, which are not repreſented in the General Aſſembly, chuſe each of them one delegate to attend ſaid convention: And that the ſaid delegates who attend the ſaid convention, ſhall be allowed the ſame ſum for their travel to, and attendance in ſaid convention, as the repreſentatives in the General Aſſembly are entitled to, and may make up their debenture, and receive the ſame from the treaſurer accordingly,

AND it is further Reſolved, That the delegates ſo choſen aſſemble on the Firſt Thurſday in January next, in the city of Hartford; and when ſo aſſembled, that they chuſe a preſident and ſecretary for the ſaid convention, and it ſhall be the duty of the ſelect men in the ſeveral towns to warn the voters of their reſpective towns to meet on the ſaid ſecond Monday of November next, for the purpoſe of chuſing ſuch delegates: And that ſuch meeting ſhall be under the ſame regulations as other town-meetings are by law; and that the certificates of the choice of delegates in the reſpective towns ſhall be made by the town-clerks in ſuch towns.

AND that the ſheriff of the county of Hartford be, and he is hereby directed, to make proviſion for the ſaid convention in the ſame manner as for the General Aſſembly when ſitting, and his account being allowed by ſaid convention, ſhall be paid by the treaſurer of this ſtate.

TO THE LADIES.

AT this alarming criſis, our dear-bought country loudly calls for the aid of all her real friends, and invokes the aſſiſtance of their hands—their head, and their heart, to extricate her from the embarraſſments under which ſhe labours. The tender feelings of every true patriot receive a wound on reflecting how few there are who cheerfully eſpouſe their country's cauſe, and boldly dare to hazard every thing to promote its welfare. But if the male ſex are loſt to a ſenſe of reaſon, and ſtill refuſe to ſuccour their ſinking country—on you I call, ye fair daughters of America; let your example fire them with patriotic zeal—exert your influence over them (the greateſt in the world) to excite them to their duty—lead the way in plans to induſtry and œconomy—deſpiſe as frippery, the gewgaws of foreign importations—adorn yourſelves in the products of your own country—your native charms need not the embelliſhments of coſtly dreſs to captivate or hold in ſubjugation the man whoſe conqueſt ought with you to be an object; let virtue in its native ſimplicity and propriety achieve what all the ſtudied arts of refinement cannot reach; and may your's be the honor of reſcuing your proſtrate country from the horrid extreme of anarchy and deſpotiſm, and of eſtabliſhing it on the ſure baſis of induſtry, integrity and œconomy, that ſtrong ground of national ſecurity. Then will you behold thoſe halcyon days, the thoughts of which now animate every true patriot. Z.

Leſt you be deem'd, as well you may,
A foe to fed'ral deeds;

"The ſcheme you muſt again review,

For, Sir, the Conſtitution's new,
And therefore, Sir, is dark."

To little critics dark it is:
It's faults or excellence
Not ſeen by the ſagacious phiz

His ſentiment to tell,
(And Cato muſt not think it hard)
He likes the ſyſtem well;

And if ſome principle be there,
That's oppoſite to mine,
How wiſe the plan! I ſtill declare,
What judgment in each line!

What, if my feeble thought can't ſoar
It's higheſt good to find,
Is not a whole Convention's more

AN eminent carcaſe butcher, equally as meagre in his perſon as he was in his underſtanding being one day in a bookſeller's ſhop where Doctor Johnſon was, took up a volume of poems; and by way of ſhewing his taſte, repeated, with great affectation, the following line:

"Who rules o'er freemen, ſhould himſelf be free."

"There is poetry for you, Doctor, what do you think of that?" "Rank nonſenſe, ſir," ſays the other; "it is an aſſertion without a proof; and you might with as much propriety ſay,

"Who ſlays fat oxen, ſhould himſelf be fat."

For Grist Mills & other Water Works

On an extensive Plan,
One of the best situations in America is offered
FOR SALE,
Together With

Batsto Iron-Works,

At the forks of Little Egg-Harbour river, one of the most healthy spots in New Jersey, 58 miles by land from Philadelphia, and within a few hours sail of New York.

THE river, communicating with the sea by the best inlet on the Jersey coast, is navigable for vessels of 200 tons within a few miles of the works; those of 100 tons may approach within one mile; flats and scows, carrying 10 or 12 tons, load and unload at the works. The usual freight to New York or Philadelphia is 10 shillings per ton. The furnace stream affords plenty of water, in the dryest season, for 3 or 4 pair of mill stones, besides supplying the iron works.——An excellent dam, which has been increasing in strength many years by the cinder from the furnace, is well secured from the danger of freshes, and the works are scarcely ever injured or delayed by either ice or backwater, though the tide swells to the foot of the dam: mills may therefore be erected at a moderate expence. This being a part of the country in which many people and many teams are necessarily employed in collecting and preparing for market the iron and lumber with which it abounds, and at the same time illy adapted to the raising of grain for their support, there is, and must continue to be, a demand for large quantities of midlings, cornell, shorts and bran, at advanced prices; and the conveniencep of conveying flour at a light expence, either to New York or Philadelphia, or to more distant markets, will not be overlooked nor considered as of small importance, especially as there are few mill seats of any considerable capacity equally adapted to the New York market, which is not unfrequently supplied with superfine flour from Philadelphia. A choice of the various kinds of wheat may be drawn to this seat from Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, and New York with greater ease and convenience than to almost any other mills now in being.

The FURNACE, which by the extensive lands annexed to it, is abundantly supplied with wood and ore, is now in blast, and is noted for producing the best hollow ware in America, the metal being peculiarly well adapted to the making of castings of all kinds, as well as excellent bar iron.

A FORGE, with four fires and two hammers, belongs to the estate, and stands about half a mile from the furnace, on another fine stream which affords plenty of water.

A SLITTING and ROLLING MILL, having been disused for the last two or three years, may want some repairs to prepare it for use; but the forebays and gates are in perfect order, and being in the proper spot for grist mills, may be appropriated to that use.

Two SAW MILLS in good order, and a small Grist Mill.

The MANSION HOUSE is elegantly situated about 100 yards from the furnace, on an height which commands a view of the whole works, and of the two villages formed by the surrounding buildings belonging to the estate, such as barns, stables, coal houses, workshops, storehouses and dwellings for workmen. Adjoining the mansion house is a large and fruitful garden, affording plenty of vegetables, and well stored with chosen fruit trees; also a young bearing orchard, containing near 2000 apple trees, mostly grafted.

These excellent accommodations for extensive and profitable manufactories, are offered to sale at a very low rate, and on terms of payment calculated for the ease of the purchaser, who may pay the greater part in the produce of the Iron Works, at a price to be agreed upon; and they are capable of producing more in one year, than will pay the whole price demanded.

For particulars, apply to WILLIAM RICHARDS, at the said Works, JOHN COX, at Bloomsbury, near Trenton, or CHARLES PETTIT, in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA: Printed and Sold by JOHN DUNLAP and DAVID C. CLAYPOOLE;
On the South side of Market-street, the third House East of Second-street, where Subscriptions, Advertisements, &c. for this Paper, are thankfully received, and PRINTING in its different Branches is done with Care, Elegance and Expedition ——Subscribers to this Paper (in the city) are served with it at their Houses early every Morning, and those at a distance by the quickest Conveyance.

Valuable Land for Sale.

Will be exposed to Sale by Public Vendue, on Thursday the 29th of November next, at the Court-House in Harford county, state of Maryland,

TWO very valuable and well-improved FARMS, late the property of Henry Wilson and Son, about two miles and a half from the Court-house, 24 miles from Baltimore, 9 miles from Joppa, and 8 miles from a landing at Otter-Point, near the Bay. The two farms together contain 929 acres, but will be divided nearly equal. One half the land is cleared, the remainder in timber; about 60 acres of meadow made, and about as much more may be cleared, and a large proportion of the whole may be watered at a small expence by several springs, and a considerable run, that flows through the centre of the land; the winter's run likewise flows through a part of it, on which is a mill seat. There is on each farm a good brick house, with barn, stables, &c. a large orchard stocked with the best fruit, and a large garden paled in. The situation is high and healthy, the soil good for either farming or grazing: they are convenient to several merchant mills, where there is a constant market for all kinds of grain.

Those who wish to view the land, on application to Mess. Ashton and Waters, the present tenants, will be shewn it. Possession will be given the 1st of January, if required. The title good and free of all incumbrances. The terms will be easy to the purchaser, and will be made known on the day of sale, by WM. WEST.

The EPISTLE from the YEARLY MEETING of QUAKERS held in LONDON.

By adjournments, from the 28th day of the fifth Month, to the 4th day of the ſixth Month, 1787, incluſive.

To the Quarterly and Monthly Meetings of Friends in Great Britain, Ireland, and elſewhere.

DEAR FRIENDS,

UNDER the enlivening influence of the love of Chriſt, our holy head and high prieſt, renewedly manifeſted in this our annual aſſembly, we dearly ſalute you; wiſhing an increaſe of ſpiritual bleſſings to this church and people, wherever ſcattered abroad, in all their various ſtations and allotments. We have with reverent thankfulneſs to acknowledge that, according to his wonted goodneſs, he hath at this time afforded us a comfortable ſeaſon together, and hath ſtrengthened us to conduct the affairs which have come before us, in much harmony and concord, to our mutual edification and encouragement. And we fervently deſire that the influence of his unerring ſpirit may be more and more waited for in all our aſſemblies, that under the religious concern proceeding therefrom, our ſeveral endeavours for the promotion of his cauſe may through his bleſſing be rendered effectual.

The accounts of Friends ſufferings brought in this year, being chiefly for tithes, and thoſe called church rates, amount in England and Wales to four thouſand eight hundred and ſixty-five pounds; and thoſe in Ireland to one thouſand three hundred and ſeventy-ſix pounds. It is with ſatisfaction we obſerve, that notwithſtanding the inattention manifeſted by ſome under our name to this important branch of our Chriſtian teſtimony, it has gained conſiderable ground in North America; where our brethren, in common with others, have moſtly been releaſed from Eccleſiaſtical impoſitions.

We have alſo thankfully to believe, there is a growing attention in many, not of our religious ſociety, to the ſubject of Negro ſlavery; and that the minds of the people are more and more enlarged to conſider it as an aggrevate of every ſpecies of evil, and to ſee the utter inconſiſtency of upholding it by the authority of any nation whatever; eſpecially of ſuch as puniſh with loſs of life, crimes whoſe magnitude bears ſcarce any proportion to this complicated iniquity.

By accounts received from our ſeveral quarterly meetings, and by epiſtles from Ireland, Holland, New England, New-York, Pennſylvania, and New-Jerſey, Maryland, and Virginia, we are informed, that there is a rivality of religious zeal in many places; and that a conſiderable number have joined the Society by convincement ſince laſt year.

Theſe accounts, together with ſome others which have been received, have afforded us comfort; yet we are ſorrowfully affected in perceiving ſo great a declenſion in ſome, from that ſimplicity and uprightneſs by which our predeceſſors were ſo eminently diſtinguiſhed; and alſo with the worldly-mindedneſs, carnal eaſe, and ſecurity in which others appear to be ſettled; who, contenting themſelves with a nominal profeſſion of memberſhip, or a form of godlineſs, are not ſolicitous for an acquaintance with its living virtue and ſaving power; forgetting that if we truly ſucceed thoſe ſons of the morning, as witneſſes for the truth on earth, the ſame ſpirit which influenced their minds muſt actuate ours, and fit us to ſupport the teſtimonies given us to bear. Without this, our profeſſion will degenerate into formality, or be openly ſacrificed to the mammon of unrighteouſneſs: and then, of however high account our works may be in our own eſtimation, or that of others, at the hour of awful deciſion, and in the unerring balance of the ſanctuary, we ſhall aſſuredly be found wanting. We therefore feel our minds deeply engaged in the bowels of fervent charity, to entreat ſuch to enter, with humility and ſelf-abaſement, into an intimate acquaintance with the ſtate of their own hearts, by attending to the teſtimony of the faithful witneſs which God hath placed in every man's conſcience, that, by earneſtly applying to Him, on whom effectual help is laid, the end of their faith may be received, even the ſalvation of their ſouls. Suppreſs not then, dear friends, the ſmalleſt intimation from this precious gift, deſigned by its bleſſed Author to ſteer us, through the dangers of time, to an unfading inheritance in a bliſsful eternity; but ſtand open to its convictions, and patiently wait therein, to receive ſtrength to ſubject your wills to its manifeſtation. So will your faith in its operation and influence be increaſed; and as you are obedient to its diſcoveries, and therein follow on to know the Lord, who will have, with his gathered flock, to acknowledge, that the intelligence of this inward monitor is more ſafely to be depended upon, than any outward inſtruction, and thereby be preſerved from the many ſnares and ſtratagems of the enemy; by which he is attempting to draw aſide the inexperienced and unwary, ſuggeſting to their minds, that there is an eaſier way to the kingdom than by the croſs of Chriſt. Great, we fear, hath been the loſs which many, who have been viſited by the day-ſpring from on high, have ſuſtained thro' their reaſoning againſt theſe ſecret convictions of divine grace, counting them with Ephraim, as a ſtrange thing, and ſeeking more to increaſe knowledge, than to have the will of the creature ſubjected to the will of God. Hence they have gradually ſwerved from the divine government, laid themſelves open to the ſubtle inſinuations of the enemy, miſtaken imagination for revelation, and at length fruſtrated the gracious purpoſes of the Almighty concerning them. Whereas had they abode in patience and humility under the forming hand, depending, in child-like ſimplicity, on the heavenly inſtructor, for the gradual unfoldings of his counſel, they might have been inſtrumental in gathering others to the participation of ſubſtantial good. Earneſt are our deſires for the beloved youth, that they may receive caution from theſe miſteppings of others, and by watchfully attending to the voice of pure wiſdom, not only be preſerved themſelves, but be way-marks to others in the new and living way, which of God is caſt up for the redeemed to walk in. And it is our renewed concern to adviſe friends to be vigilant in preventing the introduction of ſuch books into their families, as, by vitiating the taſte and polluting the mind, either inclines it to folly and licentiouſneſs, or tend to fill it with airy notions; ſhaking its belief in the goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and leſſening that regard to his bleſſed precepts, which their unſpeakable importance require.

Of the Lord's people formerly it was ſaid, they would dwell alone, and not mix with the ſurrounding nations: ſo we are perſuaded our ſafety and proſperity in ſpiritual experience, under this laſt and higheſt diſpenſation of goſpel light, depends much more on refraining from ſuch connections and engagements in the world, as divert the mind from a ſtate of lowlineſs and watchful dependence, (againſt which, as againſt Iſrael abiding in their tents, nether divination nor enchantment is ſuffered to prevail) and lead alſo from that ſimplicity of life and converſation, in which our wants being few, and our deſires bounded, we may be preſerved from the temptation, into which ſome in profeſſion with us have ſo diſgracefully fallen, or ſupporting a vain ſhew of affluence and grandeur, at the expence, and to the certain injury of others.

Our advices on the ſubject of a religious education have been frequent; yet it is ſo extenſively important, we ſtill feel it the weighty concern of our minds, to endeavour to ſtir up the attention of friends to this great object; and we beſeech all parents and heads of families, to watch with a godly jealouſy over themſelves, and in Goſpel-love over their dependants, as ſtewards to whom is entruſted the care of immortal ſouls. In order, then, dear friends, that your accounts of this truſt may be rendered with reverent hope of Divine acceptance, we counſel you to take every ſuitable opportunity of cultivating in the tender minds of your offspring the plant which your heavenly Father hath planted, and to ſuppreſs, as far as in you lies, whatever you are ſenſible ſprings from the root of evil: avoiding in your own conduct and appearance, every thing which may be hurtful for them to imitate, or cauſe them to ſtumble.

And, dear youth, as we have cauſe to believe a conſiderable number among you are ſenſible that the viſitation of our heavenly Father's love is afreſh extended, and in a particular manner to thoſe of your rank; we tenderly exhort you to give diligent attention to it. Many are the dangers to which we are expoſed, and much depends on the connections you form in the early ſtages of life. The impreſſion you then receive may grow into habits of good or evil, by which your future peace and comfort may be much increaſed or leſſened. Let perfect obedience then be your aim; and although, as you labour after it, the Lord may ſee meet to exerciſe you in ſmall things, deſpiſe them not; for as his will is there moſt clearly revealed, where that of the creature is moſt fully ſubjected to, our ſubmiſſion to ſmall things may often be a more acceptable ſacrifice in his ſight, than in matters which, to our own wiſdom, may appear greater.

"Finally, brethren," in the words of the Apoſtle, "we beſeech you, by the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not ſoon ſhaken in mind." But, "as ye have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him: rooted and built up in him, and eſtabliſhed in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thankſgiving. Beware, leſt any man ſpoil you through phyloſophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Chriſt, for in him dwelleth all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily."

Signed in and on behalf of the Yearly Meeting by JOSEPH STORRS, Clerk to the Meeting this Year.

DUBLIN, Auguſt 18.

The Volunteer encampment ſtill continues at Rathmines. Drafts from the different corps are detached from town every night as uſual, to relieve the men on guard. Since they have been in the field, they have experienced two tempeſtuous nights of very heavy rain, which, however, they ſuſtained without murmuring. To-morrow morning all the corps in the metropolis proceed to the camp to ſpend the day there, and in the evening the tents will be ſtruck—and the camp broke up. It is but juſtice to captain Tandy to mention that he has never quitted the field ſince the formation of the camp.

It is uſual with collectors of hearth-money to call once or twice, in order to give the inhabitants notice, and the collection is deferred as long as poſſible. A fellow, however, who was appointed to this office, and who was no leſs a ſtranger to the climate, than to good breeding and decorum, made a buſtle in the neighbourhood of High-ſtreet, and inſiſted on payment of the tax, though they had but a ſhort time before diſcharged that of the preceding year. Refuſals were conſequently made, and in the dialect of an Eſkimaux, and with the ferocity of a Cherokee, he proceeded to make ſeizures in the ſhops of the moſt reſpectable inhabitants. He was at length taught ſubmiſſion, for it would be impoſſible to teach good manners, and obliged to deſiſt from his abuſe of official authority.

A dextrous thief, it is reported, ſome time ſince contrived means to ſteal the official ſeal of a certain great law character. The ſeal was of conſiderable value, being compoſed of maſſy ſilver. Orders, we hear, have been ſent to the metropolis of the ſiſter kingdom, for the execution of another. In no branch of art of manufacture, have our artiſts arrived at a greater degree of perfection, than ſeal cutting; the celebrated ſeal of the Royal Iriſh Academy, is a proof of this aſſertion; and it is to be lamented, that the execution of matters in this line, is not ſolely confined to the kingdom.

AMERICA.

CHARLESTON, Oct. 1.

An anonymous correſpondent ſent us the following paragraph:

By a gentleman from Kentucky, we are confidently aſſured, that deputies have been lately choſen by the different ſettlements on the weſtern waters, to meet in grand general convention at Naſhville, on the 22d day of November next. The object of this unexpected council is to arrange and ratify articles of confederation and temporary union between the citizens of theſe ſettlements, as allies to the ſtate of Franklin. Their intention is to adopt ſuch expedients as will prove moſt effectual to open the navigation of the Miſſiſſippi to the confederates, as well as to a certain maritime nation, ſecretly engaged in the project, and to lot ſuch proportions of troops and ſupplies to each eſtabliſhment as may be found neceſſary to recover the invaded territory of the Natches. Although the number of the weſtern troops deſtined for this expedition is not aſcertained, we can ſo far aſſert, that they are to act on land in co-operation with a fleet in the Gulph of Mexico.

PETERSBURG, Oct. 18.

The laſt ſummer, which was remarkably dry, we are informed, has occaſioned the crops of corn in this ſtate to fall conſiderably ſhort. Many farmers are under the neceſſity of purchaſing to enable them to ſupport their families;—but the crops of tobacco have proved very favorable.

This day the purſe of 100 pounds was run for over the courſe in this town, four mile heats, which was won by Whirligig, the property of Richard Kennan, Eſq; the two firſt heats.

RICHMOND, Oct. 20.

At a meeting of reſpectable inhabitants of Berkeley county,

Reſolved, That it is the opinion of the gentlemen now met, that the United States are under the greateſt obligation to the members of the late Convention, for their aſſiduity and perſeverance in accompliſhing the plan of federal government.

Reſolved, That two of the gentlemen now preſent do wait upon the clergymen of different perſuaſions in this county, and requeſt them to prepare a ſermon, to be preached at every place of worſhip, on the Sabbath they think moſt proper, to return thanks in a ſpecial manner to Almighty God, for inſpiring the members of the late memorable Convention with amity, wiſdom and unanimity to form a federal government, with ſo great judgment, and ſound policy, amidſt ſo many and various intereſts.

Reſolved, That the members of the preſent meeting do pledge themſelves to one another, to contribute all in their power to eſtabliſh and ſupport the plan of federal government propoſed by the late Convention, as it appears ſufficient and well adapted to ſecure Peace, Liberty and Safety to the citizens of the United States.

Done at Martenburg, the 28th day of September, 1787.

Yeſterday 110 feet of the bridge conſtructing acroſs James river, betwixt this city and Mancheſter, by J. Mayo, Eſq; was laid down, and we are happy to inform our readers, there is every appearance of this great and arduous undertaking being accompliſhed early next ſpring, as the theory anſwers in practice the moſt ſanguine expectations of its projector.

The above reſolution was ſent to the council for their concurrence, but we have not heard their deciſion.

Witneſs our hands and ſeals October 11th, 1787."

☞ The words in Italic, are ſtruck through with a pen, as if eraſed.

It was moved, and ſeconded to adjourn.

Mr. Lollar hoped before the houſe adjourned, a committee would be appointed to wait on council, and inform them the houſe was organized, and ready to receive ſuch buſineſs as they would pleaſe to lay before them.

The motion to adjourn being perſiſted in, it was agreed to, and the houſe adjourned, to meet to-morrow morning at half paſt nine o'clock.

THURSDAY, October 25, A. M.

The return of members for the county of Waſhington was read, as follows:

John M'Dowell,
Alexander Wright,
John Flannaken,
James Alliſon.

A letter from Charles Biddle, Eſquire, was read, wherein he declined ſerving as a member for the county of Berks. On motion, and by ſpecial order, the ſame was read a ſecond time—whereupon Reſolved, That the reſignation of Charles Biddle be accepted, and the ſpeaker be authoriſed to iſſue his writ for an election, to ſupply the vacancy.

A committee, conſiſting of Meſſrs. Willing, Lollar and Schott, was appointed to wait on council, and inform them the houſe was organized, and ready to receive ſuch communications as that body might be diſpoſed to make.

Mr. Kennedy preſented a petition from ſixty-two inhabitants of the county of Dauphin, alledging ſome undue and improper practices in one of the election diſtricts. In ſupport of which allegation, they tranſmitted the affidavit of Michael Zimmerman, and others, of Lebanon townſhip.

Ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. Lollar reported verbally, from the committee appointed to wait on council, that they had informed that body of the organization of the houſe, and received in anſwer, that a meſſage ſhould be forwarded to-morrow morning.

On motion of Mr. Findley, Meſſrs. Fitzſimons, Thomas and M'Lene, were appointed a committee to bring forward the unfiniſhed buſineſs of the late houſe, and ſuch other as they judged proper, to lay before the preſent houſe.

Mr. Fitzſimons was of opinion that the inveſtigation of the revenue of the ſtate was an important buſineſs, particularly at the preſent alarming criſis: Wherefore he hoped the houſe would turn their attention to it as ſpeedily as poſſible.

He had obſerved, ever ſince he had the honor of being a repreſentative in the general aſſembly of this ſtate, a great difficulty in obtaining early information, from the officers in that department,—it uſually was late in the ſeſſion before it was procured; by which means the ſubject could not receive that attention it merited, and he wiſhed it to have, to remedy which, he hoped the houſe would now proceed to the appointment of a committee of ways and means, and thereby diſcharge that part of their duty, the occaſion demanded: He therefore moved for the appointment of a grand committee.

Mr. Findley obſerved ſome ſmall difficulty in appointing the committee ſo ſoon in the ſeſſion.—That we have experienced the inconvenience mentioned by the worthy member from the city, would be readily granted, but there are now ſome counties totally unrepreſented, and others but thinly repreſented, for which reaſon there muſt be an impropriety in the appointment at preſent, otherwiſe it muſt be readily agreed to; upon the whole, he did not wiſh it done, at leaſt, on this day, perhaps theſe objections might not exiſt to-morrow.

Mr. Fitzſimons ſaw nothing to prevent the appointment now, the only buſineſs the committee could enter on, would be to call on the officers, and direct them to prepare the neceſſary ſtatement, for their early information. If any county was unrepreſented at preſent, ſurely a gentleman could be added when the members came down from ſuch county. This cannot be deemed a ſufficient reaſon for delay, when there never was, perhaps, a greater occaſion for the exertions of the legiſlature, in this particular.

Mr. Findley apprehended the force of his objection was not underſtood, it was not that ſome counties were unrepreſented, but others were ſo partially ſo, as not to have a choice in their members; ſome for example had but one member, who of courſe muſt be nominated and appointed, he thought this placed ſome gentlemen in a diſagreeable ſituation.

He would not inſiſt upon his oppoſition, but had only ſtated theſe reaſons to the houſe.

Mr. M'Lene added a few words, which were not heard.

The motion was put and carried; whereupon the following gentlemen were appointed members of the committee of ways and means;

City of Philadelphia	Mr. Fitzſimons
County of Philadelphia	Mr. Robinſon
Bucks	Mr. Wynkoop
Cheſter	Mr. Willing
Lancaſter	Mr. Hubley
York	Mr. M'Lellan
Cumberland	Mr. Kennedy
Berks	Mr. G. Heiſter
Northampton	Mr. Burkhalter
Bedford	Mr. Piper
Weſtmoreland	Mr. Findley
Waſhington	Mr. M'Dowel
Franklin	Mr. M'Lene
Montgomery	Mr. Lollar
Dauphin	Mr. Miley
Luzerne	Mr. Schott
Huntingdon	Mr. Daviſon

Meſſrs. Clymer, Will and Rittenhouſe, were appointed a committee to prepare rules and regulations for conducting the buſineſs of the houſe, and in the interim, ordered, that the rules of the late houſe be adopted.

Meſſrs. Logan, Willing, Hubley, Kennedy and Lollar, are appointed a committee of accounts.

Meſſrs. Robinſon, Evans and Piper, are appointed a committee to ſuperintend to the printing of the laws and minutes.

Mr. Lollar is appointed to receive fines.

Mr. Fitzſimons called for the reading of the return from Weſtmoreland county, as he apprehended it was not altogether properly certified, and he enquired for information, whether ſome other ſtatement was not expected.

Mr. Findley would give ſuch information, as he was poſſeſſed of; he had ſeen a great number of the judges on this buſineſs, and they allowed, the people had voted in ſeveral diſtricts were they did not reſide, but this was not matter of much ſurpriſe, conſidering the extent of the weſtern counties, however he apprehended this did not invalidate an election; in the diſtrict of Connemaugh, the judges had received three votes in this manner, and were apprized of the impropriety, wherefore they retained them apart, until the judges met at the Court-houſe, when it was agreed to receive them, as no doubt could be entertained, but what thoſe perſons had a right to vote, as citizens of the ſtate, unavoidably detained from their place of reſidence, ſimilar conduct has been purſued in other counties, and it was not deemed improper. One of the judges, to be ſure, had inſiſted on a note being made of this tranſaction, ſuppoſing it neceſſary, to minute every occurrence, from the oath which he had taken.—This was what he had learned from the prothonotary Mr. Huffnagle, and the judges who delivered him the return to bring to the houſe.—He believes no other ſpecial information could be obtained, nor would any petitions or complaints againſt the election come forward.—This he declared as his opinion; ſuch things poſſibly may be introduced, contrary to his expectation, but the probability is, that there will not.

Mr. G. Clymer obſerved, that when returns are read on the firſt meeting of the houſe, they are paſſed over as a matter of courſe, but this appeared to him vitiated on the face of it, the judges had alſo certified ſome improprieties which might be a proper ſubject of enquiry, when the neceſſary information was received—At preſent he ſuppoſed nothing more was requiſite than to let it remain on the table.

Whereupon no order was ſpecially taken on this buſineſs for the preſent.

On motion reſolved, that Tueſday next be aſſigned for the appointment of ſuitable perſons to print the laws and minutes of the preſent houſe.

Ordered, that the notice thereof be given in one of the public papers.

The ſeveral members who now appeared for the firſt time in the houſe, were alſo qualified agreeable to the directions of the conſtitution.

Adjourned until to-morrow.

FRIDAY, October 26, A. M.

The houſe met purſuant to adjournment.

Such members as appeared now for the firſt time ſubſcribed the neceſſary oaths and declaration.

Petitions from James Young and Charles Buzelo', inſolvent debtors, confined in the jail of this city, were read and ordered to lie on the table.

The return of repreſentatives, was received from the county of Fayette, by which it appeared, that are returned duly elected.

Mr. G. Clymer called for the reading of the following reſolution, agreed to by the late houſe.

Reſolved, That it be recommended to the ſucceeding houſe of aſſembly, to make the ſame allowance to the attending members of the convention, as is made to the members of the general aſſembly, and alſo to provide for the extraordinary expences which may be incurred by holding the ſaid elections.

This met with ſome oppoſition from Mr. M'Lene, who thought the houſe ought to wait until the buſineſs ſhould be introduced by the expected meſſage from council.

But the reſolution was read, and Meſſrs. G. Clymer, Lollar and Schott, were appointed to bring in a bill conformable to its tenor.

Mr. Fitzſimons preſented the following report, "The committee appointed to report the unfiniſhed buſineſs of the former houſe, find, the following bills and reports, recommended by a former committee."

1 A ſupplement to the act for erecting the ſouthern ſuburbs into the diſtrict of Southwark.

2 A bill for diſpoſing of the reſidue of the donation lands.

3 A bill for regulating auctions and vendues.

4 A bill to incorporate the ſubſcribers to the plan for erecting a permanent bridge over Schuylkill.

5 A bill to enable the commiſſioners of Cheſter county to ſell and convey a certain lot, &c.

6 A report on the petition of non-reſident owners of land in Luzerne county.

All of which they recommended to the attention of the houſe, and that the report of the committee on the tranſcript of taxes, be referred to the committee on ways and means."

The 1ſt bill was committed to Meſſrs. Robinſon, Logan and Piper.

The 2d to Meſſrs. Findley, M'Dowel and Rittenhouſe.

The 3d —— to Meſſrs. Fitzſimons, Will, Peters, Wynkoop and M'Lene.

The 4th ——was poſtponed.

The 5th——to the members from Cheſter county.

It was moved, by Mr. M'Lene, to refer the report on the Luzerne buſineſs to a grand committee.

Mr. G. Clymer objected to this motion becauſe it was the buſineſs of the ſtate generally, and not a ſubject in which the counties were individually concerned.

Mr. M'Lene did not deny the gentleman's poſition, but he conceived the members who might be appointed, were repreſentatives of the ſtate, and not the repreſentatives of particular counties.

Mr. Clymer inſiſted that grand committees were the repreſentatives of counties, or why are they appointed from each county, in preference of being ſelected from the ſtate at large.

Mr. Fitzſimons had but one objection to a grand committee, and that was the delay neceſſarily occaſioned by having ſo large a number to tranſact buſineſs,—Every gentleman muſt be ſenſible of the difficulty with which committees are collected, and on the preſent occaſion, conſtruct your committee how you may, the ſame members will be on ſeveral others, which will encreaſe the difficulty, for it is impoſſible to attend both at the ſame time; indeed he had frequently obſerved, that buſineſs conſigned to a large committee, was done by a few of its members or not at all, but if gentlemen think that a grand committee will ſpeedily report in the preſent inſtance, he would reſt ſatisfied with the appointment.

The motion for a grand committee was negatived, and a committee formed of Meſſrs. Clymer, Wynkoop, Evans, Lowrey, M'Lene, Kennedy, and G. Heiſter.

Mr. M'Lene begged to be excuſed from ſerving on this committee, as he was againſt the meaſure altogether.

The houſe declined to comply with his requeſt.

The report of the committee on the tranſcript of taxes, was referred to the committee on ways and means.

The aſſiſtant clerk was ſent to enquire of the honorable ſupreme executive council, at what time they would pleaſe to forward their meſſage, and was informed it could not be ready to lay before the houſe until one o'clock. No other buſineſs preſenting,

The houſe adjourned, to meet to-morrow morning at half paſt nine o'clock.

The September (Britiſh Packet) is arrived at New York from Falmouth. It is expected that advices by this mail will be received at the Poſt-Office this morning.

CHARLES the IId. being at hazard one Twelfth night at court with the duke of Buckingham, and others, a well dreſſed ſharper, who ſtood behind the duke's chair, took the liberty to pick his pocket of a diamond ſnuff-box, which was very valuable. Juſt in the inſtant of ſtealing it, the king happened to fix his eyes on him; on which the ſharper, with great preſence of mind, put his finger up to his noſe, thereby inſinuating it was done out of fun. The king knew the world too well to be gulled even by ſuch an artifice, but however held his tongue. Some time after the duke miſſing his box, his majeſty told him the circumſtance, "Good G—d, Sire," ſays his grace, "why did not your majeſty tell me of it in time?" "Oh!" ſays the king, "I could not do that, I was upon honor!"

Foreign Intelligence,

Received by the Antelope Packet, Captain Curtis, arrived at New-York, after 46 days paſſage, from Falmouth.

LONDON, Auguſt 24.

A few days ago arrived in Pall Mall from America, in the Favorite, capt. Cooper, Mr. Bladen Ruſpini, ſon of Mr. Ruſpini, ſurgeon dentiſt to his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, who has been practiſing his father's profeſſion with great ſucceſs in New York.

Extract of a letter to a merchant in London, from the co. Donegal in Ireland.

"It is with pleaſure I inform you, that ſhoals of ſummer herrings have already appeared in Lough Swilly and Inver Bay. The exertions of the hon. Mr. Cuningham, at his new eſtabliſhment of Rutland, (lying in the Roſſes, within the iſland of Arran in this county) has diffuſed ſuch a general ſpirit along the whole coaſt, that the inhabitants are every where prepared to meet them with boats and nets; and we have no doubt but this country will ſoon wear a new face. Should the Dutch and Flemings, at this time that their country threatens to become the ſeat of civil war, take advantage of the offers that have been made to them by Mr. Cuningham, the Weſt of Ireland will no doubt, from its local advantages, become an immediate ſeat of trade to America and the Weſt Indies, and it is evident, that no part of the three kingdoms is ſo advantageouſly ſituated for the Greenland and Newfoundland fiſheries, and the trade to the Mediterranean; and the induſtry of the Dutch, if ſettled here, would ſoon render it a general depot for the exchange of the commodities of the North and the South, the Eaſt and the Weſt.

"The port of Rutland, when ſufficiently known, muſt neceſſarily be much frequented by ſhips for the conveniency of repairs; and I am informed, that near 20 veſſels have put in there for that purpoſe in a ſhort ſpace of time, there being a very capital maſter-builder and dock yard eſtabliſhed there, with an anchor-ſmith, and every ſtore neceſſary for repair.

"From three to four hundred veſſels have lain perfectly ſecure during the winter fiſhery, for two or three years paſt; and timber veſſels, of 700 tons, enter the port with eaſe, and there are ſix fathom water to lye in.

"The land in the mean time has been attended to, as well as maritime objects. Mr. Cuningham has compleated his roads of communication thro' the country; ſalt works and ſtorehouſes of various kinds are erected; and there can be no doubt that Rutland and its neighbourhood will ſoon become a ſeat of wealth and conſequence."

Aug. 27. A very ſtrong report having prevailed on Friday evening and Saturday, relative to ſome diſturbances at the Hague, we learn that the caſe was literally as follows:

On the 14th inſtant, in the evening, Sir James Harris, after delivery of his memorial to the States General, had, in company with the marquis de Thulemeyer, a conference with the preſident (count Weideren) and the ſecretary of the States General, which laſted till eleven o'clock at night: what paſſed remains wholly a ſecret, but it is conjectured to have been relative to the memorial. On the next and ſucceeding days, viz. Wedneſday 15, and Thurſday 16, the States General met for diſpatch of buſineſs. At midnight the aſſembly adjourned, and on Friday the 17th they met again, where, as far as can be collected, there were ſuch heats and animoſities (the French party being againſt receiving the mediation of England or Pruſſia, and calling out for France as the only ally of the republic, and conſequently the only power that could be intereſted in their diſputes), that, in the midſt of confuſion and buſtle, the preſident adjourned to the Monday following, Auguſt 20, on which it is ſuppoſed they met; but no accounts of their proceedings ſo late as that day are yet come over.

Aug. 30. This morning in the Old Bailey the following convicts were executed, Joſ. Williams, T. Collins, J. Jones, B. M'Coul, G. Brace, Ja. Mitchell, Dennis Harlem, Ja. Romain, T. Alger, J. Woodward, alias Gibert Baggage. They all behaved very penitent. Williams was the firſt that has been executed for carrrying fire arms and attempting to reſcue ſmuggled goods, made death by a late act of parliament.

Aug. 31. A circular letter has been ſent, by order of the lords commiſſioners of his majeſty's treaſury, to the chief magiſtrates of the ſea-ports, to take the ſenſe of the merchants reſident in their ſeveral diſtricts on the following propoſitions:

1. Whether it would beſt anſwer the purpoſes of commerce, totally to aboliſh all fees paid to the officers of the cuſtoms, and replace their emoluments by a duty of nine-pence a ton on all veſſels clearing outwards?

2 To aboliſh fees, except thoſe on imports, and to replace their emoluments by a duty of five-pence a ton on each veſſel every voyage, with an exception to coaſting veſſels carrying lime, &c.?

3. Or whether it would be better to retain the fees, after having them regulated by act of parliament, to prevent demurs and abuſes of every kind?

4. What hours of attendance would beſt ſuit the purpoſes of commerce?

A bill framed according to the plans of the chancellor of the exchequer, attending as cloſe as poſſible to the opinions of the merchants collectively, is intended to be immediately framed, and brought into parliament at the commencement of the next ſeſſion.

By the lateſt letters from France, the odious edict of the new impoſts is every were held in abhorrence. The baniſhment of the parliament has increaſed to popular diſcontent. When the two royal brothers came to compel the regiſtering of the edict for the ſtamp-duty and land tax, there was a great diſturbance at the Palais Royal, or Court of Juſtice. A ſpy, attempting to ſecure a gentleman for ſome free language on the occaſion, was literally trodden to death. The guards were called to arms, and a general confuſion took place, in which many were wounded, and, it is ſaid, ſome killed. The general cry was, Vive Monſieur! (the king's next brother) and A bas (or down) Artois! The former is the favorite of the people; the latter has incurred their diſpleaſure by the high language he held in the aſſembly of notables.

Sept. 3. On the night between the 14th and 15th ult. the body guards at Paris, carried to each member of the parliament a letter of exile, of which the following is a copy:

"SIR,

"I SEND you this letter to order you to leave this day my good city of Paris, to betake yourſelf to that of Troyes; forbidding you to go out of your houſe before your departure, under penalty of diſobedience. On which I pray God, that he may have you in his holy guard.

Written at Paris this 15th day of Auguſt 1787.

(Signed) LOUIS.

And below; LE BARON DE BRETEUIL.

On the 17th, Monſieur (the King's brother) repaired to the chamber of accounts, and there cauſed to be regiſtered, the edict of the ſtamps, and the declaration of the territorial ſubſidy (land tax.)

When the Prince retired, the chamber, that remained ſitting, annulled the regiſter, and agreed to ſupplicate the King to recall the parliament and to convoke the ſtates general.

On the ſame day, the count d'Artois went to the court of Aides, to do what Monſieur had done at the chamber of accounts.

The court met the following day, and made an arret, in which they affirm, among other declarations, that "the King has not the right of impoſing taxes, that the beds of juſtice, held in a manner contrary to their inſtitution, are merely the afflicting diſplay of arbitrary power—that a nation which furniſhes 600,000 000 livres of revenue ſhould be exempt from all fiſcal juriſdictions; and that it was not after five years of peace, and what the government had announced in the poſitive terms, that they could admit the neceſſity of freſh impoſts."

Sept. 4. It was yeſterday currently reported, that the Stadtholder's party had ſent to the Pruſſian troops, requeſting them not to interfere in the diſpute.

Extract of a letter from Rotterdam, Aug. 31.

"We juſt now are informed, that the Prince's troops are attacking the city of Utrecht.

"The whole of the Pruſſian troops will be on the territories of Guelderland within three or four days, and a manifeſto will be publiſhed by the duke of Brunſwick, declaring that ſuch burghers as may be found in arms, or uſing any reſiſtance againſt his troops, and falling into their hands, will not be treated as ordinary priſoners of war, but will be immediately hung as rebels.

"The French ambaſſador has left the Hague, in order, as ſome ſuppoſe, to avoid the further application of the patriots for the French aſſiſtance, as alſo not to be in danger of their inſults in not having procured them all the fine things that were promiſed.

"The long reign of that party ſeems near its exit."

Sept. 5. Some diſpatches, ſaid to be of the laſt importance, were received at Whitehall yeſterday evening from the Engliſh miniſter at Bruſſels; but the contents are not known. It is more than probable ſomething may tranſpire this day of the particulars. We learn, however, that the count de Murray, the Emperor's captain general and commander in chief of the Low Countries, had ſent back by the ſame courier (who brought the Emperor's inſtructions) to Vienna, acquainting that the preſent force in Auſtrian Flanders, is by no means adequate to the taſk of carrying his Majeſty's orders into execution, conſidering the ſpirit of the people, who are more than ever bent on oppoſition, continue ſtill in arms, and in defiance of the new edict making a military parade.

A variety of reports are again in circulation. On the one hand, it is aſſerted by the advocates for war in the Low Countries, that the prince of Orange has formally ſet down before Utrecht, with an army of his own followers, and the Pruſſian auxiliaries; while, on the other hand, it is ſaid, perhaps, with more appearance of truth, that the ſtates-general had ſent a ſpecial meſſenger to his ſerene highneſs the ſtadtholder at Nimeguen, adviſing him, that the French party are giving way; that the States of Holland were returning to their ſenſes, and that it was hoped, from the meſſages which were paſſing between the two aſſemblies, viz. the States General and the States of Holland, both of whom were ſitting on the 24th ult. at the Hague, that a plan of accommodation is ſeriouſly agitating, and that without the mediation of any foreign power whatever. The equeſtrian order of nobles, who have proved firm on a late occaſion, are ſaid to be one principal means of ſuch happy events as are now expected to take place.

A few days ago the marquis Ximenes d'Aragon, a nobleman of Florence, was apprehended, on a warrant of lord Sydney, at the inſtance of the Florentine envoy, and carried to Dover, from whence he was embarked for Calais.

There was ſomething very ſingular in the circumſtances and the behaviour of this gentleman. He left his native country in order to avoid a marriage, which his relations wiſhed to force upon him, and came without money or friends to London, where he ſubſiſted entirely by the care of the envoy.

His excellency, however, took the firſt opportunity of ſeizing him, and ſending him back.

Extract of a letter from Paris, Auguſt 29.

"By a memorial of Mr. Seguirand, biſhop of Nevers, made by order of Mr. De Brienne, they pretend to have found out a method of rendering the receipt and expences equal, and to make up the deficiency without either loan or any taxes. We ſhall ſee if the event anſwers this expectation."

Extract of a letter from the Hague, by expreſs, dated Auguſt 29.

"The States General and the States of Holland, who have been divided for ſome days paſt, have at length commenced again a friendly correſpondence, on the ſubject of putting an immediate ſtop to the troubles which begin to be ſmartly felt in every corner of the States General. The marquis de Verac is gone home, and it is ſaid the count de Malleboís ſpeedily follows. The States of Holland continue violently to oppoſe the mediation of England—and what they eſteem more diſgraceful, the mandates of Pruſſia. The other party as violently oppoſe the interference of France, ſo that it is probable they muſt ſettle their own differences. A few moderate men are coming forward, among whom is the count Heicke, who are expected to have weight with the leading men on both ſides, and from whence we look for ſome good at leaſt."

Extract of a letter from Bruſſels, Aug. 28.

"The preſent ſituation of this town and country is the moſt alarming, and gives us the greateſt uneaſineſs. I have not a quarter of an hour's peace at preſent. We are at the criſis of a general revolution! The emperor will have his edicts put in execution by force, if not poſſible otherwiſe. The ſtates received a letter yeſterday the moſt arbitrary and menacing. The ſubſtituted governor ordered the encamped troops to enter the gates. We apprehended they would enter by ſtorm laſt night.—Nobody went to reſt, expecting this abominable event. The burgeſſes and volunteers being ready to oppoſe them if they attempted to put in execution the orders of their arbitrary maſter; ſo that every moment we expected to ſee the town in a bloody condition, the people put to the ſword, or to be ſet on fire in all quarters by the deſperate inhabitants. Such is the reſolution of the people; rather to die than to give themſelves up to perpetual ſlavery. I will try if I can fly with our friend D. and our children into ſome little town in France, till you will be able to fetch and join us. It is now clear the emperor will not give up the execution of his orders and edicts, and the ſtates are reſolved on their ſide to defend their rights at the expence of their blood and fortunes.

"The burgeſſes and volunteers have kept good order till this moment, but this cannot be of any long duration. They are guarding and patrolling night and day, many hundreds. Alſo at Lovain, Ghent, Antwerp and Namur; at the laſt place we learn, that they have ſeized the powder magazines, killed ſome ſoldiers, and three Imperial officers of the garriſon; ſo if they continue in this manner, this country will ſoon be the theatre of horror. There is not a peaſant to be found at his plough, and all our journeymen have left their buſineſs to take up arms to defend their country, wives and children! Judge, my dear friend, what a ſituation I am in."

The quarrel between the king of France and his parliament, indicates that Liberty will ſoon have another feather in her cap.

Sept. 6. An expreſs arrived yeſterday afternoon from France, which, it is ſaid contained ſome important intelligence from the Eaſt-Indies. It was likewiſe aſſerted, that the commotions in France had riſen to an alarming height, and that the archbiſhop of Toloule had been appointed prime miniſter; in conſequence of which all the other miniſters of ſtate reſigned; and that when the expreſs came away, their ſucceſſors were not fixed upon.

There was a report on Monday, that diſpatches had arrived over land from India, which occaſioned ſome buſtle at both ends of the town. The ſubject of them was ſaid to be, that a French veſſel, ſuſpected of carrying on ſome illicit traffick in the river Huſſey, and refuſing to be brought too, in paſſing the fort at Calcutta had been fired at out of pique by lord Cornwallis, and unfortunately ſunk; Cornwallis's malice was particularly levelled againſt the maſter of this veſſel, who was an officer in the French navy laſt war, and was witneſs to his lordſhip's diſgraceful ſurrender of York-town in America.

The following is ſaid to be the ſubſtance of the French King's anſwer to the Court of Aids.

It is not the buſineſs of my courts of juſtice to demand of me a convocation of the ſtates general, it belongs to me alone to judge whether circumſtances require it, and I have determined in my own mind, that it is not neceſſary; you ſhould not therefore have renewed your inſolent demand. I have done more for my people than you required; I have granted them provincial aſſemblies, which are moſt competent to make known the wants and wiſhes of the whole kingdom, and I ſhall never oppoſe whatever their wants may require.

I have transferred my parliament to Troyes from Paris, where that aſſembly had excited a ferment among the people, which their preſence would only ſerve to foment and to increaſe. I ſhall judge when the proper time is come for its reſtoration. My principal object has ever been to know the truth. It was my duty to inſiſt upon my full power to have my edicts regiſtered.—If there were any inconveniencies in the execution of them, my parliament was wrong in not making me acquainted with them.

I ſhall receive with pleaſure, your remarks and your ſupplications. You may expect every thing from my juſtice and regard for my people—But you ought to conſider the whole combination of circumſtances; and that I am under the neceſſity of purſuing whatever meaſures will but enable me to preſerve fidelity in my engagements.

The court of aids being aſſembled on Monday, decreed ſome further ſupplications to be preſented to his majeſty.

Extract of a letter from Wezel, Aug. 18.

"Preparations for war are making with all poſſible expedition.—It is with difficulty that the inhabitants can paſs the ſtreets of this city on their ordinary buſineſs, on account of the great numbers of cannon and ammunition waggons which obſtruct the paſſages.—Several regiments are already arrived, and others are on their march to this place.

"The magazine of proviſions at Kalkor is plentifully furniſhed, and the commiſſaries continue to purchaſe oats, hay and ſtraw, at high prices.—The 7th inſtant, the firſt detachment of heavy artillery arrived here."

AMERICA.

KINGSTON, (Jamaica) Sept. 12.

The ſloop Porgey and cargo, ſeized by the officers of his majeſty's cuſtoms, and condemned in the ſupreme court, has proved no inconſiderable prize to thoſe gentlemen. The cargo, which conſiſted principally of gin, was ſold on Monday, at about fifty ſhillings per caſe.

ST. JOHN's, (Antigua) Auguſt 24.

Yeſterday afternoon the ſky wore the ſame unſettled and threatning aſpect it did about this time two years, when we had a ſevere gale of wind: towards evening it blew hard, and continued ſo to do until midnight. It is very probable that ſome of our neighbours have ſuffered: The weather is not yet cleared up with us.

NASSAU, (N. P.) Sept. 8.

Since the publication of our laſt paper, very diſtreſſing accounts of the effects of the gale of the 27th ult. have been received from windward.—On Great Exuma, much damage has been done to the buildings and crops; and we are ſorry to add, that ſeveral lives have been loſt. Wiſhing to avoid every poſſibility of error in our ſtatement of theſe melancholy events, we ſhall confine ourſelves to what is given us from unqueſtionable authority.

A ſmall ſchooner belonging to lieutenant colonel Brown, on board of which were, beſides the crew, the colonel and Mr. Charles Taylor, bound from this port for Exuma, was daſhed to pieces on a rock called Galleotte, about eight leagues weſt of Great Exuma. The colonel, Mr. Taylor, and the crew, (except one negro man, who was drowned) with great difficulty gained the ſhore, where they remained till the 30th in the greateſt diſtreſs; being without fire, or any other ſuſtenance than the palmetto cabbage and ſalt water. Captain Harris, in the ſchooner Tyger, of this port, falling in with them on the 30th, took them on board, and landed them here laſt Saturday night.

The ſloop Nonpareil, belonging to capt. Charles Dames, was overſet near Pigeon-Key, oppoſite Little Exuma, whereby Mr. Henzie, ſhip carpenter, and nine negro men, loſt their lives.

The ſchooner Sarah, captain Peter Brown, has been ſeen bottom upwards; and every perſon on board, four in number, are ſuppoſed to have periſhed.

The ſhip Roſeway, Williams, lying in Exuma harbour, by having her maſts cut away, was enabled to ride out the ſtorm.

September 15.

Long-Iſland has ſhared in the diſtreſs occaſioned by the late gale, but to what extent we are not informed. The injury done to the cotton plantations in Exuma is found to be trifling, compared to what it was firſt eſtimated at.

The ſloop Cato, John Watts, maſter, from New York for Martha-Brae in Jamaica, laden with Indian corn, flour and lumber, was, on the night of the 4th of Auguſt, in a heavy gale, wrecked on the Grand Caicos Reef.—The veſſel and cargo are loſt—the crew, after being 31 days on a deſert iſland, were taken on board by one of our wreckers, and brought to this port the 12th inſtant.

A large French ſhip, name unknown, homeward bound, was caſt away ſome time in laſt month, on the Hogſties—the crew, it is ſuppoſed, after getting aſhore on the keys, have been taken off by ſome veſſel, and carried to St. Domingo.

The ſchooner Scorpion, Darvell, of this port, was caſt away the 27th ult. at Heneaga.—The crew are ſaved, but the veſſel is entirely loſt.

Extract of a letter from London to a gentleman in Bermuda, dated April 13.

"Yeſterday it was determined in council, that no free-port is to be eſtabliſhed in your iſland, but that one ſhall be in the Bahamas. Colonel Hamilton, late lieutenant-governor of Quebec, is appointed lieutenant-governor of your iſland: We have long had an intimacy with him, and have the pleaſure to aſſure you that he is one of the moſt amiable men living; it is not yet determined when he is to go out."

Sept. 29. On Thurſday was determined in the Court of Vice-Admiralty, a cauſe that has been the principal ſubject of converſation here for the laſt fortnight.—The parties were, the King againſt the Brigantine Eliza, Macneal, which arrived here from Georgia on the 9th inſtant.—The caſe was argued on Monday, when the counſel for both parties, Mr. Johnſton for the crown, and Mr. Hepburn for the claimant, diſplayed much ability an ingenuity.—We will not attempt to follow them through the mazes of abſtract reaſoning and legal diſquiſition, but content ourſelves with mentioning, that on Thurſday Mr. Yonge, the judge ſurrogate, after entering largely into the buſineſs, ſaid, that under the circumſtances in which the veſſel appeared to be, Mr. Dryſdale had done his duty as an attentive, vigilent officer in ſeizing her—that the letter of the law was clearly againſt her, but that he would decide agreeably to the ſpirit of it, and therefore acquit her.—The counſel for the libellants then gave notice that he would appeal.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 26.

A gentleman from Berkſhire informs, that one night laſt week a number of the diſaffected party paſſed along the ſtreet in Great Barrington, huzzaing for Shays, and threatened to releaſe the priſoners. The people of the town immediately aſſembled, but the party of inſurgents eſcaped.

The inhabitants of Berkſhire are ſtill apprehenſive of danger, from the dregs of the expiring faction, and place great confidence in the hope that the adoption of the Federal Conſtitution will give a check to their tumults and diſorders, by giving energy to meaſures adopted for the ſuppreſſion of inſurrections in the different ſtates.

CHARLESTON, October 4.

By a gentleman recently arrived from Auguſta, we are informed, that the ſavages had advanced in great force within 14 miles of Galphinton, where they had killed and ſcalped ſeveral perſons. A girl was bro't to Auguſta that had been ſhot in three places and ſcalped; notwithſtanding which it was expected ſhe would recover.

We learn from Tugaloo, that ſeveral women and children waſhing at a houſe near the river, on the Georgia ſide, were lately ſurpriſed by a party of Indians, who killed one child and took two women priſoners; the reſt made their eſcape and alarmed the neighbourhood, which prevented any further miſchief.

It is reported, that about three week ago 35 young men of the Cherokees, ſet out with an intention of joining the Creeks againſt the white people, but were purſued by order of their chiefs, diſarmed and obliged to return.

In conſequence of a letter ſent by General Pickens to His Excellency the Governor, an extraordinary meeting was held of the council, who agreed to ſend the General 300 weight of powder, with permiſſion to raiſe a volunteer company for the defence of this ſtate.

Philadelphia, Oct. 31.

The expedition with which the building intended for the uſe of the Philoſophical Society has been carried on, is worthy the notice of the public, as it reflects high merit on the artiſts employed. The brick work was compleatly raiſed from the cellars by Mr. Richard Johnſton in 25 days, commencing the 3d of October; and the floors were laid and the roof was raiſed by Meſſrs. David Evans and William Roberts in 30 days from the commencement of the brick work—a time remarkably ſhort, conſidering the excellency of the work and the dimentions of the building, which are 70 by 50 feet, and 30 feet high.

For the New-York JOURNAL.

The Liberty of the Preſs is eſſential to the ſecurity of Freedom in a ſtate; it is not therefore to be reſtrained in this Commonwealth. Maſſachuſetts Cons.

Mr. GREENLEAF,

THE truth of the above ſentence is univerſally acknowledged and one ſimilar to it has been adopted by every ſtate in North-America—How aſtoniſhing then is it, that the printers in this very ſtate (Maſſachuſetts) ſhould reverſe the important doctrine of the freedom of the preſs!

By looking over ſeveral late Boſton papers I diſcovered acknowledgments of the receipt of pieces on the new conſtitution, refuſing them a place, unleſs "the writers will hand their names to the public!" adding, "aiming thereby to be juſt!" that they will not give them place upon any other conditions!—What an aſtoniſhing kind of juſtice is this!—Americans have ever been taught, that juſtice and freedom went hand in hand—but now, if we may believe the immaculate Boſton printers, ſlavery muſt take place of the latter—that the Americans may be happy!—It is well known, that the greateſt ſecurity of an abſolute government is, "the ignorance of the people." Tremble for your dear bought Freedom ye Americans, at the introduction of this firſt trait of ſlavery into your country!—The printers of a free community are an important ſet of men—and when they league to enſlave it—it will be enſlaved indeed. DETECTOR.

SHIP NEWS.

The brig Sally, Simpſon, from North-Carolina, met with a violent hurricane off the eaſt end of Hiſpaniola; after which, ſpoke a ſhip from the Havanna, who informed that the ſhip Nancy, from Jamaica bound to London, had been diſmaſted, and put into the Havanna to refit.

On Saturday the 6th inſtant, arrived at Urbanna the ſhip Rappahannock, Capt. Baker, nine weeks from L'Orient: on the 7th the ſhip Succeſs, Flin, from Whitehaven, ſeven weeks.—The Eſſex and Samuel was ſpoke by a Rappahannock pilot (bound up the bay) about the 2d inſtant.—The Philadelphia Packet, Capt. Benges, arrived at Urbanna the 8th inſtant.

Extract of a letter from Naſſau, dated Oct. 6.

"On the 14th of September the ſchooner Dolphin, Sweeting, of this port, fell in with the brig Diſpatch, Dodds, wrecked on the Martyrs. The Diſpatch was bound from Kingſton, for Philadelphia, in ballaſt.—Capt. Sweeting, and Capt. M'Cann, of the Naſſau, ſaved all the rigging, ſails, &c. The maſter and three of the crew arrived here on Wedneſday in the Dolphin; the others, ſix in number, were taken up by an American ſloop, Barry maſter, bound for New-York."

The Ceractacus, Sewall from Charleſton, South-Carolina, bound for France, laden with rice, chiefly, and ſome indigo, was captured within 30 leagues of her deſtination, by a ſtout bark, mounting 22 guns, under Spaniſh colours, which proved an Algerine corſair, commanded and moſtly manned by renegadoes. After having rummaged the veſſel, and taken out what part the cargo they choſe, they ſuffered the ſhip to proceed on her voyage.

The LAMENTATIONS of ALPIN.

RINO.

THE wind and beating rain are paſs'd away;
All mild and tranquil is the noon of day;
The ſun with potent rays the cloud divides,
And o'er the verdant hill inconſtant glides;
The hill-ſtream murm'ring down in tuneful ſtrains
Along the ſtony valley loud complains.

O! ſtream, thy tuneful murmurs ſooth my ear,
Yet equal not the matchleſs ſtrains I hear;
'Tis Alpin's voice melodious fills the gales,
He mourns the dead along the ſounding vales,
His head he bows with age, though once on high,
And red with weeping is his tearful eye.
Thou ſon of ſong ſublime, why thus alone,
Along the ſilent grove doſt vent thy moan?
As hollow winds are heard in mournful ſtrain
Along the bending foreſt to complain,
Or as the broken billows murm'ring roar,
Reſounding on the ſolitary ſhore?

ALPIN.

I mourn, O Rino! the departed brave,
The great inhabitant of yonder grave;
And thou, tho' ſtately ſize and youthful grace
Declare thee firſt of all thy comely race,
Yet thou with Morar ſhalt recline thy head,
And ſtreams of ſorrow round thy grave be ſhed.

Thy ſwiftneſs, Morar, paſs'd the mountain roe,
Bright as a meteor did thine armour glow,
Thy ſword in fight ſhed lightning on thy foes,
When like December's ſtorm thine anger roſe;
Thy voice like ſounding torrents aw'd the croud,
Like diſtant thunder o'er the mountains loud!

But when return'd from war, how calm thy mien,
Thy peaceful brow how tranquil and ſerene!
As after rain the ſun's mild radiance bright,
Or placid moon in ſilent ſhades of night;
Calm as the lake when raging billows ſleep,
Nor gentle breezes curl the ſhining deep.

Now dark and narrow is thy dwelling there,
Four moſſy ſtones thy ſole memorial are;
An ancient tree, whoſe wonted foliage fails,
And graſs that whiſtles in the ſilent gales,
Mark to the weary wand'ring hunter's eyes
The manſion where the mighty Morar lies!

Deep is his ſleep whoſe mortal life is fled,
And low the pillow of the valiant dead!
No more the human voice ſhall charm his ear,
No more he joys the waking call to hear;
In his dark dwelling when will morning break,
To bid the ſilent ſlumberer awake?

Thy aged ſire, diſconſolate, alone,
Weeps o'er the grave of thee his only ſon!
None elſe remain of all thy kindred dear,
Nor ſon haſt thou to pay the filial tear;
Yet ſhall the grateful ſong prolong thy fame,
And future ages learn thy mighty name.
